To sanctify is an individual work; it is a cleansing, washing, and purifying process, without which no one can see God. It is ourselves that are naturally very unclean—it is the old man, with his garments all stained, and full of spots and wrinkles, that must be washed, and made clean and white. It is the sanctifying influence that must do the work. It may take the old man a long time to put himself under the washing influence; he loves to live in the world, with all its worldly pleasures and enjoyments; the enticements and allurements of the destroyer are so great, that it appears that very few are cognizant of the danger. It is true, however, some may start earlier than others; but when once the person feels the necessity for a change in life, and meets with a change of mind, a change of purpose, a change from one state to another, to leave his old associates in in filth and the vices and sins of the world, and begins to render service to him who only hath the words of eternal life, we call that conversion; and every person so converted, will then receive his first blessing from God, for God does love his laborers, his soldiers, and from that time on they may be blessed of God every day, henceforth, as long as they labor for, and are true and faithful to their Master.

Conversion is not sanctification; it is merely a change of purpose, to forsake and leave one party, and to begin and render service to another: and whenever a person meets with a change of mind, he then begins to obey God's will. (1 Thess. 4: 3). "For this is the will of God, even your sanctification." Then conversion has done its work, and then the sanctifying work commences, if the person is obedient, and will abide God's plan, and put himself under the influence of the word of God.

To sanctify is a work of cleansing, (1 Thess. 4: 7) "For God hath not called us unto uncleanness, but unto holiness." (2 Cor. 7: 1) "Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God." The reason that so many do not enjoy th blessings of God, is because they stop at conversion; they make no progress in the divine commandments, and hence we find a weakly class of converts, never feeling right, not much blessed of God, ever holding on to the world with a death-like grasp with one hand, as if they really meant to take it with them into the better land, whilst the tempter is flattering them that they are all right, that they may participate at elections, fairs, donation parties, picnics, festivals or any other place of worldly enjoyments, which things are all of the world, thus ever seeking worldly pleasure, which things are all spots on their garments, and thus many linger along without being much blessed, and many, if a storm should arise and cross their path, are carried away like chaff before the wind, having but a small portion of the armor of God on.

But to sanctify is to make clean, and to make clean is through God's truth; his word is truth. It is to cleanse and to set apart, to take out of the world, to purify, to make clean for divine use, that they might be made clean vessels for the Master's use. (John 15: 3.) "Now ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you." It is his whole word which is truth, and it is the obeying of that word in every jot and tittle; whether it is to do, or not to do, that must be obeyed, in order to sanctify.

It may be said that to believe in present truth will sanctify, but to disbelieve in present truth is not uncleanness, it is not a spot in our characters; but to sanctify is to wash, to cleanse from uncleanness, to take all spots out of our garments. It may be one thing, or it may be another that causes those spots; the person may not have all on the altar, or may not have the whole armor of God on.

But if it was the preaching of present truth by Noah that only saved eight persons, and also the preaching of present truth by Lot that only saved three persons, and that only about the same proportion of the people of this generation will be saved by preaching the second advent of Christ at hand, had we not better seek something else then present truth, to sanctify, that peradventure more might be saved? But God says they were destroyed on account of their uncleanness, (wickedness.) Had we not better stop sinning, and be made clean? And then present truth would have an abiding place in our affections, and would not be rejected by so many.

But sanctification implies to be wholly sanctified, to be made pure, clean and white, as we may discover by looking through the prophetic glass into the next world (age), where we hear it said, "The marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready, and to her was granted that she should be arrayed in fine linen, clean and white." (Rev. 19: 7, 8.) And these described here as being arrayed, clean and white, were made so here by and through God's sanctifying plan, which is contained in his word, and his word must be obeyed, that we become as little children, innocent, sinless, and harmless; and when the fruits of those three words are developed in a person, I believe according to the word of God, they are fit subjects for God's kingdom.

We have set forth a beautiful figure in Eph. 5, of Christ and his church, under the similitude of husband and wife: read it from verse 21 to end of chapter: we quote 26, 27, as pertaining to sanctification, "That he might sanctify and [illegible] se it [the church] with the washing of water, by the word, that he might [illegible] sent it to himself a glorious [illegible], not having spot or wrinkle or any [illegible] thing, but that it should be holy and without blemish." Here we have [illegible] figure of speech, showing wh[illegible] sanctify" means. It explains [illegible] the process of cleansing [illegible] washing of water, that all [illegible] wrinkles may be washed out [illegible] garments, and the person mad[illegible] and without blemish.

I have thus far traced the word of God, in reference to sanctification, it being God's mode and language in conveying to our minds our sinfulness, (uncleanness.) We must stop transgressing God's law, and forsake all appearance of evil (sin), and receive the washing away of our uncleanness. All sin is of the world, and the least sin is uncleanness, and the breaking off of committing sin of any and every kind, is the washing of ourselves from uncleanness; then it may be said that the person is wholly sanctified, and a vessel prepared unto holiness; then and not till then has sanctification been completed.

Hence how important the Saviour's saying that his followers were "not of the world," and the exhortation of St. Paul, in the 12th chapter of Romans, that we should not be "conformed to the world," and also that saying of James in the 4th chapter, that "whosoever will be the friend to the world is the enemy of God?" But what is it to come out from the world? Jesus prays the Father to keep them from the evil (sin); then it is meant that the true disciples of Jesus, should not participate or fellowship with the world in any worldly things, which are forbidden: and if forbidden, then they are sin and uncleanness, which things the true follower of Jesus cannot indulge in. St. Paul in speaking in 1 Thess. 4, does not attribute guilt to any of the brethren of those things mentioned in said chapter, but only exhorts them not to be guilty as were the Gentiles, because to be guilty of those things was not in harmony with the will of God, even our sanctification, that to be guilty was uncleanness, unto which God hath not called us, but unto holiness.

To sanctify is the fulfilling and obeying of God's word, to "love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and to love thy neighbor as thyself," which is the great vibrating element in the washing; and if the convert will immediately put himself under its influence, they would soon lose the love of the things of this world, and rejoice in the happy results, thereby producing a very short space of time between conversion and sanctification, which accounts for the difference in different persons in the time of attaining unto sanctification, or holiness; for we are required to be wholly sanctified—not only in part.

The decree has gone forth—it is God's word—that we must be sanctified, that we must be a washed and clean people, and that the way to fulfill and accomplish the decree is, that we must be a peculiar people; that we must not conform to the world; that we must be a separate people from the world; that we must not touch the unclean things of the world; that we must, Pilate like, wash our hands that no guilt may attach to us; and whenever we are clean, with no defilement nor guilt found upon our garments, then it may be said, that we are truly a sanctified people.

The space of time between conversion and sanctification is indefinite and unlimited, taking some longer than others, and some may never be wholly sanctified; and it cannot be said that a vessel is prepared unto holiness until it is made clean and white; and how much better a person may feel, to know that he is cleansed—having on a new and clean garment—they feel so nice, so much better than they did before in their uncleanness, rejoicing and praising the King of their salvation, shouting, "Thou art worthy, for thou hast redeemed us from our sins, by the shedding of thy blood. Oh, Saviour, strengthen us to overcome all temptations and the appearance of evil, and help us to possess our vessels in sanctification and honor. Oh, the unbounded love of God. Come to the pool and be washed. Jesus loves you, he stands ready now, and but a little while longer, to receive you; but he will not receive you as long as you touch the unclean thing; you must be clean every whit. Hear him say, "Father, I will that they also, whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am, that they may behold my glory, which thou hast given me; for thou lovest me before the foundation of the world; neither pray I for these alone, but them also which shall believe on me through their words.' Oh, Saviour, help us with a strong hand to overcome all sins of the world, and be faithful unto thee, to thy coming; and we will, as in duty bound, ever praise thy holy name.

The Church.--No. 5.

C. C. MARSTON.

The elder is to be "not given to wine," and is to be "temperate." (Titus 1: 7, 8.) There is a difference between abstaining from the use of intoxicating liquor as a beverage and being Scripturally temperate. Many are not drunkards and yet are intemperate. To be temperate in the Bible sense of the word is to abstain from the use of all that is hurtful, and be moderate in the use of that which is good. To indulge in any degree that which is sinful or injurious is to be intemperate. Hence the elder is required to be abstemious as to intoxicating drink and "temperate." No man is fit for this position unless he fills this description. We are living in an age of intemperance. The world is flooded with it. And if ever in the history of the church its leaders should imbibe and practice the strictest principles of temperance it is now. Dr. Cuyler says intemperance is making inroads into the church at an alarming extent. The example of the elder will have much to do in shaping the character of the church. If he is loose and indifferent as to the cause of temperance, the same spirit will be infused into the flock. Great care should be taken therefore in this matter in selecting one to be "overseer of the flock," that he is temperate.

The cause of temperance is the cause of God. The Bible is a temperance book. The church is a temperance institution; and no man is fit to be elder who is not a temperance man.

"No striker." Benson says on this: "Not of such a hasty temper as to have so little government of himself as to be ready to strike those who provoke him: or one that is apt to use violence to any one, but who does everything in a spirit of meekness, gentleness, long-suffering, and love." 2 Tim. 2: 24, seems to confirm this, "And the servant of the Lord must not strive; but be gentle to all men, apt to teach, patient; in meekness instructing those that oppose themselves." Hard arguments clothed in soft words always do the best execution. The man who is easily aggravated, and being aggravated becomes confused and loses control of himself is not a proper person for elder. His only success would be in keeping all the elements about him disturbed and in commotion continually. He would do well as a fighter, but be a poor excuse as a peace-maker.

With the great variety of talent and disposition that goes into the make-up of every local church, it is impossible for a "striker" to succeed as its spiritual ruler. The war element and spirit of combativeness so prominent in some men, and probably important in some instances, is not to be a distinguishing characteristic of the eldership in the church of God. "War" is not a very healthy element to live in. It is perhaps well enough occasionally to have a little war, but as a rule, peace is preferable. Some men are noted for war. They seem to be uneasy unless engaged in it. No peace is so permanent and genuine but they can destroy it and displace it with war. Such persons are not fit for the eldership. Better by far make choice of the "peace maker," though he may not be so tricky and keen as the warrior.

The incentive to faithfulness in this office is not to be the salary it brings to its incumbent. "Not greedy of filthy lucre." (1 Tim. 3: 3.) "Feed the flock of God, as much as in you is, (mar.) taking the oversight thereof; * * * not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind." (1 Pet. 5: 2.) The man who works for God for the sake of the money that it brings to his pocket abuses his office and is unworthy of any part or lot in the matter. Be careful not to select as elder a penurious or covetous man. He will be sure to think more of money than he does of God. Let the covetous ones be quiet. They are not fit to teach. Money is a curse to a man in proportion as it gets hold of his affections. Set not your affections on things in this world. The love of money and of worldly goods will make a man groveling and base, and in every way unfit him for the office of elder.

The elder must be "patient." Without this grace he will fail at every point. He will have all kinds of dispositions to contend with. He will be placed in circumstances the most perplexing and trying. Unless he is patient in such cases he will fail. It will not do to fret. He must hold still. Everything seems to be unrest and confusion all about him. The elements seem to be uncontrollable. If he is irritated and thrown off his guard in such a case the whole concern will go to smash. His only course is to keep cool and be patient. This faculty is a good recommendation to the office we are considering.

"One that ruleth well his own house, having his children in subjection with all gravity." A person is to be proven and tried before he has any right to this office. One of the ordeals of this trial is the correctness of his private family relations. "If a man know not how to rule his own house, how shall he take care of the church of God?" (1 Tim. 3: 5.) This is a sensible question, and should command the respectful attention of every church when making the choice of an elder. The principle involved is one taught all through the Scriptures. No important trust should be committed to any man until he has been tried. The ruler of "ten cities" in the world to come is the man who has been faithful in small things in this world.

He is not to be a "novice," for the very obvious reason that he is in danger of "being lifted up with pride." Generally speaking the elder should be a man of ripe experience and large observation in the working and needs of the church. In some cases it is necessary to appoint men of comparative youth in the cause to this office. But in this case they are to be proven first. Paul left Titus in Crete to "set things in order." Part of his work was to "ordain elders in every city." It is not wise to appoint elders over a newly converted band of believers at once. Let things rest a little. Give time for the development of the different talents. Then Titus can set things in order and appoint elders, and avoid the risk of appointing a novice or an undeveloped convert to this important position, and yet the person is comparatively young in the work.

"Moreover he must have a good report of them which are without." It is through the elder more than from any other person aside from the preacher that the church will be able to reach the unconverted part of the community. If he does not sustain a good character with the world his influence will be crippled and weak. If possible select a man that commands universal respect. "Holding fast the faithful word as he hath been taught, that he [illegible] be able by sound doctrine both [illegible] to convince the gainsa[illegible] are many unruly and [illegible] talk[illegible] and deceivers, especially [illegible]y of the circumcision: whose [illegible] must be stopped, who subver[illegible]hole houses, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre's sake." (Tit. 1: 9–11.) This is an important part of the elder's office. There are "deceivers," and "vain talkers," "whose mouths must be stopped." They will ruin the whole cause unless the elder has decision and pluck enough to put forth a firm veto at the proper time. "Gainsayers" are to be "convinced" and "exhorted." This can only be done by "sound doctrine." A man of unsound or suspicious views is not to be entrusted with the responsibilities of this office. He will not be able to discharge its obligations creditably either to himself or the society.

A brief summary of the Bible qualifications for the eldership will conclude this part of our essay. They are classified as negative and positive.

NEGATIVE QUALIFICATIONS.

1. Not given to wine.
2. No striker.
3. Not greedy of filthy lucre.
4. Not a brawler.
5. Not covetous.
6. Not a novice.
7. Not self-willed.
8. Not soon angry.
9. Not a lord over God's heritage.

POSITIVE QUALIFICATIONS.

1. He must be blameless.
2. The husband of one wife.
3. Vigilant.
4. Sober.
5. Of good behavior.
6. Given to hospitality.
7. Apt to teach.
8. Patient.
9. One that ruleth well his own house.
10. Of good report from without.
11. A lover of good men.
12. Holy.
13. Temperate.
14. Holding fast the faithful word. (1 Tim. 3: 1–7; Tit. 1: 5–11; 1 Pet. 5: 1–3.)

"Materialists."

J. S. WIMBISH.

A man said to me the other day, "Ah, I know what you are now, you are a materialist." Yes, I acknowledged to the materialistic leaning, but disconnected that word from the one so often associated with it by the airy theologians who have discarded the body—"the mortal coil"—and rested their hope of future life upon an intangible spirit form. That associated word is "sensualism," or "sensualist." Immaterialists have wedded these two words, and they think they are almost synonymous; and they often sneeringly remark that the doctrine of the Adventists is of sensual or carnal nature. That is, they claim for the doctrine the motto, "eat, drink and be merry, for to-morrow you die." If I properly understand the doctrine of the Adventist people they are far from sensuality or carnality in profession and practice. In fact, if Webster gives a correct definition of the word "materialist," they are far from materialism—although they, like sensible people, believe in individual organization as absolutely essential to personal enjoyment.

Webster says a materialist is one who denies the existence of spiritual substances. Now if I understand the doctrine of Adventism it is far from the adherents of that faith to deny the existence of spiritual substances. We consider substance to be either visible or invisible, and matter or material to be either perishable or imperishable corruptible or incorruptible. Does this confession make a materialist out of a man? if so, I for one want to be a materialist, for thereby I become a witness to the truth, that without identical, personal, separate, distinct individual organization man cannot be the possessor of sensual or spiritual comforts. He could not enjoy a reward or feel a punishment. If man is formed of perishable material (as every day's experience teaches), and as God is a spirit incorruptible, it is very evident that the denial of spiritual substances in man, or separate and distinct from man when the material part of man has lost his organism, does not constitute a denial of spiritual substances independent of man, such as angels, who are spiritually begotten, and are sons of God, without redemption from sin and death. These, and demons, exist independent of man, and if man had never been created the angel hosts would have been just as numerous as they now are.

Now would an angel, unbidden of God the Father, have left the presence of Jehovah to cheer with heavenly message our fallen race? To go unbidden would be treason. And no angel has ever made known his nature to man, and we are not instructed in the holy word in reference to them, but the story is of man. We know enough of angels to know they are spiritual substances, and have power to make themselves seen, or remain hidden from sight. But right here I might remark that I have often thought to accomplish the act of being seen by man the change was wrought in the vision of man and not in the angel.

So by searching the Scriptures we find that man does not possess a spiritual substance separate and distinct from the body, but the manifest evidence that he has a spirit at all is given to us while he lives and not after he is dead. Whi[illegible]e lives we say he has a spirit beca[illegible] we see the changing temper and the [illegible]k flashes of intellectual fire. An[illegible] hen he dies the spirit is as invisible [illegible]o man as the blaze of a lamp when blown from the wick. The lamp with all its parts, oil, stock, flue, and wick, is perfect, but the kindling blaze which gave the light is gone, and the utility of the lamp is suspended. If it were necessary I believe God could and would preserve the identity of every human spirit as the man dies; but I believe we have our names and deeds written in heaven, and God being a spirit, which nothing can take from or add to, absorbs our spirits again even as they were in his spirit before we ever existed. This is not Pantheism, but the true Christian faith. Our Saviour says, "Rejoice not that the spirits are subject unto you, but rejoice that your names are written in heaven." For it is very evident without this precaution we might all be lost, for the spirit returns to God who gave it and the dust to the earth. And it is evident God has written our lives and deeds done in the body that he may bring every work into judgment, whether it be good or evil. He is the great biographer, and has engraved Israel upon the palms of his hands. Not to convince the judge of an earthly court of the guilt or innocence of a man is a warrant issued against him, but that all things may be done decently and in order. Therefore God will condemn no man unheard, or reward one unworthy.

Now then, if Webster gives a correct definition of the great boog-a boo, "materialist," I don't think any Advent Christian is in danger of becoming materialist to hurt—that is of the Frenchy stripe. For we believe in substances of a spiritual order, and substances of a natural order. We believe in God, angels, devils, and men, and believe neither one a part of the other, except personally the Mediator, Christ, who is both God and man. We believe words may do very well in dictionaries, and are to convey an idea of their use to the senses, but when they become arbitrary and convey false ideas to the brain it were better to abandon that word and hunt up another. I don't like the arbitrary use of some words, and custom sometimes changes the meaning of many.

Materialism does not mean sensualism. All pleasures are not necessarily sensual or carnal because enjoyed in a material organism. All joy and happiness, in fact life itself, is dependent upon perfect material organism. Sentient rational beings can derive pleasure from immaterial sources, but an airy, intangible, imaginary ghost could draw pleasure from no source whatever, because it could find nothing so unreal as itself—more ghostly. May real blessings be showered upon the Advent Christian church in this life, and its members each and every one enjoy material pleasures evermore. Amen.

Faction and its Consequences.

N. FIELD.

The Advent church of God, at Jeffersonville, Indiana, was constituted by the writer of this article, on the 29th day of August, 1847, upon well defined principles of Christian liberty and equality. The following extract from the church record will show how we understood the subject of liberty and toleration. After declaring the Bible only to be our standard of faith and practice, we say: "We agree to guarantee to each other the right of private judgment, and the liberty of speech, and we are firmly and unalterably determined under all circumstances to sacredly and inviolably maintain these principles as indispensable to church union and Christian perfection. All efforts to restrain free thought and free speech with a view to unity of faith and practice, we regard as the spirit of Popery or a claim to infallibility.

"While we claim the right to think for ourselves and speak our sentiments, we cheerfully concede the same right to all others who may hereafter come into union and co-operation with us, subject, however, to good order and decorum. We consider the duty of all Christians to investigate the word of God, that they may arrive at a full and correct understanding of the will of God. We also agree to receive each other to fellowship without regard to differences of opinion, and to proscribe no one for differing from us in matters no way essential to salvation. We propose to make faith in Christ and obedience to his commands the conditions of fellowship, leaving the conscience free and untramelled."

On this broad and liberal platform, we flattered ourselves that every one coming into our church would be perfectly satisfied: and so it was for twenty years. No one complained that he was restrained in the slightest degree of his liberty to think for himself or express his opinions.

But notwithstanding these concessions and guarantees, a few persons got into the church, enamored with certain ultra views of one John Thomas, and after indoctrinating as many as they could, finally demanded that this extreme view should be made articles of faith and conditions of fellowship! They demanded that they be proclaimed from the pulpit as a part of the gospel of the kingdom, essential to a valid baptism!!

This extraordinary and unexpected movement was instigated by certain wire-workers from abroad, who succeeded in breaking up the old Indiana conference, which the writer, with two or three others, was instrumental in organizing in 1854. These same disorganizers made a strenuous effort to break up the church at Jeffersonville if their views were not adopted. But they signally failed—some eight or ten were induced by them to withdraw from the church and start a new church or a ekklesia, based upon Dr. Thomas' understanding of the gospel. Before they withdrew, I kindly warned them of the consequences of their factious conduct—that there would be no lasting union among the followers of Dr. Thomas, for the simple reason that he claimed to be infallible, and if they did not implicitly accept every new idea he might promulgate, he would reject them from his fellowship, and that of his party. And so it has turned out. "The Ekklesia" proved a rope of sand. In less than a month it was split into three parties; and to-day there is but one of them acknowledged to be sound in the faith by the successor of John Thomas. They have gone into the most frightful extremes, not, perhaps, a half a dozen of them agreeing in anything. Some have gone from a denial of the resurrection of the wicked, to the resurrection of all mankind from Adam to the close of time, and that too to probation in the ages to come! Some deny the divinity of Christ, some his pre-existence, some deny that there is any reality in the history of creation, that from Adam to Moses the record is all fiction—even Abraham was a fictitious character! The successor of John Thomas assumes and teaches that our blessed Saviour was born under condemnation, and had to do something for his own salvation, as well as that of sinners, some deny that there is any gospel to the Gentile, and that baptism and the Lord's supper was never intended for any body but the Jews, and that compliance with the conditions of the gospel only saved them from the Romans!!

As a specimen of the confusion of tongues, I herewith send you a circular from one of their leading scribes.

[We have been amused in reading the egotistic, error-inspired document, and if it were not too long we would insert it as a sample of light from a wandering star.—ED. TIMES.]

The Christian Life.

"I Press Toward the Mark."

Ah, tell me not of gold and treasure,
Of pomp and beauty here on earth!
There's not a thing that gives me pleasure
Of all the world displays for worth.
Each heart will love and seek its own:
My goal is Christ, and Christ alone!]

In Him I find mine exultation,
My fairest visions of delight;
I feed mine eyes, mine expectation,
On Him alone, my rest, my Light!
Each heart will seek and love its own:
My goal is Christ, and Christ alone!

The world and her pursuits will perish;
Her beauty's fading like a flower;
The brightest schemes the flesh can cherish
Are but the pastimes of an hour.
Each heart will seek and love its own:
My goal is Christ, and Christ alone!

Against this tower there's no prevailing:
His kingdom passes not away;
His throne abides, despite assailing,
From henceforth unto endless day.
Each heart will seek and love its own:
My goal is Christ, and Christ alone!

His riches are too vast to measure;
His countenance is as the sun;
Apart from him there's naught of treasure;
He is the Changeless Living One.
Each heart will seek and love its own:
My goal is Christ, and Christ alone!

However rough the road and dreary,
His glory marks me out a way;
How'er in need, distressed and weary,
His strength, His grace, are as my day.
Each heart will love an' seek its own:
My goal is Christ, and Christ alone!

And though a pilgrim I must wander,
Still absent from One I love,
He soon will have me with Him yonder,
His own eternal joy to prove.
Triumphantly I therefore own,
My goal is Christ, and Christ alone!

B.J.

Whom not having Seen, Ye Love.

We sometimes form a very strong attachment for earthly friends, whom yet we have never seen. We hear of their works; we read their words; we catch their spirit; and our interest in them is scarcely less than if we had seen them with these eyes. There are multitudes of holy men, living and dead, patriarchs, prophets, and apostles, and saints, for whom we cherish deep regard, for our souls have been trained and tuned to gratitude, submission, adoration and praise, by the sweet words in which their hearts have gushed and poured forth their rich devotions. Hence we feel as if we knew them. In fact we are scarcely less acquainted with them than if we had seen them.

Yet while we know them much, we have known Jesus more. The streams have been good; the fountain incomparably better. We have gone to them for instruction, but to Jesus more, and for many other things than mere instruction. Their example has been valuable; that of Jesus has been priceless. Their sympathy—but we can not begin to put it in comparison with that of him who can be touched by the feeling of our infirmities, and who was tempted in all points like as we are; whose infinite heart goes to the bottom of the deepest sorrows of every one of his countless children of every nation down through all ages. And then, to crown all, Jesus gave himself for us by a death of self-sacrifice and agony. He took our place before and underneath the lifted sword of justice. We have not seen him; but we have seen and felt the proofs of his unutterable love for us. We see such grace and such goodness and self-devotion to our race, such unsurpassed moral excellence, we can not but admire, love and adore him. No matter whether we have seen him, we can love and adore him as if there were nothing else to be adored on earth or in heaven.

Though our mortal eyes have not beheld him, yet he has not left himself without witness in our hearts. His Spirit is commissioned to take the things of God and show them to us. Perhaps in such a world as ours this is as good as to see Jesus with our own eyes. In fact he told his disciples it was better. It was "expedient for them that he should go away" and give scope for the Comforter to come. This great Divine Teacher knows how to put our hearts in a right position to see Jesus. He can give us the standpoint of facile and impressive observation, whence his beauties shine most sweetly, and whence his qualities as a Saviour are revealed so impressively that we can not help seeing their wonderful adaptation to such sinners as ourselves. We have no reason to be dissatisfied with such visions of Jesus as we may have through the ministrations of his own commissioned and most competent teacher.

When we have well improved these means and methods of cultivating our love for Jesus, we shall go higher. Having loved him here, without the open vision of his glories, that open vision will be our ultimate reward. Just as it is precious to meet the friend whom we have loved without having seen on earth, so it will be most precious and blessed to see Jesus as he is. We shall know him then with a knowledge in which no imperfection can mingle, with a love which nothing can mar, with a fullness of soul which will leave nothing more or better to be desired. Soon, soon, the visions of that perfect glory will burst upon our waiting eyes and longing hearts. Come, Lord Jesus, in thine own best time.—Oberlin Evangelist.

Noon Sleeping.

The Herald of Health says that sleeping after dinner is a bad practice, and that ten minutes before dinner is worth more that an hour after. It rests and refreshes and prepares the system for vigorous digestion. If sleep be taken after dinner it should be in the sitting posture, as the horizontal position is unfavorable to healthful digestion. Let those who need rest and sleep during the day take it before dinner, instead of after, and they will soon find that they will feel better, and that the digestion will be improved thereby.

Two little girls were walking homeward one moonlight evening. I overheard one of them say, "Sister Annie, it don't make any difference how fast we walk, the moon keeps up with us every step of the way: it don't move at all, and yet it is always going along with us." So it is with the dear God in heaven; though he seems far away, he is keeping step with us always in the march of life.

Advent Christian Times.

WM. SHELDON, - EDITOR.

Give your Name, Postoffice, County and State every time you write.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, October 21, 1873.

Removal.

Our city office has been changed from 25 W. Lake st., to McCormick's Block, corner of Randolph and Dearborn, Room 97. There has, however, been no change in our office of publication. Hereafter let all letters to the Editor or Business Agent be directed to McCormick's Block, Chicago.

The street and number need not be given in writing, but we give it for the benefit of those who wish to find us.

CORRECTION.—BR. SHELDON: I observe a typographical error in my article published last week, which please correct. Where it reads "God's word is his positive," the printer makes it read position which destroys the sense.

E. ROYCE.

WE have received one pledge from England to apply on the debt, from Br. S. Horsecroft and wife. Br. H. writes: "I wish I was in circumstances to pay off, and set the office free, and so start off a fresh."

A fresh start is just what we want.

THE October number of the Rainbow has found its way to our office from over the ocean, and contains some excellent articles on the life and death theme. Dr. Leask is making inroads upon immaterialism in England and other portions of Europe.

COLD winter is coming on, and we here give a timely hint to the friends of Wisconsin, that before long we shall have to ask them to aid the Arena friends a trifle in making Eld. Thomson comfortable for the winter; and we trust they will deem it a pleasure to help when called upon.

"THE Nature and Duration of Future Punishment, by Constable, a neatly bound book of 330 pages, which we noticed last week, must not be confounded with a mere pamphlet of the same name, by the same author, which we are offering to new subscribers when called for. The book is $1.00 per copy. Postage 16 cents.

THE A. A. MISSION SOCIETY at its annual meeting, held on the Springfield camp ground, elected for the coming year the following officers:

President.—Miles Grant.

Vice Presidents.—S. Hall, N. W. Wait, C. S. Sherman, S. Ayres and Mrs. E. S. Jennings.

Secretary.—A. W. Sibley.

Treasurer.—G. T. Adams.

Auditor.—L. Boutell.

Executive Board.—J. Couch, H. A. King and L. T. Cunningham.

This society is doing good in the mission field, especially in the South.

DISCOVERIES in Asyria, and other localities are confirming the claims of the Bible, in spite of the skepticism of the day. The following item is taken from an exchange:

> The exploring expedition of the London Telegraph among the ruins of Asyria, is proving rich in discoveries. In his last letter, Mr. George Smith, who has charge of the expedition, give some accounts of what he found on the 17th of May. He says: "I rode into the Khan with my day's store of cuneiform fragments and took out the fragments one by one and brushed off the dirt with which they were thickly encrushed. On cleaning one of the fragments and reading its contents, to my astonishment it turned out to be the missing fragment of column I. of the account of the deluge, the fragment of all others which I most wished to find. I at once copied the precious piece for fear of accidents, and then packed it away for transport to England.

OBITUARY NOTICES are often too long, and it is a delicate matter to cut them down. Let all who have occasion to write them be as brief as possible.

Zions Advocate makes the following sensible remarks on the matter:

> Unless one has been in public life, and was extensively known, or there has been something remarkable in the history of the deceased, it is hardly appropriate to publish a long obituary notice for a paper which has not more than six, perhaps not more than two subscribers in the circle of his acquaintances. When we say of one, "he was a good man," or a "consistent Christian," and announce his age and the time of his death, we say all that is of the least general interest in more than one-half of the obituary notices which are written.

THE EVANGELICAL ALLIANCE meeting is in the past. No doubt it contained some commendable features, but whether it will really result in anything higher than a mere strengthening of fraternal feelings among those only whom they have decreed evangelical, and a fanning up of the flames of hostility against those deemed heretical, remains to be seen. They have no alliance with the repudiators of soul-immortality. Our own opinion is, that no alliance based on principles antagonistic to revealed truth can receive Divine sanction. An alliance with God and his truth, and all who believe and obey him, with no human proscriptions, is preferable.

"The Kingdom of Heaven."

Much is said in the Scriptures about the "kingdom of heaven," and the "kingdom of God"—not two different places, but two different names for one place. Matthew is the only writer who uses the first name, "The kingdom of heaven," the others preferring the other name, "The kingdom of God." Even when reporting the same discourses of Christ, one evangelist uses one form of expression, and the other uses the other form; so the two are identical in meaning. But when and where is the kingdom? While the several component parts of the kingdom—King, territory, and subjects—sometimes separately are referred to under the name of the combined whole, a part being put for the whole, yet the kingdom in its organized state is recognized as the final home of the saved ones, as in the following texts: "Except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven." (Matt. 5: 20.) "Except ye be converted....ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven." (Matt. 18: 3.) From these and similar texts it is evident that the kingdom is not a mere state, but a place where people are to dwell—a place for people to "enter into," even after having become righteous, or after having become members of Christ's church; so the church of Christ is not the kindom, except in the sense of being one of its component ingredients in its incipient stage—prospective subjects, now mortal—but the kingdom will include the subjects and King as occupants of some territory. In perusing the Scriptures of truth we learn the following facts concerning this kingdom:

1. Jesus preached it as a future kingdom, not as already in existence: "Jesus began to preach and to say, Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." (Matt. 4: 17.) Or as Mark records it: "The kingdom of God is at hand." (Mark 1: 15.) Not only was it future at the time he was personally on earth, but future after a long chain of events, covering a thousand years or more, should have been witnessed: "When ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand." (Luke 21: 31.) It was then fūture, and is still future: then "at hand," comparitively; now, emphatically.

2. Jesus taught us that it would be located on the earth: "Pray ye.... Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven." (Matt. 6: 9, 10.) So when this kingdom comes it will be located on the earth, agreeing with Gabriel's statement to Daniel: "But the saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom and possess the kingdom forever, even forever and ever.... And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him." (Dan. 7: 18, 27.)

3. Jesus taught us that the "kingdom of heaven" would be due at the Judgment day; for in sending out his disciples to reiterate his own proclamation, "The kingdom of heaven is at hand," he said; "Say unto them, The kingdom of God is come nigh unto you. But into whatsoever city ye enter, and they receive you not, go your ways out into the streets of the same, and say, Even the very dust of your city which cleaveth on us, we do wipe off against you: notwithstanding be ye sure of this, that the kingdom of God is nigh unto you. But I say unto you that it shall be more tolerable IN THAT DAY for Sodom than for that city." (Luke 10: 9, 12.) Here we are told when it shall be more tolerable for Sodom than for that city that should reject this message, namely, "IN THAT DAY" when the kingdom should come. But Matthew gives the following version of the commission: "And as ye go, preaching, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand..... And whosoever shall not receive you, nor hear your words, when ye depart out of that house or city shake off the dust of your feet. Verily I say unto you, it shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom and Gomorrah in the day of Judgment, than for that city." (Matt. 10: 7, 14, 15.) Thus it is seen that while Luke says it shall be more tolerable "in that day" when the kingdom comes, Matthew says it shall be more tolerable "in the day of Judgment;" so the day in which the kingdom of heaven shall come, is the very day in which the Judgment shall dawn. Thus the day which brings the Judgment, also brings the kingdom; and the day that brings the Judgment, likewise brings Christ from heaven, for he "shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom." (2 Tim. 4: 1.)

4. Jesus taught us that the kingdom of heaven should become the home of saints now dead, thus involving the resurrection, or change, as a prerequisite to an entrance into it: "And I say unto you, that many shall come from the east and west, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven. But the children of the kingdom shall be cast out into outer darkness." (Matt. 8: 11, 12.) "There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth, when ye shall see Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets in the kingdom of God, and you yourselves thrust out. And they shall come from the east, and from the west, and from the north, and from the south, and shall sit down in the kingdom of God." (Luke 13: 28, 29.)

Here Christ speaks of "the kingdom of heaven" as being the destined home of patriarchs and prophets, after its territory shall be dispossessed of its present occupants—a work due at the Judgment day. Literal, physical sinners will be disinherited, and resurrected saints will take the kingdom, to live there forever.

From the South.

> BR. SHELDON:—I desire you to give me some light on a certain subject, which I will state to you as clearly as I can. I am an Adventist: I do not believe in the dogma of immortal soulism, nor the eternal misery dogma. I believe that man is unconscious from death until the resurrection; but there is one thing about the death and resurrection of Christ which I do not understand. It is this: Christ was a divine being, (and I believe you hold that Christ was a divine being); what become of his divinity after he expired on the cross? did his divinity die? This is something that I cannot see through exactly.
>
> Will you please explain through the TIMES? If you will, it will very much oblige one that is seeking after truth.
>
> I am alone in the Advent faith in this community. I am a subscriber to the TIMES, and it is all the Advent preaching I hear. If I was able I would send you money enough to pay your way to this place, so you could come and preach a few sermons here. I could not expect you to pay your own way. Perhaps I will be able sometime; I will live in hope.
>
> I am glad that enough money has been pledged to pay the debt of the society; I was afraid that the paper would go into other hands.
>
> I saw in the paper a short time ago a request from Br. Cargile, of Alabama, for you to visit his portion of the country. Now, if you ever do go to Alabama, I want you to stop and see me. You are welcome at my house at any time. I live in Edgefield, Tenn.
>
> May God bless you. WM. P. BARR.

We have no hesitation in saying that, by a miracle wrought by the Father, in blending humanity and divinity, it was made possible for divinity to die; for (1) "Jesus was made a little lower than the angels [by his incarnation] FOR THE SUFFERING OF DEATH," (Heb. 2: 9,) which otherwise would have been impossible: that which is impossible without a miracle, can be made possible by a miracle; and (2) if this miraculous interposition had not made it possible for divinity to die, so far as it related to the incarnated Son of God, we should have been left with a mere human sacrifice; and then the query might justly arise, why might not the sacrifice of some other good human being have sufficed just as well as for the mere humanity of Christ to have died? And why all this talk about the death of Christ as something extraordinary, if after all only humanity died, which is only an ordinary event even in the line of sacrifice, as in the case of the numerous martyrs in the former and present dispensation?

When we come to explain the matter, there we fail; for no miracle of God can be explained except by attributing it to unlimited power, often too mysterious for comprehension, being grasped only by faith predicated upon testimony.

Since spending a part of two winters in different portions of the south, we have a living interest in that field, and may yet find our way there again; but can not now say when. We shall do what little we can to send truth into that portion of the great field, in a printed form, before long, and will remember Br. Barr among others. May the Lord help him to enlighten many in his locality on the unpopular truths of the Bible. Perhaps Br. Cargile will find time to visit Edgefield before long.

Mennonites Coming to America.

So much has been recently said by the secular papers concerning the removal of the Mennonites from Russia to America, that a curiosity is raised to know who they are, and why they are coming. Twenty or thirty thousand of them are expected to arrive within a few months, to find homes in America, where they hope to enjoy religious liberty, and be permitted to stand aloof from war, which they regard irreligious. They will probably settle in colonies, perhaps in some of the western states. An exchange gives the following statement concerning their origin and religion:

> The Mennonites are not a sect founded by the revered man whose name they bear. They are descended from the Waldenses, who in the latter part of the twelfth century fled from persecution into Flanders and the provinces of Holland and Zealand. In 1537 Menno Simons, a Romish priest, who had joined them from force of conviction through the study of the New Testament, became their leader and pastor and labored with such wise and self-sacrificing zeal that the Dutch "Anabaptists," as they were formerly called, gradually became known as the Mennonites. Their church government is very simple and independent, conformed to the Scripture example, as they understand it. They demand a profession of faith and evidence of conversion as prerequisites to church-membership. In so far as they have ceased to insist on immersion as the only true baptism, they have departed from their early practice and the explicit teaching of Menno. Like the Quakers, they are distinguished for their opposition to war. When the attempt of Frederick of Prussia was made to exact military service from them to or emigrate from his territories, Catherine II, of Russia, anxious to secure such a body of citizens, offered them each 120 acres of land in Southern Russia, together with liberty of worship and perpetual exemption from military service. By an edict of 1871, these special privileges are revoked, ten years being granted those unwilling to submit to all the laws, in which to leave the country.
>
> After that time, every citizen, without reference to religious convictions, will be required to perform seven years of army service. This is the explanation of the present movement of the Mennonites. It is to the dishonor of Russia that pretty obstacles are placed in the way of their departure. It is very difficult for them to obtain passports; and as the land they hold was not given them in fee simple, they must, on leaving the country, abandon, their farms and gardens, which will reduce many of them from affluence to poverty.

Lazarus and the Thief.

> BR. SHELDON:—Will you please give me the correct answer to the following question?
>
> What did the Saviour mean when he said to the thief, "to day thou shalt be with me in paradise?"
>
> Please give me the proper answer through the TIMES. Please explain also the quotations concerning the Rich Man and Lazarus. The orthodox say that Lazarus is in heaven.
>
> Please answer and oblige, yours in the blessed hope. J. W. BAKER.

He simply meant to give a reply to the thief's request, which was, "Lord remember me, when thou comest into thy kingdom." Jesus had previously uttered these words: "Hereafter shall ye see the son of man seated upon the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven." (Matt. 26: 64.) Jesus taught that he would "hereafter" come as a king. This prompted the dying penitent to plead for acceptance in that day—not when death should close the scene—but "when thou comest into thy kingdom," or paradise restored. The paradise or kingdom alluded to, stands connected with Christ's return from heaven. Jesus made the promise on the day of his crucifixion, despite the forbidding aspect, the surroundings indicating to human appearances that he never would have a kingdom; but that promise is to be fulfilled when he returns. Many ancient and modern critics insist that the comma should be placed after "today,"—"I say unto thee to day, thou shalt be with me in paradise"—when? Just when he requested to be remembered, when Christ returns to "judge the quick and the dead at his appearing, and his kingdom," in which kingdom paradise will bloom.

A fuller exposition of the case of Lazarus and the rich man than we have time to give here, will be found in our new work, entitled, "The Disembodied State Examined," &c. No allusion is made by the Saviour to a disembodied Lazarus, but simply to a "dead" Lazarus; so even if he is in heaven, he is dead. Not a word is said about the soul of Lazarus in the entire record, nor about heaven.

Episcopalian Trouble.

Two prominent Episcopalians who have been attending the Evangelical Alliance—the Dean of Canterbury, England, and Bishop Cummins, of Ky.—have given rise to quite an ecclesiastical trouble, by recently joining with the Presbyterians in their communion services in New York. They are accused by their fellow-churchmen of having violated the time-honored rules of their church, and have left the bars down for others to go in and out. The commotion produced by this act has called out the following letter from the Kentucky Bishop in defense of himself and the Dean:

> "I deny, most emphatically, that the Dean of Canterbury or myself has violated an ecclesiastical order of the Church of England or of the Protestant Episcopal Church in this country, or has been guilty of any act of open hostility to the discipline. There is nothing in the ecclesiastical order or discipline of the Church of England or of the Protestant Episcopal Church in this country forbidding such an act of intercommunion among Christian people who are one in faith and love, and one in Christ, their great Head. As far as I know, the liberal Episcopalians of New York, rejoice in the action of the Dean of Canterbury, and thank God for it. When the Episcopal Church of England and the United States has been able to clear herself (which may God in His infinate mercy soon grant) of the deadly evil of ritualism, whose last development is the revival of the confessional, then, and not till then, may she become a 'haven of rest' to maimed souls, who would rejoice to see her united in one common bond of organic unity to all Protestant Christendom."

Preperation for Preaching.

A correspondent asked the Editor of the Christian Advocate the following question:

"What warrant have I for postponing my entrance upon the regular work to attend school?"

The following reply was given:

The warrant of Christ, who for three years instructed his disciples before sending them forth. The warrant of common sense, which has created the school as a time-saving arrangement for reaching desired results. The warrant of all those of your brethren who have done the same before you, and are glad that they did. The warrant of all those of your brethren who did not pursue the course, and regret that they did not. The warrant of the laity, who are demanding a better trained ministry. The warrant of all the intelligent men whom the church has selected and appointed to conduct the educational institutions which she has created.

It is not true that Christ instructed his diciples three years before sending them out, nor does common sense decide that it is best to do nothing, even though God bids us work, till we are able to do what men will regard as a great work. Education is good as a help; but Christ at first chose more illiterate fishermen, than educated Paul's, and he has never yet repudiated that policy—and when men repudiate the policy which Christ endorsed, they are getting "wise in their own conceits," and put too high an estimate on the "knowledge that puffeth up."

When God calls an educated man, let him use his education to the glory of God, but when he calls an illiterate man, let him obey, and like Timothy "study" while teaching others, and thus gradually acquire such information as will directly help him in his work, as fast as possible; but when God bids you go into the field, never run away and hide in a college to get polished.

The Western Tract Fund.

This enterprise is now started, and we trust it will prove a success. Both donations and pledges are solicited for this fund—pledges to be paid within three or four months. This is one of the most important branches of our labor. The poorest can aid it a trifle, and the wealthy can do their share—any amount from a dime to a dollar, or a hundred dollars, can be used to advantage in this department. Those especially, who have not contributed to cancel the debt, can aid in this enterprise; and some will deem it a pleasure to help on this work who have aided in the liquidation of the debt. We wish to proceed with this work without needless delay, but prefer to keep out of debt, and so wait for funds to buy paper.

One Thousand New Subscribers.

We trust that our ministers will present the claims of our Western paper publicly, especially in new fields, and thus help augment our list of subscribers. Not only can ministers obtain subscribers, but every brother and sister can do the same. Who will aid us in obtaining one thousand more subscribers before the first of January? This can easily be done with little effort. Let every Western minister send us at least three apiece, and every brother and sister do what they can, and we shall far exceed the number; but let the work be commenced without hesitation. Who will help obtain the one thousand new subscribers?

How Short?

When we talk about short letters, and short articles, we are not understood—it seems to be thought we mean they should not exceed a half a dozen columns. We do mean that, and more too. Ordinarily half a column is long enough for articles, and a quarter of a column long enough for letters. Such articles, if filled with thought and facts, will be read with eagerness. The editor of the Methodist Recorder recently gave his opinion on long articles in these words:

The article "Infant Baptism" on the first page, this week, was written on a single postal card. These cards are just the thing for ordinary contributions, especially for church news.

Pledges.

IF those who have made pledges to be paid on or before January 1, could come to our help a little sooner—say within ten days—and help us meet a demand of $1,500 that is pressing, it would be a great help to the office. Who will redeem their pledges within the specified time, instead of waiting till January? This is not a dun, but an intimation that a great favor would be conferred by this early action, if any are in a condition to thus favor us.

BR. MILLER.—Since the last week's note, Sr. Miller has written Br. Tucker the following additional information:

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 11, 1873.

For the past twenty-four hours he has rested quite naturally, and the doctor says that he is very much better, so we have hope. To the friends who may have written him at Monticello, you will no longer wonder why your letters remain unanswered. And to friends in destitute districts, if you wish him to visit you, write him at Monticello, and as soon as his health will permit, he will attend to your wants. We are stopping at Br. Descent's, and the sacrifices they have made and are making for our comfort can only be known by those who are acquainted with their works of Christian charity and love. The dear Lord bless them, and all the dear friends in Minneapolis, for they have all been very kind; and the attending physician is and has been very kind, and is a Christian, interested in the coming of the Lord and kindred Advent views. We pray the dear Lord bless him and bring him into the full light. I. E. MILLER.

We trust Br. Miller will soon be in the field again; but let not the brethren forget that expenses are necessarily incurred in sickness. Open your hearts and purses in this time of need.

Are the Dead Still Alive?

DEAR SIR,—In the July number of the Rainbow Mr. Maude has asked us to subscribe to one of two alternatives, either "that the dead saint continues to possess individual personal existence in a state of consciousness," or "that the great promise of Christ has failed." We respectfully decline to do either, believing, as we do, with "faith unfeigned," both that "the dead know not anything," and that the hour is not far distant when they shall, nevertheless, "hear the voice of the Son of Man, and they that hear shall live;" and we submit that the only possibility of failure to Christ's promise to raise the dead would be the adoption of Mr. Maude's theory, "the dead are still alive," and hence incapable of being raised from the dead; and that Mr. Maude really believes a dead man to be alive we have very definite language in his letter in question to show.

He defines life to be "the individual personal existence of the human being (said to be alive) in a state of consciousness;" and this being friend Maud's defination of life possessed by the human being said to be alive, we might reasonably conclude that the human being said to be dead would be at least bereft of those qualities which constituted him living Not so, however. Mr. Maude insists that the living and the dead are in precisely the same condition. He says:—"We have seen the Christian's eyes close in death, we have followed his body to the grave, and as time rolls on we have had the humiliating evidence presented to us that it had mingled with the dust from whence it was taken. What shall we say then? But one alternative seems to be presented to us—we must surely conclude either that the believer's body is not the believer himself, and that apart from the body he continues to possess individual personal existence in a state of consciousness, or, awful alternative indeed! that the great promise of Christ has failed."

Will Brother Maude kindly tell us the difference, then between the living and the dead, if both equally possess individual personal existence in a state of consciousness? and how, in that case, "they also who have fallen asleep in Christ have perished if the dead rise not?"

What did the Great Teacher himself mean when he said, "He that loseth his life for my sake shall find it," if in death he would "continue to possess that individual personal existence in a state of consciousness,, which Mr. Maude tells us constitutes life?

The readers of the RAINBOW know that our able brother does not usually reason in this way, and I am satisfied that if he had truth to defend, instead of heathen fable, no man would find him in a position so illogical and absurd.

Who with the slightest acquaintance with the life and its manifestations would define it to be "personal existence in a state of consciousness," unless pressed to that conclusion by some needy theory? Who does not know that man possesses life months before a ray of consciousness reaches him, and loses his consciousness every time he sinks into undisturbed sleep, without in the slightest degree affecting his life?

Mr. Maude would not, I suppose, deny that the sailor mentioned in a late number of the RAINBOW as being for two years in a state of utter unconsciousness, through a fractured skull pressing on his brain, nevertheless possessed all that time the element of life just as really as before the accident overtook him, or as after the surgical operation had restored him to consciousness again; and if so, then we have the most indubitable evidence that consciousness and life have no necessary connection.

Our brother is not, I think, more fortunate in his application of those Scriptures which he has adduced to answer his own question, "Does the believer possess eternal life now? or has he only the promise of it at the resurrection?"

If eternal life be "length of days for ever and ever," as inspiration declares, then the believer does not possess it now, for his days are still liable to be terminated at any moment by any one of the "thourand ills that flesh is still heir to;" and as long as a man is liable to die, he does not, I submit, possess eternal life.

Jesus mentions a time in the history of his saints when his own language of them, "neither can they die any more," shall be gloriously realised; but that time is after the resurrection of the dead. The "last enemy," death, is still reigning; the time for his destruction is yet the future, and the cheering promise made to the seer of Patmos, "there shall be no more death," is yet unfulfilled. Nevertheless Paul asserted in his day, "Christ hath abolished death." What did he mean?"—that death had ceased reigning?—that saints were no longer exposed to his ravanges? Nay, verily, for he speaks of Epaphroditus as having been sick nigh unto death, tells the Corinthians of his own gracious deliverance from death, and pointed invariably to a resurrection from the dead at the coming and kingdom of his Redeemer as his only hope of a future life. How, then, are we to reconcile the continued existence of death with the declaration that he has been abolished.

According, I think, to the principal laid down in Rom. 4:17, by which the omnipotent and unchangeable Jehovah, to whom the future is present, "calleth the things that be not as though they were," he could say to Abram, "I have made thee a father of many nations, when as yet the "son of promise" was unborn, because the thing had been accomplished in his divine purpose; and I think we do no violence to Scripture to understand similar New Testament phraseology in the same way. Certain it is that dozens of the plainest passages speak of the believer getting eternal life "in the world to come," and nothing is plainer than that he connot get it as a personal possession, both here and hereafter.

If those passages, then, which our friend has quoted to prove present possession, be understood prospectively, then we have harmony,—eternal life would be the believer's as a treasure "hid with Christ in God," and Paul could still say, almost at the end of his eventful life, in his letter to Titus, "in hope of eternal life," without violating his own rule, "what a man seeth, why doth he yet hope for?" (Rom. 8:24); and the "beloved apostle" could also say, when age had fallen upon him, years after he had become a believer, "This is the promise which he has promised us, even eternal life." The heir may be truly said to possess an estate from the moment his father wills it to him, but he must attain his majority before he enters upon personal possession; and the believer's majority will not be attained until "death is swallowed up of victory."

Mr. Maude further says, "If there be meaning in God's word, then the believer's present possession of eternal life precludes the possibility of his ever dying: the life which he possesses is the life of the risen Saviour,—an indissoluble life, over which death has no dominion."

How strange this language sounds in the light of a risen Redeemer's instructions to his persecuted followers; "Behold the devil shall cast some of you into prison, that ye may be tried; and ye shall have tribulation ten days. Be though faithful unto death, and I will give you a crown of life." (Rev. 2:10.)

Are those believers addressed as possessors of something "which precluded the possibility of their dying?" Was the Great Teacher not aware (we speak it with all reverence) whether they possessed "an indissoluble life, over which death has no dominion?" He certainly was, and would by no means have urged them to be faithful even to death, if he knew death in their case to be impossible, or have promised them a "crown of life" if they already possessed it.

We have hitherto believed a resurrection to be indispensable to the future life of the dead saint, and consequently worthy of all the importance Paul gave it; but there must be a mistake somewhere if we have grown wise enough to do without it, and get present possession of something "which precludes the possibility of dying,—an indissoluble life, over which death has no dominion." Strange that Paul could not have made that discovery, and have avoided the mistake of condemning Hymeneus and Philetus for believing the very same thing!

I have regarded eternal life as deathlessness, and have believed that its happy possessor must of necessity be proof against decay, and know no sickness, disease, or death for ever; but if friend Maude's teaching be true, my pleasing dream is dispelled, and I am henceforth constrained to believe that the subject of eternal life to-day may be shrouded in his coffin a subject of death to-morrow; and that prospect would to me be as cheerless and gloomy as "the dark abyss of materialism," which friend Maude so much dreads.

I have not I confess, read my Bible aright if it does not reveal eternal life, God's great gift to man, procured at the costly price of a Saviour's life, as something which will make the child of mortality "equal to the angels," and raise him above the reach and above the power of the "King of terrors" for ever and ever.—THOMAS DAVIDSON, in Rainbow.

Miscellaneous.

AT HOME.

The Chicago City Clerk has issued 2,838 liquor-licenses since July.

Chicago has about twenty churches now building, which will cost about $2,000,000.

A human skeleton has been found in one of the shell mounds on the California coast.

On tobacco alone Virginia has paid $30,000,000 of taxes into the United States treasury since the war.

A Kalamazoo merchant keeps his money in his Bible, saying that it is far less liable to be disturbed there than in the safe.

The President has signed the agreement between the United States and Newfoundland to exchange postal cards by the addition of one cent postage.

A company of fourteen Crow chiefs, in full native uniform, en route from the Yellowstone country to Washington, under charge of Major F. D. Pease, recently passed through the city.

Near Boydsville, Weakly county, West Tenn., last week, eighteen armed men went to the house of a citizen, kidnapped a negro girl, and carried her into the woods. No arrests were made.

The terrible gale of August 24 destroyed no less than 1,121 vessels and 600 lives on the coast of Nova Scotia, and north and south of it. A recent gale on our south Atlantic coast and in Cuba was almost equally destructive.

About $12,000 was contributed to the relief of the Memphis and Shreveport sufferers as the result of the receipts on the 13th inst, at the Inter-State Exposition. This makes over $30,000 that Chicago has thus far contributed to the yellow-fever sufferers.

The first Ku Klux trial before the State courts in North Carolina, was had before Judge W. Jonhson, in Raleigh recently and resulted in the conviction for murder of two men, one white, the other colored, of the murder of a colored man, Setember 6. The murderers are to be hanged Nov. 13.

A new sect, "Zion's Travelers," has appeared in South Carolina. They profess to be immediately guided by the Lord, and to have frequent revelations from above. They recently supposed the Lord ordered them to remove to North Caroilna, and they are now on their way thither.

Ten years ago John Williams murdered an old man named Price, in Alexander county, Ill. Williams made his escape, and has been at large until the 13th inst, when Sheriff Irvin found him at work as a deck hand on a boat lying at Cairo, Ill., and took him into custody.

Near Oakland, Miss., on the Mississippi and Tennessee railroad, a few mornings ago, a non-explosive oil vender was burned to death by an explosion of a can of the fluid. The man was sitting in a passenger coach and had several cans of the oil with him, when the conductor entered the car with a lighted lamp, which is supposed to have ignited the gas emitted from the leaking can. It was with great difficulty that the man was extricated from the flames and the car saved from destruction. He died soon after being taken from the car.

ABROAD.

The German Ministers of Commerce and Interior have issued instructions to the district authorities to expel all emigration agents who are domiciled in Germany.

Advices from South America report that the insurgents of Entrerarics have been signally defeated. A whole battallion mutinied against the rebel leaders Lopez and Jordan, and submitted to the Federal authority.

A dispatch from Cartagena, Oct. 14, says: "The Intrinsigente vessels are again leaving the harbor, and another naval engagemen is expected. The command of the insurgent fleet has been given to the captain of the Tetman.

At Southampton, England, recently, a whale followed a German ship about a mile up the river Itchen close to Northambridge. A number of workmen went out in boats and drove it into shallow water, where it was harpooned and killed.

There was an immense open air demonstration at Cork, Ireland, recently, in favor of Fenian amnesty, home rule, and the rights of labor. Twenty thousand persons took part in it. The proceedings were accompanied with much disorder.

Among the documents read at the trial of Bazaine was one showing that there were 17,000,000 cartridges in the arsenal of Metz, of which only 1,000,000 had been used when the place capitulated, and that when Bazaine said he had no ammunition the fact was he had no intention of fighting. The evidence of treason on the part of Marshal Bazaine strengthens with the progress of the trial. It now looks as if the charges against him would be abundantly sustained. The key to his conduct is probably found in his devotion to the Napoleonic dynasty.

A Vera Cruz paper states that Santa Anna is living in great misery, having sunk from poverty to complete destitution. It then proceeds to say that the veteran soldier did great evil to his country when it was in his power to do great good; but that it should not be forgotten that he was one of the heroes of Mexican Independence; that he was the first to proclaim the republic of Vera Cruz, and that he confirmed the freedom of Mexico by defeating Barradas in Tampico. Premising that the Mexican people have pardoned many worse men, the Vera Cruz journal argues that they should terminate the sentence of expatriation which has been in force for 18 years, and permit the octogenarian to seek a tranquil tomb in his native land.

Correspondence.

Report of Camp Meeting at Sparta.

This meeting commenced September 4, under very favorable circumstances with plenty of ministerial help. Elder Thurber and Elder Mansfield and wife were present at the beginning, and Elders Turner and Adams came soon after. Elder Mansfield and wife staid with the camp (and rendered good aid in the meeting) until Friday 12, when they left to fill their appointment at Utica, Minn. Elder Thurber left Thursday 11, to go to Watertown, to see his son, who was said to be under conviction, and wanted to see Pa. Elder Turner left on Friday 12, to visit the friends in Vernon and Sauk counties, so that it will be seen that the ministerial labor on Saturday and Sunday fell upon Elder Adams and myself. I would say in my opinion Br. Adams should be kept in the field.

The attendance was not as large taking the three appointments each day as at the June Camp, but when Sr. Mansfield preached it was larger. The spirituality of the meeting did not reach so high a standard as the former one, yet the Spirit's power was manifest in the earnest appeals to the unsaved by the speakers, and in the earnest prayers offered up by the saints for God to save.

There were two converted-one from spiritualism. She had great struggling to get into the light of the gospel. We closed as usual with commemorating the death of our Saviour. It was a sweet heavenly sitting together in Christ. The thought that we might never meet all present again until the "heavens be no more," made the occasion very solemn and impressive. May the great Head of the church keep them from the evils that are in the world and save them in that day.

P. W. Houch.

Conference Report.

The first Quarterly meeting of the Southern district of Michigan met according to previous notice at the Peacock S. H. in Bath, Clinton Co., Mich.

The following brethren were present: Elds. A E Babcock, J. R. Preston, Turner and Fox.

Delegates from churches: Brethren Shunway and Gallop from Algansa. Brn. Taylor and Fisher, from Rives. Br. Matoon, from St. Johns. Brn Church and Butterfield, of Bath.

Eld Wyman, of Victor, formerly of Chicago, was present and requested to unite with the conference, and was received. Br. Samuel Pope, of Bath, was also received into the conference and licensed.

The committee's report upon the case of Eld. A. H. P. Wilson was received, as follows:

Whereas, reports relative to the immoral character of Eld. A. H. P. Wilson, were substantiated by the testimony of reliable brethren: On motion of J. R. Preston, the conference voted that his name be erased from the minutes of the conference, and the hand of friendship withdrawn from him.

Voted by the conference that the secretary be instructed to forward the report of the committee, and also the action of the conference in the case of A. H. P. Wilson, to the A. C Times for publication, with the rest of the minutes of the conference.

The interest of the meeting was good, in fact it was one of the very best meetings we have enjoyed for a long time. Many of our brethren felt, and said it was indeed "good to be here."

Voted that the officers of the conference, arrange for, and give notice of the time and place of holding the next Quarterly meeting.

C. Fox, Sec'y.

From Eld. G. W. Wright, Mich.

We are building a fine chapel 32x50 in Lexington, and expect to have it done in a few weeks. This will be the fourth one in this county. We are in good cheer, and the cause we love is steadily onward, blessed be God. Pray for us.

From Elder D. S. Clark, Springfield, Ill.

Dear Br. Sheldon:—I have not had chance to do much in the way of holding meetings in this place. We have had a very hard rain; but feel that our visit will not be lost. They are very anxious to have some meetings held in this city. I was down to Auburn, and held three meetings. Found some good brethren and sisters in that place. Br. Calkins preaches to them. This part of Illinois is too much neglected. They need more help. I leave for Bloomington in the morning. Expect to hold a meeting there Wednesday evening. Leave for home Thursday to go to the Conference to commence October 2.

I am glad to see the money is all subscribed to make up the four thousand dollars. I hope it will be paid in without delay. My prayer is, that the Lord may bless you, and make you useful in the place where I think the Lord has placed you.

Pray for me that I may have health to do what I feel my duty is in preaching the present truth.

From Sr. L. R. Bowen, Mich.

Our Grove meeting in Asyria, closed with good results, and an impression was left on the hearts of many that will last until Jesus comes. Our hearts rejoice with you all in anticipation of the soon coming of our Lord and Saviour, in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. Let us be watchful, prayerful, and hopeful, with a faith that will not shrink though pressed by many a foe. I must say the precious truth that was proclaimed from God's word (by our dear Br. Tuttle and Br. Haller,) fell like hot lead on the hearts of unbelievers, and showed a good many others that profess to believe the truth, that they were preaching and believing the devil's lie. A good many were there that could not endure sound doctrine. We had a blessed meeting, some brethren and sisters came as far as eighteen miles to meet with us, and said they had been blessed and paid for coming. We feel as a little church, weak in number, but we have received strength by this meeting. Bible light shines out more gloriously. The Lord gives the victory, and to him be all praise. We had a precious season of communion, and one made up her mind to go forward in this blessed good work, and live for Jesus, and desired the prayers of the brethren and sisters—blessed be God. There is nothing that can give us lasting happiness, but the true religion of Jesus Christ.

Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without fear or wavering, confidently relying on our blessed Lord for strength, and may all the saints soon be gathered in one general conference in the new Jerusalem, the city of our God, at the glorious coming of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, is the prayer of your sister in the blessed hope of meeting with you all in the kingdom.

From Elder S. B. Mabey, Iowa.

Br. Sheldon:—I am much pleased to learn that pledges have been sent in sufficient to pay the debt on the Association. I think it high time that our brethren in the West, as well as East, were aware of the worth of the weekly paper—the Times.

I am confident that by a united effort on the part of all that it can be paid, and one thousand dollars raised for a tract fund, and to purchase material to disseminate these glorious truths, of the soon coming kingdom and kindred doctrines of vital importance to a perishing world. I trust that henceforth the "good news" will be more thoroughly scattered than ever before. Let all our brethren far and near rally.

From J. C. Laughlin, Iowa.

It does me good to know the brethren are sinking that large debt, you are working in the right direction. I am with you in heart if not in purse. God bless you and the Advent Times.

From Elder J. A. Newton.

Editor of Times:—Say to the churches, I am yet "journeying" to a country and kingdom which lies just across the waste and the moor, and I rejoice in that band which ties the soul to God. The path brightens as the years wear away, and my love and bond grows stronger as my home draweth near. In proportion to our zeal shall be our success. Around the mercy seat I love to linger. The wings of the cherubim's reach from wall to wall, and the glory of God shines forth with infinite effulgence around that hallowed place. Here we taste anew the sweets of redeeming grace. Here sing with the saints of God on earth, and, finally with them in His most glorious kingdom.

From John A. Hooker, Ky.

To the brothers and sisters scattered abroad: Not being able to be with you all to speak face to face, I feel a desire to say a few words. I am living in the most isolated place I ever saw. I have not had an opportunity to hear the truth but once since I have lived here; brother N. Field delivered some fine sermons here about a year ago. I live in a place where the people all belong to church, (but a different kind,) and they direct all their big guns at me; but God be praised, their secterian hobbies have failed to expel the truth. I have the Times, which is a great comfort, and shield. Brothers and sisters pray for me.

Yours, hoping the blessing of God may remain with you all, and that we may all meet in the kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

From Eld. C. F. Sweet, N. Y.

By your permission and courtesy I wish to make a brief statement of facts, to the readers of the Times, relative to our mission tent of Pa. and Southern N. Y.—And also of Br. Ongley's success in getting it up, and obtaining means to pay for it. He did not dare to order it made until enough was pledged to pay for it, and he supposed all the pledges had been made in good faith, in the fear and for the cause of God. He did not expect a debt entailed upon himself by getting the tent into the field. We have held eight tent meetings in it this season, mostly in new places, and as we believe, have seen the pleasure of the Lord prosper in our hands; as we have followed his providential and guiding hand. Some have "obeyed the gospel" at the time of hearing it. Others have been "almost persuaded," while others we hear have since put on the Lord Jesus by other hands. Our receipts in all per day is but a little over one dollar for the past four months, ending Oct. 2, 1873. And we are satisfied with that if God in His grace does not give us any more. But by the delinquency of those having pledged and not keeping their covenant with Br. Ongley, he is in straightened circumstances, and says if he cannot pay the twenty five dollars due on the tent without, he shall have to sell his cow to obtain the money. One thing is certain, he cannot pay it out of his receipts for labor this season with the tent. For he has had to borrow of me at times to get along with current expenses. I therefore propose a plan to pay it, and no one know their loss, and that is as you, reader, lay down this paper, just take up the pen and write me a line, and enclose ten cents for each member of the family or church, and direct to C. F. Sweet, Albion, Orleans Co., N. Y., and I will faithfully disburse, and report the same: and if more than the twenty-five dollars is received, it shall be appropriated for the tent expenses for next season, in paying for travel, labor, &c. And as we design (D. V.) to go into new places in the region beyond with the tent, then we shall be glad to receive any aid and encouragement that God may providentially send us. I will be one of twenty-five persons to pay Mr. Field the debt on the tent; when, therefore, twenty-four persons send me one dollar each, the debt is and shall be paid. Who will join me in relieving Br. Ongley, from his present embarrassment? Do not say go in peace, be warmed and fed, and do nothing. But "do as you would be done by," and act faith at least to the sacrifice of one dime, and also a letter of sympathy; and may God bless you and return into your bosom four fold, is the prayer of one that feels a brother's woes in the trials and disappointments of this mortal life of pain and death.

From Geo. W. Dilley, Lodi, Wis.

It is written, "Comfort ye, Comfort ye my people," and it is with this thought in my mind, that I now state my reasons for becoming an Adventist.

1. I saw God's boundless love toward us made manifest through the suffering and death of his son: "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him might have everlasting life." (John 3: 16.) This alone ought to be a sufficient cause for mankind to put their whole trust in God and to serve him.

2. The Scripture commands us: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy might, mind, and strength." Who that has had a kind earthly parent, but obeyed the command received from them, not with fear of punishment, but a fear to offend against love. I do not wish to be thought or called self-righteous; no, no: I am only a frail mortal being, and often, very often go astray, yet it is not my wish or will to do so, yet I believe God sometimes suffers us to be tried so that we may be proved in faith. May God help all of his children so to walk by faith, that when we arise from our sleep of death we "shall be ever with the Lord."

My 3rd reason is, I cannot find in the word of God anything in any place that places an immortal soul in this mortal body. I cannot find that I will be either rewarded or punished at death. I cannot find that we go to heaven or the place of punishment when we die, but I do find the promises of God to be a present help in all my daily trials: there is where I get consolation when I am cast down. Oh the sweet promises of Christ how beautiful how good. Some of my friends say you talk of sleeping in the grave; you have no soul to save, &c. My reply is, God breathed into man the breath of life, and man became a living soul, and when he dies he is therefore a dead soul, for nothing immortal can die. "The soul that sinneth shall die." But this I take to be of our earthly nature in part. Job says: "Man dieth and wasteth away, yea he giveth up the ghost, and where is he"? Again: "The dead know not any thing," so that, did we possess an immortal soul, we would be more alive after we were dead or had ceased to exist, than we were before. But perhaps my brethren are already tired of my poor explanation of my thoughts. So to close, I would say, let us all be faithful; only a little while and "He that is to come, will come, and will not tarry." Brethren pray. God hears and answers prayer. I know for myself this to be the case.

From L. J. Rich, Hudson, Bates Co., Missouri.

I have been sick about eight months, and unable to preach, which grieved me very much, but my health is better now. I still look for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God. This is a purifying hope: it moves the pilgrim to press on, looking for the dead to live again. That time will come. "The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, and with the voice of the archangel, and the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first." "Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise." Here we find a glorious promise. Though death is the enemy of man and may bring us down to the grave, Jesus will unlock the dark abode, and set the people free. What a blessed hope is this. The earth that was once fair, but cursed for man's sin, now groaning under blood and carnage, will soon be freed from sin, and be cleansed by fire. The redeemed will then come to Mount Zion, with songs of everlasting joy upon their heads; then we will enter the holy city, planted upon the verdant bosom of the new earth.

There is a crown laid up for all them that love his appearing. Dear sinner, do you love Jesus? Do you love his appearing? Do you want to see him in his beauty when he shall come to reign from the river unto the ends of the earth? He will reign in righteousness: He is the Lord our righteousness. He will reign to all ages. Sinner, come to Christ, for life before the day of doom, and be saved.

My Experience.

H. WILLETT.

Dear Br. Sheldon:—I noticed in The Times an invitation to any to send, by way of communication, an account of their christian experience. I herewith send a sketch of mine, hoping it may not be entirely useless, but that it may encourage even one soul to go forward in the discharge of duty. I would premise my experience by this declaration: that I have felt my richest and most joyous moments to succeed a discharge of neglected duty, or an exercise of faith under foreboding circumstances. I have great reason to believe that the Holy Spirit strove with me at an early age of my life. When about ten years old I felt great comfort in reading my little Bible, and at times the Spirit seemed so to accompany the word to my heart, either when I heard it preached or read it myself, that tears would often freely flow, and I did time and again covenant with the Lord to love and serve him. I felt that I was a sinner, yet did not long struggle to believe that Christ died to save me, and on confession of my faith, I was recieved, when about fifteen years old, into the M. E. church. My religious experience was varied for several years. Arriving at manhood, new temptations and trials interfered with my religious joys. I suppose I lived for many years as the great majority of church members live, sometimes feeling a precious nearness to the Lord when faithful in the discharge of duty and self denial, and again experiencing coldness and barrenness when absorbed in the cares and allurements of life. The struggle for wealth I have no doubt had much to do with my backsliding, and I know not that I ever met with a member of our church but who confessed backsliding at some time or other, and I about concluded that backsliding was an unavoidable part of the christian's experience. When about twenty years old, the duty of baptism presented itself to my mind. I say presented itself, because at that time there was no agitation in the church about the ordinance, and what I had heard on the subject previously was one sided, that is, in favor of sprinkling; but from reading the Scriptures I had come to the conclusion that immersion was the primitive mode: that John the Baptist practiced that mode, that our Saviour was immersed in the river Jordan, and that others had thus been baptized in divers places mentioned in the New Testament. I fully came to the conclusion that nothing but immersion would quiet my conscience in regard to that duty, wishing to follow the Saviour wherever he led: and as he said to John, "Suffer it to be so now, for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness," I felt, too, that I ought to suffer it, and thereby visibly show my faith in his death, burial and resurrection. With this conclusion, I made known my desire to our pastor; but when he understood that I wanted to be "planted in the likeness of Christ's death, buried with him by baptism into death," to use a modern expression he "could not see it." He never had baptized in this way, and added that he never wanted to baptize in that way; and thought that all who could not feel satisfied with sprinkling ought to go to the Baptist church, where they rightly belonged. I thought the hint was sufficient, and not wishing to delay in the matter, I withdrew from the church, and upon confession of my faith was baptized into the Baptist church as they called it. So far as baptism was concerned, I felt that I was in the line of duty: and never have I regretted the step, but I have often felt to rejoice that I went forward in this act of obedience, feeling fully sustained by the word of God. I maintained my membership in the Baptist church for about fifteen years, when my attention was called again to examine more carefully certain truths of God's word: this time, however, from hearing certain questions discussed, that had been supposed to have been perfectly settled by the church to which I belonged. The questions of future punishment, state of man in death, the place of reward, together with the second coming of Christ.

The theme of the second coming of Christ I had heard discussed away back in 1844, and I can truly say that it was a purifying truth to me, as well as a glorious hope begotten of the gospel; but when I fully and carefully examined the Scriptures in regard to the state of man in death, the nature of the reward of the righteous, as well as the time of the reward, the blessed hope became indeed as "an anchor to my soul, both sure and steadfast, reaching to that within the vail, even Jesus." And when all the precious truths of the gospel were caused to shine in the face of Jesus Christ, and center in him as the life-giver, Oh how precious the word of God became to me, as it never had been before. The result was, I could not keep the good news to myself, but I must needs go and tell it to the brethren, trusting that they too would rejoice with me in the blessed light, as I verily believed the Spirit had led many into: for the promise of the Saviour was that the Holy Spirit "would guide into all truth, and show things to come." (John 16: 13.) But my sanguine hopes were soon dissipated. I soon found out that I was looked upon with suspicion by my brethren. My pastor publicly pronounced me to be in darkness, and that the doctrines I felt to be so precious to my soul were the doctrines of hell and the devil. The church sided with him. I tried to call their attention to the Scriptures, and to give them a thorough re-examination, but I felt no sympathy. My presence seemed to be unpleasant to them. I prayed for them, and for myself. It finally became a conscientious matter with me in regard to paying my money for that which I considered no bread. In fact was I not lending my influence by my presence, as a church member, and assisting by my means, to teach error, to teach for doctrines, the commandments of men. I came to this conclusion. I expressed myself that I could no longer aid by my purse to propagate the church's interpretations of certain Bible doctrines. I was then declared to be no longer a Baptist. And when I told them I could only remain on condition of reading and interpreting the articles of faith as I read and understood the Bible, the result was, I was excluded for maintaining unscriptural dogmas; although I was contending against men's dogmas. They admitted that they believed I was a Christian, yet the precious creed seemed to be paramount with them, and to prevent any chance for additional light, more than they had received. I rested my faith on God's word, and rejoice to day in a feeling sense of his love; and if any more light is to be had on his precious word, I pray the Lord to shed it abroad abundantly in my mind and heart. I want to be cut off from all sects and creeds that would in the least hinder the spread of gospel truth. I believe in one church, the Church of Christ, to which all true believers belong.

I associate with the Advent Christian denomination at present, feeling a greater liberty with them in the gospel of Christ; but I want always to be ready to advance in the true light of God's truth as he is willing to lead. Believing I have been led by him by word and spirit in the past in, and out, of two denominations, and into a third, I pray the Lord to still lead, for I truly believe he will lead his people in the way they should go, and will finally lead them into his glorious kingdom.

"Second Death--Its Power."

L. MANN.

In a recent number of THE TIMES, a correspondent advances a few speculative ideas on Rev. 20:6, which we wish to notice very briefly. He first endeavors to show that the righteous living at the coming of Christ will, by means of being "changed in the twinkling of an eye," suffer death as do the rest of the race. He would base his conclusions on two efforts at reasoning.

1. That because the "beheaded for the witness of Jesus," (Rev. 20: 8,) are exempt from the power of the second death, therefore the balance of the race must be subjects of it.

2. "Unto dust shalt thou return," and there will be no exception, for "it is appointed unto all men once to die."

Under the first effort, the query is raised, whether the beheaded will be "blessed" unless they that are alive at the coming be subjected to the power of the second death? The apostle in 1 Thes. 4:14 gives us to understand that not only the witnesses, but "all that are asleep in Christ will he bring with him." The beheaded will be blessed the same as the other subjects of the first resurrection, in that they will be exempt from the second death. This is, according to revealed light, all the relation the beheaded bear to this question.

At the outset our speculative brother refers to the two resurrections—the first and the second. We have cited to the apostolic assurance concerning who should constitute the first resurrection, and the "rest of the dead" were not raised for a period of one thousand years, and, all the dead in Christ having been made subjects of the first, left only the dead out of Christ to take part in the second.

Now, if the righteous that remain unto the coming suffer death at all, they of course must have a resurrection from that death; and if they are raised along with the beheaded they are also blessed in the same way by having part in the resurrection over which the second death hath no power; otherwise they form part of the subjects of the second resurrection, which is the resurrection unto damnation. So much for that cunningly (?) arranged idea.

Our brother offers as a last argument to sustain his theory of a second death and second resurrection for the saints alive at Christ's coming, that no one has yet failed to pay the penalty of death. His allusion to the translation of Enoch is entirely in keeping with the former suggestions. He thinks because Enoch walked with God and "was not," is sufficient ground for supposing that "he died; that even as Christ he entered sheol, hades, hell, or oblivion state." He presumes that the reason Enoch "did not see death," was because the change (the assumed death and resurrection) was accomplished so suddenly that neither Enoch, Elijah, nor any one else whom God shall choose to change could see; which is simply too weak to admit of comment.

The power of God as manifested through Christ is able to "change our vile bodies and fashion them after his own glorious body," (Phil. 3:21,) also was able to translate—change from one nature to another—both Enoch and Elijah, and by the same miraculous power will change the living saints at the coming of Christ.

The second death is every where alluded to as the finale of the devil and all doers of iniquity. The Revelator tells the church at Smyrna that "he that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death." (Rev. 2:11.) How can this second death hurt a victim when its nature is such that they cannot realize that it is a death? and who are to be the overcomers if the saints which are alive at his coming are not of that class? The Revelator again tells us in ch. 20:14, 15, that "death and hell were cast into the lake of fire, which is the second death; and whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake," and consequently were subjects of the second death; and this casting into the lake (second death) is the destruction meeted out to the wicked in consequence of their continuous rebellion against God.

Oh! for a more strict adherence to the plain teachings of the holy men of old and inspired apostles. Give us the plain "thus saith the Lord" to sustain your propositions, and they will then receive a hearty endorsement from all lovers of Bible harmony and truth.

"Be Ye Steadfast, Unmovable."

Perseverance is at once the crown and cross of service. It is very easy to preach for a little while, but I can assure you that preaching to a congregation year after year involves no little toil; yet we are bound to be steadfast in this ministry. A spurt, a leap, a bound—these are easy, but to press on continually is the difficulty. Have you taken a class in Sabbath-school? The novelty of it may carry them through a month or two, but, dear friend, be steadfast and hold on year after year, for therein will lie your honor and success. If you should be discouraged because you meet with no present success, yet persevere, yea, endure to the end. If God has given you any work to do, it is yours to press forward in it, whether you prosper in it or not. The negro said, you remember, that if God bade him jump through a wall, whether he could go through it or not was no business of his. "Here I go," says he, "right at it." We may rest assured that the Lord never did command us to leap through a wall without causing it to give way, when our faith brought us to the test. We have to obey the precept, and leave the consequences. If God says, "Do it," the command is both the warrant for our act and the security for our being aided with all necessary help. Noah preached for one hundred and twenty years, and when his time of warning ministry was over, where were his converts? He may have had a great many, but they were all dead and buried; and with the exception of himself and family, after one hundred and twenty years' ministry, there remained not one that God would preserve alive; and into the ark he went, the grandest unsuccessful preacher that ever lived, faithful unto death, to be rewarded of God as much as if he had induced half the world to flee from the wrath to come. Let us, therefore, remain steadfast in doctrine, in attainment and in labor.

If ever there was a period in the Christian church when professors needed to be exhorted to be "steadfast, unmovable," is just now, for the foundation is removed and all things are out of course. Men remove the old landmarks, they break down the pillars of the house. All things reel to and fro and stagger like a drunken man, and only He who keepeth the feet of the saints can preserve our uprightness. I see the tacklings loosed and the mast unstrengthened, and the brave vessel of the church is in an evil case. Many have left their moorings and are drifting hither and thither, their helmsmen all amazed. No longer does the squadron of the Lord sail in order of battle, but the lines are broken and the vessel yields to tossings of winds and waves. Alas that it should be so. O where is He that trod the sea? The Pilot of the Galilean lake? I see him walking the waters, and he cries to us who still stand true to the Lord, the one faith, and the one baptism, "Be ye steadfast, unmovable." Whatever other denominations of Christians do, be ye true to your Lord in all things, for those who forsake him shal be written in the dust. Beloved, never stir away from the truth! Some are changeable by constitution like Reuben, "unstable as water, they shall not excel." A mind on wheels knows no rest, it is as a rolling thing before the tempest. Struggle against desire for novelty, or it will lead you astray as the will-o-the-wisp deceives the traveler. If you desire to be useful, if you long to honor God, if you wish to be happy, be established in the truth, and not be carried about by every wind of doctrine in these evil days. "Be ye steadfast, unmovable."—Spurgeon.

Our Young Folks.

The Righter of Wrongs.

Lo! where are God's judgments for sinning,
And what are the wages for shame?
She is pampered with gold and fine linen,
She hath laughter and joy at beginning,
And afterward riches and fame.
By my vengeance that never knows sleeping,
By the terrible wrath of his rod,
I will bring down her beauty with weeping,
Saith the Lord God.

She is fair as the earth after showers,
When the spring and the summer first meet;
She is queen of all seasons and hours,
She is crowned with a crown of glad flowers,
And princes have knelt at her feet.
With tears and sharp anguish hereafter
Shall my wine-press of anguish be trod,
When for glory she reaps scorn and laughter,
Saith the Lord, God.

One is walking, and no man doth heed her,
In the silent by-ways of earth;
She is hungry, yet no man doth feed her;
She is weary yet no man doth lead her;
She is small and accounted no worth.
She is walking with weeping and fasting,
In the same weary way that He trod.
I will crown her with joy everlasting,
Saith the Lord God.

The world has its pleasures turned from her,
And no man shall weep when she dies;
She lacks glory, and worship, and honor,
No beauty hath God placed upon her,
To kindle the light in men's eyes.
Look up, all the bonds will I sever,
That bound thee so close to the sod,
Thou shalt rest in my bosom forever,
Saith the Lord God.

—Penny Post.

An Experiment that Failed.

I AM not sure whether I did right or not. I am sure that I mean right. It was in this wise:

Believing implicitly that the bending of little human twigs should be accomplished during the early stages of their growth, I concluded to commence on Vieve. My intention was to give her a lesson in firmness. Accordingly, I filled a box with chestnuts, and placed it within her reach, saying, "Now, Vieve, dear, you must not touch them without my permission."

"Well, den, I dess I'll not," was the reply, while three-year-old gazed wistfully toward the sweet temptation. I gave her six or eight.

"In my dear little potit, fank oo!"

I went to my work, and labored with all the cheerfulness of an inventor who is pretty sure that his machine will be a success.

During the afternoon it occurred to my mind those eight nuts were lasting a remarkable time. Assuming my blandest tone for the occasion, I asked:

"Vieve, have your eaten all your chestnuts?"

"No, I think not."

"Come here, darling. Where did you get so many?"

"Oh! I dets em out o' my potit."

"Well, but there are more that I gave you at first," I said, as I examined the dainty receptacle.

"O Vieve! have you been disobeying me, and getting more out of the box?"

"I 'specs p'r'aps I have."

"But are you sure?"

"Yes, I'se pretty sure."

"O, dear Vieve," I cried, with the feeling of one who discovers his intention to be a failure, "this makes poor mamma feel so sad. I do not like to punish you, but what must I do? I must have my little girl obey me. Oh! what shall I do?"

The small sinner looked reflective.

"Well mamma," she presently said in solemn tones, "I dess oo had better pray."

Believing her suggestion a wise one, embodying about all the wisdom of the entire affair, I acted upon it.

Returning to my occupation after our session had adjourned, the first thing that caught my attention was a scrap of old newspaper, containing this sentence:

"He who through intention or neglect throws before another a temptation, is, if he be overcome, equally guilty."

I put away the box of chestnuts, and am awaiting further light.—National Baptist.

Monkey Emotions.

The moral and psychical emotions of the anthropoid apes are just now the subject of considerable discussion and inquiry. Sir Edwin Landseer, as is well known, painted a picture of a weeping monkey; and it is now conceded that some species exercise an affectionate care for their dead. Mr. James Forbes adduces in evidence of this an observation of his own, to be found in his "Oriental Memoirs," and suggests that the very primitive religion, worship of the ancestor, is common to the lowest savages and the highest anthropoid monkeys. The passage is as follows: "One of a shooting party, under a banyan tree, killed a female monkey and carried it to his tent, which was soon surrounded by forty or fifty of the tribe, who made a great noise and seemed disposed to attack the aggressor. They retreated when he presented his fowling-piece, the dreadful effect of which they had witnessed, and appeared perfectly to understand. The head of the troop, however, stood his ground, babbling furiously; the sportsman, who, perhaps felt some degree of compunction for having killed one of the family, did not like to fire at the creature, and nothing short of firing would suffice to drive him off. At length he came to the door of the tent, and finding threats of no avail, began a lamentable moaning, and, by the most expressive gesture, seemed to beg for the dead body. It was given him; he took it sorrowfully in his arms, and bore it away to his expecting companions. They who were witnesses of this extraordinary scene resolved never again to fire at one of the monkey race."—Western Recorder.

The Dunce and the Goat.

[Translated from the German by G. S. V]

There was once a boy who would rather eat than read, who liked nuts better than knowledge; hence, the people called him the "lazy boy."

That vexed him, however; and he thought: Only wait! I'll show you all how industrious I am. So he took a book and went down to the street. A large trunk of a tree was lying there, and on this the boy took his seat. Everybody had to pass this way.

He takes the book in his lap, but places it topsy-turvy, so that the letters are all upside down. And there he sits, gazing into it and dangling his legs about. By and by he begins to nod; for he has fallen asleep.

But see what comes around the corner of the garden fence. It is the goat, a sprightly comrade, who has well learned how to move his head, and is ready to come to an engagement with anybody; for his horns are large and his forehead is hard.

He walked up to the snoring boy, and sees him nodding. "Hey, old fellow!" thinks he, "are you challenging me? I'm your man." The goat then stamps with his fore foot, and goes back a few steps. He then takes a start, rises upon his hind legs, and, advancing, gives the nodding boy a fearful thrust. The aroused boy falls back over the log with the goat upon him, and his book flies high up in the air.

Yelling, the boy jumps up and hurries home. He has no letters in his head, but plenty of blisters on it. The goat, however, stands in the road, surprised at the easy victory, and waits to see whether another boy comes along, who has learned nothing and and then sleeps on the street.—Western Recorder.

Books and Tracts.

List of Books, Tracts, etc., kept on sale at the Advent Christian Times office.

RESURRECTION OF THE DEAD IN Christ. (German.)

NATURE AND DESTINY OF MAN; (German.)

RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. (German.)

DESTRUCTION OF THE WICKED (German.)

SOUL OF MAN. (German.)

THE KINGDOM OF CHRIST ON Earth (German.)

IS MAN IMMORTAL? (German.)

☞ The above seven German tracts are published by L. Reimer, 1005 Chestnut-st., Philadelphia, Pa., and can be ordered either of this office or of him.

IMMATERIALISM, by Wm. Sheldon. Post-paid, 5c.

THE PENALTY OF SIN, by O. R. Fassett. Post-Paid, 6c.

AN ADDRESS TO M. E. CON-ference of Minnesota, by Eld. L. C. Collins. Should have a very wide circulation. Post paid 7c.

THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL answer to the questions: Is the popular conception of the soul that of Holy Scripture? By Chas. L. Ives, M. D., Professor of the theory and practice of Medicine in Yale College, 1873. 129 Pages. For sale at this Office. Price 35 cents

END OF THE KING OF THE NORTH, and the Impending Time of Trouble, and the near Coming of Christ. By L. T. Cunningham. Price, 12 cents.

THE JUDGMENT IMPENDING Prophecy and Chronology converging to one grand culmination. By L. T. Cunningham. Price, 12 cts.

THE DESTINY OF MAN, by William Erwin. An excellent treatise by a member of the M. E. denomination that gives the Bible view in a radical style. 348 pp. nicely bound in cloth and gilt. $1.50 post paid

MODERN SPIRITISM, its origin, character and tendencies, by C. C. Marston 36 pp. in paper $5.00 per hundred; $1.00 per dozen; 12 cts per dozen

COMPLETE WOKKS OF FLA-vius Josephus; translated by William Whiston. 979 pp. in cloth post paid $3.00

THE COMING EARTHQUAKE, By D. T. Taylor. 25 cents.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—Unabridged, $6, by express. Condensed, sufficiently full for ordinary purposes, by mail. $1.75.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE: with engravings, maps, and tables. $1.50. By mail, $1.75.

BIBLE DICTIONARY: by Smith & Barnum. The best abridgment of Smith's larger work. Leather $6. cloth $5 By express.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. $12 by express.

ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORDance. With Greek and English index. $5 by express.

ENGLISH-GREEK LEXICON. By Liddell & Scott. A standard work. $7 50. by express.

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 18mo. 25c.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock, $2 50. Post-paid.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3:1. By H. L. Hastings. Paper, 30c. Postage, 5c.

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY of God: and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By P. A. Smith. 12c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man of the earth earthy: the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 7c.

PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC meetings. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 50c. a hundred.

THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; with a review of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabbath By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of Scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added History, Statistics and Tables. Cloth, $2; leather 2 50

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. By Wellcome and Wood. 400 pp $1 25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATTHEW, 24 and 25, 15c

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM. 20c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM 25c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic; Which? 10c. $8 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a dozen, The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one adress, post-paid, for $4 00.

LAST DAY TOKENS: by S. S. Brewer. 35 cts.

FUTURITY; by Wm. Sheldon. 30 cts.

THE INDEX BOOK MARK: 25c a dozen.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. Nothing so good on this topic. Cloth $1. Paper, 50c. 3 copies for $1, post paid.

GOOD TIDINGS; a general view of Advent doctrine. By an Association of Authors. 426 pages. Cloth 65c. Paper 40c. Post paid.

THE NATURE AND DURATION OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT: By Henry Constable, Prebendary of Cork, 25c. Post paid.

THE FAITH OF ST. PAUL; showing it to have been neither Pharisaic nor Sadduceean, but Hebrew. By L. C. Collins. 15c.

THE STATE OF THE DEAD; a Discussion between N. Field, M. D. and T. P. Connolly, Esq. pp. 240. 60c. Post Paid.

THE JUBILEE HARP. $1. $9 a dozen.

HADES AND SHEOL; By L. C. Collins. The best published exposition of the parable of Dives and Lazarus. 15c.

THE ADVENT MINSTREL; a choice collection of spiritual songs. Flexible cloth, 25c. $2.10 a dozen. Paper, 15c. $1.50 a dozen.

HYMNS OF THE HARP; Cloth, 75c, Leather $1.

HYMNS OF THE MORNING; A new and rich collection. Cloth 50c. Leather, 60c.

PAUL'S EARNEST EXPECTATION and hope: (Phil. 1:21: 22.) By O. R. Fassett. 5c.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT: containing the original Greek text of the New Testament with an interlineary word for word English translation and a new emphatic version, pp. Cloth $4; leather back, $5. Postage, 15c.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, October 21, 1873.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES
IS PUBLISHED BY THE
Western Advent Christian Publishing Society.

Business Office: McCormick's Block, corner of Rando[illegible]d Dearborn Sts., Room 27.
[Pru[illegible] located at Norwood Park.]

TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.

Sent Three Months for Fifty-cents.

The officers of the Society are as follows.

President—DARIUS MATHEWSON,
Vice President—L. C. COLLINS.
Secretary—FRANK BURR.
Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
GEO. HOWARD, E. McCULLOCH,
J. M. SNOOK.

A. W. TUCKER, TREASURER & BUSINESS AGENT.

Don't Fail
To give your name and address full and complete every time you write.

Remember
That all Drafts, Money Orders, etc., payable to the Business Agent, A. W. Tucker.

☞ Address articles intended for publication in THE TIMES to Wm. Sheldon, and all business communications to A. W. Tucker, McCormick's Block, corner of Randolph and Dearborn sts., Chicago, (Room 27)

☞ Write Appointments, Notices, Communications for THE TIMES, and business matters, each on separate pieces of paper.

☞ Do not fail to comply with the above suggestions.

APPOINTMENTS, NOTICES, etc., must reach us by Thursday night to be in time for the next issue. Please remember this.

Business Department.

Book and Job Work.

We are now prepared to do all kinds of BOOK and JOB PRINTING with despatch, and in a satisfactory manner. Books, Pamphlets, Tracts, Leaflets, Circulars, Envelopes, Letter-Heads, Note Heads, Bill-Heads Cards of all kinds, etc., etc. Our friends and the business public will do well to get our figures before ordering work elsewhere. Estimates cheerfully given.

A new edition of the "Harmonium," by J. W. Taylor Send in your orders.

The Swedish tract, "Pauli Trangtan och Hopp," by O. R. Fassett, is again ready for delivery, and can be had in large or small quantities at this office.

"Immortality," by James H. Whitmore, printed in the Swedish language. 206 pp. For sale at this office. Price 50 Cents.

We have just received a quantity of "Hymns of the Morning," with music, neatly bound in cloth or leather with stiff covers. Price, 50 cents cloth, 60 cents leather. Sent by mail or express.

WE are now ready to fill orders for the Rochester discussion between Chas. C. Barker and James H. Whitmore. Subject: "Is the definite time of the second advent revealed in the Holy Scriptures?" Price 50 Cents.

WE have now ready and for sale at this office, the new tract entitled "Sanctification: or The Gift of the Holy Spirit," written by Thomas G. Baxter, of Chicago. All requiring the same will please address the Business Agent, 25 West Lake street, Chicago. Single copies, five cents.

 Any book or tract treating of the Destiny of man, Soon coming of Christ, His Reign on the Renewed Earth, the Reward of the Righteous, and kindred Bible topics, can be had by addressing,

A. W. TUCKER, Business Agent,
25 W. Lake St., Chicago.

Letters Received.

☞ ALL letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgement is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

N Field
R Phinney 2
A Sanford
W McCulloch
A J Marsh
G W Turner
N O Miller
J S Wimbish
P W Hough
J Smith
A Friend
J L Hersey
C Marshall
J Seard
L F Cole
S S Mabey
M Grant
S C Wellcome
D S Weaver
G W Stetson
M McCulloch
E S Miller
J J Leslie
D O Amos
S E Lamphere
E Royce
E D Sargent
J K Morse
P W Powers
S Treadwell
L H Davis
R W Wilson
J S Meriam
G E Emery
C C Chadwick
E S Newton
J H Lutterdon
H M Benson
E Bee
L G Sovereign
A D Hearn
M L Finch
J McClellan
J P Smith
M Briggs
L A Tracy
M M Rowell
J M Clapp
D Thomas
S L Smith
J Auden
J Searce
J More
J J Smith
C D Berry
N Jewett
C W Cheney
G A Brown
J J Smith
D O Day
C W Waterhouse
F W Hough

Books and Tracts Sent by Mail.

G G Emery
L G Sovereign
A A Johns
C Goldfinch
W D Adams 2
E Bee
J L Hersey
S K Gibson
L H Little
L R Shaw
J D Carey
J Scarce
C D Berry 2
W H Hale
L Record
A Nye
J Paton
J S Lawyer
S S Brooks

To Correspondents.

S. POPE—We have just printed a new edition of the "Minstrel" which will be ready for delivery in a few days.

The $4000 Fund.

To Free the Society from Debt.

CASH.

Previously Reported	$670 80
C. W. Waterhouse	1.00

PLEDGES PAID.

Previously Reported	43 00
D. C. Day	5 00
J Ireland	10 00
P. Wexell	10 00
C. Wilsox	5 00
M. Stocking	10 00
A. N. Seymour	3 00
P. Lamphere	1 00
A. F. Adams	50
A. Armour	1 00
D. Weaver	20 00
M. Robbins	5 00
M. Johnson	5 00
A. Bemis	1 00

WESTERN TRACT FUND.

Previously Reported	30 00
Betsey Roe	1 30
H M. Benson	30
I H Lane	30
N Jewett	1 30

Notices.

As I have forgotten Br. S. K. Gibson's post office address, will he please inform us through THE TIMES why the annual conference of S. Iowa and N. Mo. is not called? and why it was voted away from where it was to be held? N. C. MILLER.

Marriages.

PROCTOR—FRINK.—At the residence of the bride's father, in New Rutland, Sept. 28, 1873, by Eld. Wm McCulloch, Mr Joseph W Proctor, and Miss Janette Frink, both of New Rutland.

STRODE—WILTSEY.—In Ioala, Warren Co., Ill., Oct 12, 1873, by Eld. Marshall McCulloch, Mr. Wm. Strode, and Miss Maria Wiltsey, both of Ioala.

Obituary.

POWELL.—Died, at New Rutland, Ill., Sept. 27, 1873, from the kick of a horse, Mr. Calvin Powell. Age unknown to the writer

The funeral was attended by the writer at the Advent Chapel in New Rutland. WM. MCCULLOCH.

DUNHAM.—Died, at Newburgh, Pike Co., Ill., Sept. 9 1873. Ann C., wife of John Dunham. Aged, 73 years and six months.

For twenty years she had been a believer of the truth as it is taught in the Bible; and she now rests in hope which will be realized when the Life Giver shall appear. A FRIEND.

STRONG.—In Byron Tp., Ogle Co., Ill., Sr. Caroline Strong, of scrofulous consumption, after a painful illness of several weeks.

She was one of the most patient sufferers I ever knew. Not a murmuring word escaped her lips. She was converted to God and baptized during our special meeting at Elida, last spring. She now sleeps in Jesus, blessed sleep. C. C. M.

Appointments.

ILLINOIS.

Genoa, Oct. 27, and every other Sabbath until further notice. E. H. BURINGTON.

New Rutland, LaSalle county, the first and third Sabbaths of each month.
Alexis, Warren county, special meeting Oct. 15-26, and longer if the interest demands.
C. C. MARSTON.

Lynnville, 10:30 a. m., first and second Sabbath's in each month.

Phelps S. H. second Lord's day of Oct. and Nov., at 10.30 a. m.
Lynnville, at 7 p. m.
Rochelle, first and third Sabbaths, as brethren may arrange.
New Rutland, fourth Sabbath, morning and evening.
After November three-fourths of my time will be to use as the way may open.
Such are my arrangements until further notice.
ALICE E. RATHBUN.

Preaching brethren coming to Chicago wishing to preach in Advent Christian Chapel, will correspond with H. P. WRIGHT, 203 Walnut Street.

Preaching in Chicago every Sunday, as follows: South Side, 216 Shirtliff avenue, at 10:30 a. m.
North Side, Lincoln Park, at 3 p. m.
Mission Hall, 619 West Lake street, at 7:30 p.m.
Prayer meeting in Mission Hall, Thursday evenings. P. O. Address, 619 West Lake street.
D. R. and M. S. MANSFIELD.

Advent Christian Mission, Cairo, Ill.—On and after Sunday, Aug. 31, services will be held in the school-room on the corner of Twelfth street and Washington avenue, opposite the Bulletin office. Morning discourse 11 o'clock a. m. Bible class for adults 4 p. m. Evening preaching at the ringing of the bells in the city. Brethren passing are cordially invited to call. H. JOHNSON,
T. S. THOMASSON.

To the friends of the Advent cause in Southern Illinois.—There will be a meeting of days, commencing at the Mt. Joy Advent Church, Johnson County, Sunday, Nov. 3, and continue over the second Sunday. Eld. Wm. McCulloch has consented to be with us on that occasion, and will probably remain for a number of weeks. Come, brethren, from all parts of this section of the State and work for the Lord. F. A. CHILDS.

Hinckley, 10:30 a. m., Sabbath, Nov. 2.
Eagle S. H., 2:30 p. m., Sabbath, Nov. 2.
C. W. SMITH.

Fairview, Bureau Co., Oct. 26.
Walnut Grove, Ferris S. H., Oct. 30, eve.
Mineral, Nov. 2.
Wyanet, Nov. 3.
Toulon, Winn S. H., Nov. 9.
Mineral, Nov. 16.
L. F. COLE.

MICHIGAN.

To the churches in Branch County, Michigan, I would say that my appointments for the year 1873 will be as follows:
East Gilead, Jan. 5, 10 a. m., and every two weeks after.
California, Jan. 12, 10:30 a m and every two weeks after.
Algansee, every Sunday 2:30 p m and evening. Prayer meeting every Wednesday evening.
Moscow, as Br. Buell may arrange, Nov. 10, eve.
Clinton, as Br. Fabrick " " 11,
Canton, as Br. Clark " " 12, 13,
Dearborn, Friday evening and over Sunday, Nov. 14, 16. J. B. PRESTON.

Pt. Sanilac, Advent chapel, every Sunday morning, at 11 o'clock.
Lexington, Everett's Hall, every Sunday evening 7½ o'clock. GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.
Lexington Lake Shore Advent Chapel, 3 miles north of village, Sabbath, Jan. 26, at 3 p. m., and every two weeks after.
Lexington Ridge, White S. H., Feb. 2, at 3 p. m. and every two weeks after.
GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.

Woodbridge, Johnson S. H., 10:30 a. m.
Bell S. H., 2:30 p. m., Sunday, July 20, and every two weeks thereafter.
Brodock S. H., Tuesday eve., July 22, and once in two weeks.
WM. BRANCH.

There will be preaching in the Louis S. H., Almer, Sept. 7, 3 p. m., and every two weeks.
In the Delling S. S., Almer, Sept. 7, 10½ a. m., and every two weeks.
In the Graham S. H., Fairgrove, Sept. 14, 10½ a. m. Centre S. H., 3 p. m., and in the Hinson S. H. 6 p. m. and every two weeks.
E. H. DURAND.

Porter Centre, Mich., Sept. 21, 10½ a. m., and 3 p. m., and every four weeks.
JAS. FERRIS, Pastor.

INDIANA.

Meeting every Sunday at the Volga Church, commencing at half past 10 o'clock, preaching alternately by T. V. Porter and the pastor,
LEMUEL RECORD.

Lavalle, Oct. 5, and every four weeks until further notice. Fairfield, Sept 12, and once in two weeks. Baraboo, Sept. 12, and once in four weeks. Webster's Prairie, Sept. 28, and once in four weeks. Fisher Valley, Sept. 21, and once in four weeks. E. P. GRAVES.

WISCONSIN.

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.
Call upon Brs. Bracket or Reese, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.
A. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

Springville, May 4, and every two weeks until further notice.
Dudley S. H., May 11, and every four weeks until further notice.
Chaseburg, May 17, and every four weeks until further notice. JOB BROWN.

The Second Quarterly meeting for the Eastern District will be held at the White School House, on Webster's Prairie, three miles south of Delton, Sauk Co., Wis., on Friday November 21, and hold over Lord's day. All are invited to come to this gathering. Will the Brethren in the ministry please to attend, and show to the world that we are in harmony in this work?
Preaching at Prairie du Sac, Nov. 20, in the evening. E. P. GRAVES.

Oct. 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, at Elk Creek, Trempealieu Co., as Br. J. D. Lewis may arrange.
Burns (Methodist House,) Nov. 2, at 11 a. m. and 7 p. m.
Sparta, Nov. 9, at 10.30 a. m. and 7. p. m.
M[illegible] divine counsel direct, and the ever b[illegible]it be signally present in these christian g[illegible]gs of the saints. P. W. HOUCK.

[illegible]ew house of worship, near Avalanche, Wis., [illegible] be dedicated on the 26th of Oct. Eld. [illegible]sen is expected to preach the Word. Meet[illegible] may be held several days after the dedication, by ANSON BROWN.

There will be a quarterly meeting at Williamsburgh, Trempealeo Co., in the northern district of Wis. conference, as Br. Lewis may arrange, to commence Friday eve., Oct. 31, and hold over the following Sunday. Eld. Adams and myself will be present. Come brethren and sisters, one and all. Let us have a refreshing season in the name of the Lord. G. W. TURNER.

Montpelier, Sunday, July 13, at 10:30 a. m., and 7:30 p. m., and every four weeks following.
Bridgewater, Sumner S. H., Monday eve., July 14, and once in two weeks thereafter.
WM. BRANCH

Preaching at the Cain S. H., Decatur Co., first Sunday in each month, at 11 a. m.
Duble S. H., 3 p. m., first Sunday in each month. J. F. ADAIR, Pastor.

Preaching in Thompson's Hall, Delmar, Clinton Co., Jan. 5, and every two weeks until further notice. C. W. PITCHER.

Manchester, the first and third Sabbaths of each months, at 11 a. m. and 2:30 p. m.
J. RIDLEY, Pastor.

MINNESOTA.

Ridgeway, Feb. 8 and 9, and once in four weeks.
P. MITSON.

The Lord willing, I will preach at Monticello, Wright Co., Minn., every Sunday at 10½ a. m.
Bally S. H., at Bally Station, near Elk River, Oct. 12, at 3 p. m. and every two weeks after until further notice.
Otsego Village S. H., Sunday Oct. 5, at 3½ p. m. and once in two weeks after, until further notice.
Lilly Pond, Sunday eve., Oct. 5, at 7 p. m., and once in two weeks after, until further notice.
Preach at Big Lake Station, Sunday eve., at 7 o'clock.
S. C. WELLCOME.

P. S. Our Covenant Meeting is held the last Saturday, before the first Sunday in each month, at 2 p. m., at the Monticello Chapel.

NEW YORK.

Saratoga Springs; meetings every Sunday in the Lower Town Hall, corner of Broadway and Lake Avenue, at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday School and Bible class directly after morning service.
Prayer meeting every Thursday eve., at the residence of the pastors, 213 Broadway, nearly opposite Town Hall.
Saratoga Springs, N. Y., prayer meeting every Thursday evening, at the residence of the pastors, Van Dam street, first house east of Broadway.
WM. A. and M. L. DURAND, Pastors.

OHIO.

The Advent Christian Church of Norwalk, Ohio, will hold its next regular Quarterly Meeting, Oct. 25 and 26, 1873.
The A. C. Church in Fairfield with their pastor, and all others interested and living in this vicinity are invited to be present.
For the Norwalk Church,
FRANK BURR, Pastor.

A meeting of days will be held at Rockbridge, O., commencing on the second Saturday in Nov. Br. Frank Burr will be our minister.
WM. H. HULS.

IOWA.

Warsaw, third Saturday in each month, in the evening.
Chester S. H., Sunday following, 11 a. m.
Corydon, 2 p. m. J. F. ADAIR.

Clinton, Iowa, July 1873. Gospel meetings held every Sunday. Prayer meetings on Thursday evening. S. B. MABRY, Pastor.

Broken Kettle S. H., the first and third Sunday of each month, until further notice.
HATTIE A. PLANK.

Preaching at Crook's School-house, Wayne county, Sunday, Aug. 24, at 3 p. m., and every three weeks until further notice.
A. A. DAVIS.

Will be at High Point, Decatur Co., Oct. 31, and over Lord's day, as Br. Adair may appoint.
Will visit Corydon and Warsaw, after this meeting. Will the Brethren at these places meet me there to perfect appointments.
S. K. GIBSON.

The Second Annual Conference of Southern Iowa and Northern Missouri, will commence Oct. 28, to be held at the Riddle S. H., Decatur Co. General invitation is given. Come one and all who can, to work for God and His cause. Br. S. K. Gibson, will be with us to preach the word. Done by order of the church. J. F. ADAIR.

The first session of the A. C. Q. Conference of Iowa, Manchester District, for the present Conference year is to be held at the Odell, School House, located about 2½ miles N. E from Greeley, Delaware Co., to commence Oct. 31, at 7½ o'clock p. m. Come one, come all. M. J. JAMES, Sec.

PENNSYLVANIA.

In Quincy Hall, 127 Leacoc Street, Allegheny, Wednesday evening, Nov. 26, and over Sunday, the 30th, as the brethren may arrange.
G. W. STETSON.

There will be preaching at Sutton's Corners, (first station below Meadville, on Atlantic and G. W. R. R.,) every evening from Monday, Nov. 3d, to Friday, the 7th, at such place and hour as the brethren and friends residing there may arrange and give notice of. G. W. STETSON.

MISSOURI.

There will be a special meeting at the McKinley S. H., eight miles east of Unionville, Putnam Co., Mo., to commence Nov. 14, at candle lighting, and continue over Sunday. The object is to organize a quarterly conference for the southern part of the annual conference known as the S. Iowa and N. Mo. A. C. conference. There are a small number of churches that have not as yet been known in the annual conference. Will Br. Snow be with us? Brethren, let us make a grand rally. N. C. MILLER.

Advertisements.

HADES
OR
The Intermediate State of Man,
BY HENRY CONSTABLE, A. M.

Author of The Duration and Nature of Future Punishment. This work consists of twenty-four chapters, 167 pages, at $1.00 per copy, and can be had by addressing A. W. TUCKER, Business Agent, 25 W. Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

"DOMESTIC" PAPER FASHIONS.

Agents Wanted.
SEND FOR CATALOGUE.
DOMESTIC SEWING MACHINE CO., N. Y.
49m7.

National Agriculturist & Bee Journal.

In its new form—16 large quarto pages—adorned with beautiful engravings, is now offered to subscribers with the choice of four beautiful Chromos, for $1.50; or with a choice Lithograph or Book, for $1.25 or for only $1.10 without any Premium. Only $1 10 in clubs of ten without any premium. One copy free, one year to the agent sending a club of ten, besides the regular cash commission or premiums; or one copy free as a premium for three subscribers. Send for a sample copy (sent free) and see our list of valuable Premiums and cheap outfit of Chromos, Lithographs, &c., offered very low to those who will act as agents. Write now before you forget it, to
H. A. KING & CO., 14 Murray St., New York.

LATEST GEMS OF MUSIC.
PRICE REDUCED.

The Second Edition, Hymns of the Morning, by Dr. Barker. Fifty-cents cloth; Sixty-cents leather

First Edition of Songs of Praise, by Dr. Abbott. Ten cents. Both books sent by mail for Fifty cents.

Address, C. W. SARGENT,
Box 436, Concord, N. H.

THE CHRISTIAN. A large live, Eight Page Family Paper, containing incidents, records of providences, sketches, music, poetry, true stories for young, old, saints and sinners. No sectarianism, controversy, politics, puffs, pills, or patent medicines. ONLY 50 CENTS A YEAR; 10 COPIES, $5.00. Send 10 CTS. for THREE specimens, BEFORE YOU FORGET IT! Volumes begin with Jan. THE LITTLE CHRISTIAN, FOR SUNDAY SCHOOLS; 5 copies, $1.00 A YEAR. Live TRACTS 1,000 pp. for $1.00. BEST GREEK AND ENGLISH CONCORDANCE in the world, $2.50. By a new and special arrangement, THE CHRISTIAN, and LLOYDS MAP OF PALESTINE will be sent for $1.00. Those wishing the Map on rollers (which is much the best) will send 25 cents extra. Address H. L. HASTINGS, Scriptural Tract Repository, 30 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

SUBSCRIBE FOR
The Millenarian,
A
New Monthly Periodical.

THE MILLENARIAN advocates the Personal Coming of Messiah, the Restitution of all things spoken by the Prophets, the Resurrection of the holy dead at the commencement of the Millennium, the overthrow of all anti-christian systems, the literal fulfillment of prophecy, a life of purity, and trust as necessary to an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom of Jesus our Lord.

Terms, $1.00 per year.

Address, H. V. REED, Norwood Park, Cook Co., Illinois. 10-'73

THE RAINBOW,
A Magazine of Christian Literature,
With special reference to the revealed future of the Church and the World.
Published Monthly, at $2.50 Per Year.
EDITED BY WM. LEASK, D. D.
Address, KELLAWAY & BROWN,
78 Newgate St.,
LONDON, E. C., ENGLAND.

To every New subscriber paying for THE TIMES one year in advance, also to every Old subscriber paying ALL ARREARS and one year in advance, we will send a copy of one of the following valuable works:

DEBATE ON
"THE STATE OF THE DEAD,"
Field vs. Connelly, 300 pp.
BIBLE DOCTRINE of the SOUL,
By Prof. Ives, 110 pp.
NATURE AND DURATION OF
"FUTURE PUNISHMENT,"
By H. Constable.

We have a large number of these good works which we want placed in the hands of the reading public, thereby doing good to them, and largely increasing our list of subscribers. We desire that every reader of the TIMES to at once enter earnestly into this good work.

Anyone sending Four New Subscribers With eight dollars, will receive their choice of the above works in addition to the one to each subscriber.

Begin the work at once. Sample copies of the paper sent on application. Address,

A. W. TUCKER, Business Agent.

THE
American Bee Journal

Established by the late Samuel Wagner in 1861, at Washington, D. C., is now published at Chicago, Ill., and edited by

W. F. CLARKE,
President of the North American Bee-Keepers' Society.

The American Bee Journal.

is the organ of no man, party, patent hive, or selfish interest. Its one aim will be to advance Apiculture.

We expect to give good value to all who subscribe, and the larger our hosts of readers the better value we shall be able to give them.

Lend us a hearty Vigorous Co-operation, and we promise on our part to SPARE NO PAINS to make this the

BEST SCIENTIFIC AND PRACTICAL JOURNAL OF APICULTURE IN THE WORLD.

SINGLE COPIES, TWO DOLLARS A YEAR IN ADVANCE.

CLUB RATES:

$1 75	per year, in clubs of	two	or $3 50
1 67	" " "	three	" 5 00
1 50	" " "	six	" 9 00
1 40	" " "	ten	" 14 00
1 25	" " "	twenty	" 25 00

Specimen Copies sent on application. Communications and remittances to be addressed to

W. F. CLARKE,
AMERICAN BEE JOURNAL,
25 W. Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

Chicago & North-Western Railway.

THE ROUTE DIRECT

From CHICAGO to OMAHA,
From CHICAGO to MILWAUKEE,
From CHICAGO to SHEBOYGAN,
From CHICAGO to ST. PAUL,
From CHICAGO to MADISON,
From CHICAGO to GREEN BAY,
From CHICAGO to MARQUETTE,
From CHICAGO to SIOUX CITY,
From GHICAGO to YANKTON, DAK.
From CHICAGO to GENEVA LAKE,
From CHICAGO to FREEPORT,
From CHICAGO to DUBUQUE,
IS VIA THE
Chicago and North-Western
RAILWAY.

In Going North, North-West or West
You cannot go amiss if you buy your Tickets Via this Route.

See that Your Tickets Read via
Chicago & N-W. Railway.

This is the Pioneer Route to and from
CALIFORNIA and the PACIFIC SLOPE.

Full information in regard to this Route will be cheerfully furnished by all Ticket Agents in the EAST, WEST, NORTH or SOUTH.

Running Through Five States,
This Great Railway Line, made up of nearly Two Thousand Miles of the best Railroad there is in the North West, offers inducements to the traveling public second to none in the country, and superior to any offered by its competitors.

Steel Rail, Shortest and Quickest Route, Westinghouse Safety Air Brakes, Miller's Safety Platform, Pullman Palace Cars.

Speed, Comfort and Safety, are combined, and render this the Great Route for the People.

IT REACHES
North, North-West and West,
And Traverses the Garden Spot of the World.
ILLINOIS, MICHIGAN, IOWA, WISCONSIN, AND MINNESOTA,
ARE ALL TRIBUTARY TO THIS LINE.

hicago Ticket Offices:
rner LaSalle and Randolph Street.
orner Canal and Madison Streets.
Kinzie Street Depot, cor West Kinzie and Canal Streets.
Wells Street Depot, cor. Wells and North Water Streets.

W. H. STENNETT, MARVIN HUGHITT,
Gen'l Passenger Agent. Gen'l Superintendent.

AGENTS. Terms Extra. "CYCLOPEDIA of Things Worth Knowing," 25,000 WANTS SUPPLIED. CHROMO RECEIPT BOOK. The greatest of the age. Continental Pub. Co., St. Louis, Mo.

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. XI.—NO. 12. CHICAGO, OCTOBER 28, 1873. WHOLE NO. 495

Advent Christian Times.
Published Every Tuesday by the
Western Advent Christian Publishing Society.
87, McCormick's Block, Chicago.

Poetry.

God's Beautiful City.

D. T. TAYLOR.

Far, far away, amid realms of light,
Hid deep in the azure beyond our sight,
Stands a beautiful city—so high and bright,—
Where is known no sorrow, nor death, nor night,
Beautiful city!
O blest abode! O home of God!
Whose streets by the feet of the sinless are trod.

They roam through the gardens of endless spring;
They crowd all the portals on rushing wing;
While the echoing domes of the palace ring
With the hymns of the angels that shout and sing.
Beautiful city!
Hark! Hark again! the angelic strain,—
As gleams through the crystal that burnished train.

There the life fires brighten, and burn, and roll
Over diamonds that sparkle, o'er sands of gold;
Where to breathe the sweet air yields a bliss untold;
And the dwellers immortal will never grow old.
Beautiful city!
We pierce the skies with longing eyes,
And yearn to inherit the golden prize.

It is said that the King in his power sublime,
When the last sands drop from the glass of Time,
And our world shall be robed in her Eden prime,
Will bring down that city to gladden earth's clime;
Beautiful city!
Bright capital, where saints will dwell
And reign on the throne with Immanuel.

As jewels dash on the brow of a queen,—
As the jasper and ruby in crowns are seen,—
God's city, wrapped in its silver sheen,
Will be set like a gem in the New Earth's green;
Beautiful city!
City of flowers and peaceful bowers!
Come down and illumine this dark world of ours!

I have heard in that city they wait for me;
That its gates stand open wide and free;
That the ransomed the King in his beauty shall see
And live in his presence eternally.
Beautiful city!
In royal state blest mansions wait,
And beckon us in through the pearly gate.

I shall go where the summers will always bloom;
I shall walk no more amid trial and gloom;
I shall bid farewell to the withering tomb;
I shall deck my brow with the conqueror's plume,
Beautiful city!
Let us enter in, a crown to win!
Our words but half tell of the glory within.

The Last Amen.

"Amen."—Rev. 22: 21.

Amen is a Hebrew word, signifying truth and certainty in the first place; and then our affirmation of something as a certainty, or our desire that it should be so.

But it is with the common use of it that we have now to do,—that use of it which we make daily when we conclude even our shortest prayer. Amen; that is, so let it be; let it be according to our request, and according to thy promise. Used in this way, it means much. It is the summary or recapitulation of the whole previous prayer; and therefore it should be uttered in no light or heedless spirit, with profound reverence and fervor; for it is 'in testimony of our desire and assurance to be heard that we say Amen.'

There are, however, different ways of using it; different feelings with which it is uttered; and it is to these that we would now attend.

I. There is the Amen of ignorance.—Simple and common as the word is, thousands use it without knowing what it means, or what they themselves intend. We might say that not one out of a hundred uses it intelligently. It is the approved way of finishing off a prayer; it is the word which intimates that the prayer is concluded,—that is all; and were it to be introduced at the beginning or middle, as well it might be, men would wonder. It is to them a word, no more; a concluding word or sound, where the voice ceases, and after which the eyes open, and the hands unclasped! This is the Amen of ignorance. Are your Amens of this kind? or are they uttered with the understanding,—the full realization of the large and solemn meaning which they contain?

II. The Amen of habit.—All are not ignorant of its significance. Ask many what they intend by affixing it to their prayers, and at once they will tell you. Yet mark them, and you will find the word slipping from their tongue without any corresponding thought as to its sense. They have uttered it quite unconsciously thousands of times. They would not terminate a prayer without it; yet it has become a mere word of habit, into which, when used, no feeling, no earnestness is thrown; a commonplace random expression, with nothing of soul attached to it, like a well without water; a mechanical utterance, into which they have been educated, and without which they would think the prayer incomplete, but which means no more to them than the oscillations of a pendulum, and which has no more connection with genuine prayer than have the garments in which they are dressed, or the floor on which they kneel. Are your Amens those of habit,—pieces of ornament,—the useless appendages of useless devotion,—or is your soul thrown into them? Are they the essence of your previous petitions,—the concentration and summing up of all your desires? Do you say 'Amen simply because you are done? or, like David, do you say 'Amen and Amen; the prayers of David the son of Jesse are ended,' that is, summed up in this? How many Amens of habit have you uttered? Amens of indifference, that are no better than mockeries? Nay, and do not some of us, whose petitions are fervent throughout, make void all their earnestness by the lifeless, mechanical, heartless Amen with which we sum them up? Is not our Amen sometimes the dead fly that spoils the precious spikenard of the apothecary?

III. The Amen of unbelief.—It seems strange that a word like this should ever be uttered in unbelief; yet such is the case. Nay, sometimes it would seem as if the most unbelieving part of our prayer is that which should be the most believing,—the Amen. We may well wonder how it should be so. It seems almost incredible that a word like this, meant to be associated with faithfulness, and truth, and certainty, should be connected with unbelief, nay, should be the utterance of unbelief—the frequent, the daily utterances of unbelief; yet so it is. Our unbelieving Amens are about the most melancholy parts of our prayers,—the worst indications of distrust in God. It is vain to speak of wandering thoughts, or excuse ourselves for such thoughts, by the number of our petitions. For here we have but one word, and in that one word our whole prayer is recapitulated and summed up; so that, if unbelief or vain thoughts had pervaded the previous parts, they might have been made up for, as one may say. Yet that single word is the vainest of the vain words spoken; that word in which faith seeks to infuse itself twice over into our prayer, is the word from which it is specially excluded. Oh what a reproach to us are our unbelieving Amens! What a mockery of God, and of his promises! The sin of these would be of itself sufficient to shut out our supplications. Yet how little we think of this! With what ease and carelessness do we pronounce that word of unbelief, which should have been the great and special word of faith!

IV. The Amen of faith.—This is the true Amen; the Amen of souls who have heard the gracious words of Him who can not lie, and who act upon these. Amen is the proper and natural voice of faith. Whether it is we who are speaking to God, or God who is speaking to us, we say Amen. In one case it is the expression of faith, in the other the response of faith.

But why should Amen be thus linked with faith? Because that which calls it forth is not simply a desirable thing, but a truth and certainty. Amen is not the mere utterance of desire,—earnest desire—but the believing desire. Let us see how this is. It has to do with such as the following:—

(1.) This free love of God.—It is God's testimony regarding his own free love that we listen to in the gospel; and our first belief of that gospel is our saying Amen to his declarations regarding that free love. And as we begin, so are we to go on. Each Amen goes back to this free love, to the begining of our confidence and is a renewal of that confidence. In every prayer we keep our eye on this; for without the recognition of this grace, this abundant grace, what would prayer be? Let all our Amens then do justice to the free love of God.

(2.) The truthfulness of God.—The faithful saying was that to which we first said Amen; for we had made discovery that there was the true utterance of Him who can not lie. We were satisfied that he could not speak an untrue word, nor promulgate a statement fitted to mislead, nor hold out to us a promise which he did not mean to fulfil. Being thus persuaded of the divine truthfulness, we 'believed the report;' we say Amen to each gracious declaration, satisfied of its absolute truth and certainty. So did we at the first; so do we to the last. God is true,—truthful, faithful; we will not make him a liar in any one thing, in any of our communications with him,—least of all in our prayers. Let all our Amens do justice to the truthfulness of God.

(3.) The power of God.—What he has promised he is able also to perform. He is able to do for us exceeding abundantly above all we ask. Our prayers rest themselves as much upon his power as his grace and truth. On this we rested when we first came to him as 'able to save unto the uttermost;' on this we rest still. Every prayer is a recognition of power, and of divine willingness to put forth that power in the behalf of all who will apply for it. It is infinite power—omnipotence. Let each Amen of ours do justice to the power of God.

In addition to these things, to which the faith of our Amens attaches itself, we would only further say that it specially leans upon the cross of Christ in connection with these three. It is round that cross that this faith flings its arms; it is here that it sits down in quiet satisfaction. It sees the grace, the truth, the power of God flowing to us through the blood of Golgotha; and it says Amen to all that God has testified concerning that blood; to the 'it is finished' of the Son of God upon the tree.

It is thus that the believing Amen of our prayers springs out of that which we know of God and his crucified Son. Knowing all this, shall our Amens be those of uncertainty or doubt? Shall they not be the Amens of faith? Shall we ever go to God mocking him with a distrustful Amen? Rather let each Amen be the utterance of triumphant faith? so that even though unbelief may have mingled with our previous petitions, we at the close dismiss all that unbelief, and, looking back upon each petition, quicken them into happy life by the believing Amen with which we conclude the whole.

V. The Amen of hope.—God has written much to us concerning our hopes. He has filled our future with 'things hoped for;' and he has bidden us desire them, wait for them, and pray for them. There is the hope of the kingdom, of the inheritance, of the glory; above all, there is 'the blessed hope' of the Lord's appearing. These hopes occupy large space in our expectations and prayers. They are still futurities; but they are certainties;—bright and blessed beyond what eye hath seen or ear heard. In our pleadings regarding these, we use the Amen of hope; realizing it as a hope that maketh not ashamed. We say, 'Hallowed be thy name,' and we add the Amen of hope; 'Thy kingdom come,' and we add the Amen of hope; 'Thy will be done on earth, as it is in heaven,' and we add the Amen of hope. We hear the Lord's own voice from heaven saying, 'Surely I come quickly,' and we add with the apostle: 'Even so, come, Lord Jesus. Amen!'

Are our Amens bright and big with hope? As we utter them on our knees before God, do thoughts of glory fill us? Does that glory stand out before our eye as a cetrainty,—a divinely revealed and divinely promised certainty,—a certainty quite as great as that which rests over the past? Each time we utter the Amen in connection with these blessed futurities, does our hope kindle up anew, the hope of calling up the Amen, and the Amen making the hope to shine out with fresh brightness? In anticipating such a future, how can we utter a cold, heartless, passive, or despairing Amen? Let all our Amens be those of exulting hope.

VI. The Amen of joy.—There is joy set before us, even as before our Master; it is joy unspeakable and full of glory. It is joy springing both from the past and from the future. It is the joy of conscious pardon; the joy of friendship with God; the joy of adoption and heirship; the joy of our whole new created being; the joy because of the blessedness in prospect. Past, present, and future,—all furnish us with materials for joy. And in our thanksgivings for the past, we breathe out an Amen of joy; in our consciousness of present peace and heavenly favor, we repeat our Amen of joy; in our pleadings for larger blessings to ourselves and to our world, we say Amen with gladness; and in our pressing forward to the mark for the prize of our high calling, looking for and hastening to the coming of the day of God, we say Amen and Amen with ever-deepening joy of heart.

How gladly should that word come forth from our lips! Should it ever have a sorrowful sound? It seems so full of comfort and exultation, that one wonders how we can ever utter it with a sorrowful heart. There is no shade upon the objects in regard to which we utter the Amen; should it not then be a word of joy at all times? Are our Amens such? Do they speak of joy? Do they arise out of joy? Do they cherish and augment the joy? Is the word sweet to us because of the joy which it contains and utters? Many a poor, gloomy Amen have we spoken, belying our profession, and misusing the word. Let us be done with these. Let our Amens be songs,—songs gushing up from the fullness of happy souls!
—Bonar's Bible Thoughts and Themes.

Be Alive.

Death is out of place in the service of the Lord of life. The living God does not choose dead servants. Idleness, laziness, stupor, and death in churches, and associations of Christians, are enough to astonish devils, and make angels sad.

The world calls us with ten thousand calls of pain, and want, and woe, and sin; and the voice of him who has all power in heaven and earth, sends us "into all the world," and bids us bear to every creature the glad message of his love and grace. And with such urgent calls, and such high commands sounding in our ears, shall we play, and trifle, and sleep, and die? Such a course is abhorrent to our nature, even in worldly things.

In the language of Arnot: "We like a leaping river better than a stagnant pool. It is far better to be worn somewhat by work, than corroded by the rust of idleness. If there are 'abominations in the earth,' a Christian does not exhaust his duty by 'sighing and crying over them.' 'Up, guards, and at them!' is a very good motto for our warfare; and in one phrase of Scripture we shall find both our strategy and our armament—'Speaking the truth in love.' This is not a good world for resting in, but it is a good world for working in; and if we are 'fellow-workers with God,' our labor will not be lost.—Christian.

Christian Inconsistency.—To hold high principles and live on low ones, is Christian inconsistency. We are all more or less inconsistent. There is no man whose practice is not worse than his profession, no one who does not live below his own standard. But absolute inconsistency is when man's life, taken as a whole, is in opposition to his acknowledged views and principles. If a man says it is more blessed to give than to receive, and is forever receiving, scarcely ever giving, he is inconsistent. If he profess that to please God is the only thing worth living for, and his plans and aims and contrivances are all to please men, he is wise for the generation of the children of the world; for the generation of the children of light he is not wise.—Select.

Convey thy love to thy friend as an arrow to the mark to stick there, not as a ball against the wall, to rebound back to thee; that friendship will not continue to the end that is begun for an end.—Quarles.

Emptying of self is but the preparation for being filled with spiritual fullness.

The Curse of Neutrality.

WM. CHAPMAN.

SERMON PREACHED BEFORE THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE, CONVENED AT UTICA, MINN., SEPT. 11, 1873.

"Curse ye Meroz."—Judges 5: 23.

In almost every work of reform there have been those who, while their judgments have deen convinced of the correctness of the views of the reforming party, have, nevertheless, ingloriously consulted their own ease, and have chosen to occupy a neutral position during the struggle, and thus be prepared at the termination of the conflict to avoid the reproach of the reformers if unsuccessful, or share their honors if triumphant. It was this spirit that actuated the inhabitants of Meroz, who were anathematized by Jehovah for the course they adopted. Those who are here referred to were Israelites; their nation had been mightily oppressed for twenty years by Jabin, the king of Canaan. "This was during the time that Deborah judged Israel." Wearied with oppression, the Israelites cried unto the Lord for deliverance. He heard their cry, and directed them to go forth against Sisera, the captain of the host of Jabin, promising to deliver their enemies into their hands. The Merozites, desiring to retain the favor of the Canaanites, who were very powerful (or for fear of Jabin's iron chariots), and yet not wishing to bear arms against their brethren, remained at home, and occupied a position of shameful neutrality. Meanwhile, the host of Israel, under Barak, having vanquished their enemies, returned with triumph and songs of thanksgiving. But the indolent, time-serving inhabitants of Meroz learned that they could not reject the claims of their country and their God with impunity. God was displeased with them; and instead of permitting them to share the triumph of their brethren, he places them under his malediction—directs their own countrymen to bitterly curse them: "Curse ye Meroz, said the angel of the Lord, curse ye bitterly the inhabitants thereof, because they came not to the help of the Lord, to the help of the Lord against the mighty." "Curse ye the inhabitants thereof," Why? Curse and not bless; because they came not to the help of the Lord, to the help of the Lord against the mighty; because they stood on neutral ground. The Merozites should have been interested in the work of the Lord; but refusing by their inaction, were bitterly cursed, and their city withered away, "like the fig-tree that was subsequently cursed by our Lord," so that we never read of it again. The Israelites were engaged in a work of reform, God's work, and there was no neutral ground upon which any of God's Israel could stand.

The tenor of the Scriptures is decisive: "Choose ye this day whom ye will serve," (Josh. 24: 15.) That the church were cold or hot. (Rev. 3: 15.) We cannot fold our arms, and in placid silence look upon the mighty battle going on between Truth and Error without God's curse hanging over us. Are we soldiers of the cross? We must fight. Are we competers for a crown? We must then run, and so run that we may obtain. In this world, "and these modern times," it behooves every Christian to be active for the truth. In these times theology is taught for Bible truths, and priestcraft "by Masters in Israel," sustained by the power of popularity, and not of the word of God. The lie of never die from his satanic majesty is raised up, "like Moses' brazen serpent upon a pole" for the gospel of immortality in this life; where men of all classes have hopes, and when asked to give a reason for the same, with meekness, fly at the reformer with sarcasm, and with the very same spirit that burned the martyrs at the stake, giving them the same appellation of infidels and heretics. God help us on this occasion to renew our position, that the curse of the Merozites may not rest upon us.

I invite your attention to four points: (1) God has reformers, pioneers of the truth. (2) Almost in every age of reform, some have remained sinfully neutral. (3) God's displeasure with this sinful, neutral class. (4) No portion of the Christian age ever needed a reform more than the present.

1. God has Reformers—Pioneers of the truth.

It has always been the policy of the advocates of error, when unable to sustain themselves by sophistry, specious reasoning and false logic, to stigmatize the advocates of the truth as innovators, disturbers of the peace, and dangerous to the harmony and interests of the community in which they disseminate those truths. Such was the course pursued by the rabble mob against Paul and Silas in Thessalonica, where was a synagogue of the Jews. Here Paul, the accused innovator, according to his usual custom, met the Jewish Rabbis and teachers, and reasoned with them out of the Old Testament Scriptures concerning Jesus of Nazareth, and his reasoning on this subject was so profound that many of the Jews were convinced, and professed their faith in the Saviour. Paul was a reformer, fearing not to gaze into the very jaws of death. And because of his great power over the minds of his hearers, the hatred and envy of the discomfited Jewish Rabbis was made manifest. Finding themselves unable to cope with the superior logic and masterly eloquence of Paul, they enlisted the prejudices of the rabble, and gathered a mob, and created a riot, and endeavored to lay violent hands upon him and his brother Silas, and accomplish by force, or superior numbers, what they could not effect by fair argument. They must however be arrested, and an accusation brought to bear against them, which soon followed in their train. It was this—"These that have turned the world upside down, have come hither also." God's reformers are those who boldly enter a field, where error has held undisputed sway, and fearlessly wields, amid giant powers of opposition the weapons of truth. He aims to entirely revolutionize the minds of the community in which he labors. A compromise between truth and error will not satisfy him; the whining for the mantle of peace,—"charity garments to cover the mutitude of sins,"—has no sympathy with him: the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth fills his heart, and gives vehement power to the startling message he delivers. The man himself, as well as his banner, is and must be seen in every conflict. No stabbings of truth, behind the old worn garments of error; but his words fall from his lips, on fire, burning with love to God and love to man, that they might have light and be saved. The reformer must be known, (like a living epistle, read and known by all men.) Truth being his motto, he must bear it forth into the ranks of the enemy, and not stand back from the scene of action on neutral ground. Old systems of error, however sacred on account of their antiquity, he boldly attacks. Though massive darkness has long brooded over the people, he aims to dissipate the gloom, and shed upon them brilliant rays of light. This work is a mighty one; the end for which he labors is noble and sublime. He holds a position in advance of the community in which he labors. Hence, he is subject to the prejudices of the circle in which he moves. God's reformers, however, must move with a spirit of meekness, and yet at the same time with a spirit of noble daring; these two graces must blend together. With meekness and love he must stand before the people, and at the same time having no fear to grapple with error, though sanctioned by age and supported by popular favor. He scruples not, if needs be, to stand alone (the champion of God's eternal truth.) With undaunted courage he braves the world's frown and satanic laugh. Every obstacle thrown across his path affords him a new incentive to increased activity. His heart burns, like fire shut up in his bones; and the heavy burden of truth that is on his mind. He lives for the people, a good self-sacrificing servant of the Lord. At first he may attract but little attention. In fact his work is sowing, while others will follow to reap. He meets not the pastoral blessings of a church, or the handsome gifts and donations, that fall to the lot of the peace criers of Israel. His wishes are not consulted, or his wisdom sought after; he is however looked upon with a cautious eye, and his name cast out as evil; and like his Master, "The great world's reformer," it may be said of him he hath a devil, is an infidel or skeptic,—are among the mild forms of accusation that fall to his lot. He is not calmly left alone unmolested to dash to atoms old theories—much loved and exalted traditions. Like the fierce storm that lashes into foam the waters of the briny ocean, stirring up its hidden sands, they stir up the popular mind until the entire community moves in angry surges, and persecution and sometimes violence ensues. But, thank God, the more bold the onset, the more forcible the elucidation of truth. He labors under every disadvantage. His friends whine around him, and urge him to be charitable, that he may walk with a good report among the society in which he once moved, with such ease and grace; and his pretended stand-bys, solicit him to be very lenient, not forgetting to spare the feelings of the old Mother of harlots, and all her daughters—in a word, to wear a lying mask, and compromise with error, that good may come out of it—that the masses might not know the reformer or his true character. This class of sympathizers are always tenacious for peace and purity, while within the sepulcher there is nothing but rottenness; such a class of compromisers claiming friendship and brotherhood to a reform, is worse than an open enemy—giving council and at the same time blinding the reformers eyes with dust. Such men (and there are not a few of them) that cling around the wheels of our denomination is a sore detriment to the moving of the car of God forward. We should remember, as God was in the bush, so his Spirit is in every reformer, moving them along with an irresistible will and power to perform that labor whereunto they are sent. As a church and a religious body we bear the appelation of innovators, and should thank God that we have left the daughter of error and take courage. Going forth bearing the cross. The servant is not greater than his Master, &c. We are reformers, we are opposing old customs and usages, and one of the oldest lies, (that man shall not die) that we have on record. Orthodox churches say we are sowing discension, destroying hallowed (by memory) institutions; but, like the old reformers, we see that these old forms and venerated institutions are the offspring of error, and that truth and righteousness demand their extermination. In the name of God then, my brethren, move forward; take no neutral stand-point, lest it be said to you, "Curse ye Meroz, curse ye bitterly the inhabitants thereof, because they came not to the help of the Lord, to the help of the Lord against the mighty." Fear not the scorn and contempt that may fall to your lot; you are only moving forth in the footsteps of your forefathers. Look at the case of Lot. "This fellow came in to sojourn, and will needs be a judge." Look at Moses, Paul, prophets—Martin Luther, and many more. They were charged with being innovators, nor can we escape the same charge of breaking up societies and churches, of turning (as it was said of Paul and Silas) the world upside down. Thank God then, I say, for if old theology trembles upon her ancient throne, we are doing something, and not standing on neutral ground. Let the world turn upside down, and men's theology with it, so that it may come at last with truth and the doctrines of the Bible right side up.

Ever since man fell God has been carrying on the work of reform; and every work that tends to make men better and happier, and bring him back to entire conformity with God's will, is really his work, though carried on by human instrumentality. Thus when he would disseminate the knowledge of his will, and holy character. He raised up and prepared, and used the jewish nation as the instruments to whom a revelation of himself was intrusted. When that nation forgot him and degenerated into idolatry, He raised up prophets to reform them,—Elijah, Isaiah and Jeremiah are foremost among the great reformers of that age. When the simplicity of Christianity became corrupted by its connection with the Romish church; and that church had corrupted every doctrine, and polluted by her unholy touch every ordinance of the gospel, God raised up with power the thunders of Luther, Zwingle, Calvin and others, to bring them back to some truth. When the Christian churches had forgotten the great command to go teach all nations, God raised up Wm. Carey to draw their attention to it, and through him originated the sublime work of modern missions; and to-day if the Christian church should stop but for a moment to study the history of the past and God's plans, we should bow our heads with holy reverence when a reformer moved in our midst—investigate his doctrines and choose for ourselves—saying what new light has God sent with him? Instead of casting out his name as evil, and in the same spirit of the Jews that would not have Christ or his doctrines, cry Away with him! Away with him.

(To be concluded in our Next)

Seances with the Human Brain.

Superstition has always been firmly enthroned among mankind; hence all phenomena which could not be easily explained have usually been ascribed to supernatural agencies. Many a theory of science which is now clearly demonstrated was believed in its infancy to be the work of either angels or demons. We do not now burn witches as our forefathers did, but in the rush and hurry of the present age we sometimes allow things to pass unchallenged, as the result of supernatural agency, which are explainable by natural laws. Hence, if a man or woman reveals the contents of a sealed letter, by placing it upon their foreheads; if the characteristics of a person are described by means of an autograph in the same position; or if the future is in any way foretold, it is claimed that the spirits of dead men are sources of information. Science, however, demonstrates that this is the legitimate result of the exercise of a certain faculty of the human brain; that we all possess the same power in greater or less degree; but as some people are natural poets or musicians, others are natural seers, by virtue of their mental organizations.

The power of foreseeing the future, to a certain extent, by the exercise of the reasoning powers, is universally conceded: but there is a more remarkable faculty produced by the combination of the reasoning with the intuitive organs, which enables its possessor to see or in some way realize the distant and the future as we do the present. There are many, without doubt, who do possess this faculty without knowing it; for, like any other natural gift, it needs cultivation in order to produce any great excellence. Still it has been sufficiently tested to prove, beyond a doubt, that it is a faculty of the human brain, and has been placed therein by the same power that gave instinct to animals and reason to man. Strong sympathy will often excite it to action; hence mothers are sometimes enabled to realize the condition of an absent child without the application of any physical medium to the brain. The most interesting experiments, however, are perf[illegible] the application of letters, manuscripts, or autographs, to the forehead. The mental influence of the author is strongly and directly conveyed by the pen, so that when his productions are placed upon the brain of an impressible person the result is certain and positive.

For first experiments letters containing earnest appeals, or important intelligence, must be selected, for impressions are more distinctly conveyed when the writing has been done under the influence of strong excitement. Hence a letter written by an agonized wife, soon after the death of her husband, being placed upon the forehead of a lady who knew nothing of either the letter or the writer, caused the stranger to burst into tears without knowing why, though she expressed herself as suffering from grief which to her was unaccountable. If the experimenter be very impressible, the letter or autograph may be held between the palms of the hands. He must keep himself, however, in a state of perfect repose, and watch his most delicate impressions, carefully reporting everything, no matter how trivial it may seem. He may at first perceive a slight warmth of the hands, or some gentle, indescribable sensation, gradually moving up the arm toward the brain, where its influence will soon be felt. If the letter possesses a strongly marked character, having been written under the influence of deep emotion, he will realize the same state of feeling that controlled the writer, although his sensations may at first seem too slight to be real. Hence it is sometimes necessary to question him closely, until he learns to investigate his own consciousness, and to report the result in full. Holding the letter between the hands, however, is with most persons a slow and uncertain process, and a direct application to the brain is always more satisfactory. But even in these cases it is well for the operator to propose such questions as will direct the mind of the subject into a systematic order of description, as it is desirable that his mind should remain in a passive condition, not even exerting itself enough to give arrangement to its own impressions. The questions should be merely suggestive, and not in any way leading, lest the subject should unconsciously be guided by them. We might ask, for instance: What is the leading impression? What do you say of the intellectual powers? What of the moral faculties? What of the energies? What are the principal faults or merits of the character?

The fullness of the description will be in proportion to the powers of the subject, and if he be really impressible and intuitive, he will, after a few examinations in this way, be enabled to describe character without the existence of questions. There are some in whom the faculty is so developed that they can grasp apparently the whole character at once, and speak of its details with the familiarity of perfect acquaintance, but there are comparatively few Generally the opinion is formed gradually from a careful study and grouping of the impressions received. Frequently the writer will appear before the mental eye of the experimenter with a characteristic expression of face or attitude, or engaged in some characteristic occupation. For instance, among several autographs that were applied to the head of Rev. Mr. G——, was one of Mr. Bascom, the eloquent Methodist minister, who rose by his own energies from an humble position. Mr. G—— remarked that the first scene presented to his mind, in connection with that

.tograph, was a rude forest home—a le clearing in the woods—the kettles inging over a fire from forked sticks, l a studious boy cultivating his mind id the wild surroundings. After .rds the scene changed; villages and tes sprang up; the youth was seen in er positions, and finally became an quent and powerful pulpit orator. course no experiment can be a fair if the subject has any knowledge what he is about to investigate. ychometric descriptions of character naturally colored by the different ntal positions of the persons giving m; as much so perhaps as a written tory by an honest biographer. If character is admired by the delinea- he will natural describe it in warmer ms than if he has no natural sympa- y with its object and aims. This t is illustrated by the following des- ption of John Quincy Adams, which s give by a clergyman who naturally mired such a character, and who s also accustomed to express himself warm terms. It was derived from genuine letter written by the old tesman. After describing his physi- l sensations Mr. K —— said: "I feel disposition to mirthfulness, it is a rious character. I should say he is sorbed in great subjects, and rarely s a smile on his face. It is one ose whole mental energy and tenor his thoughts are given to the vancement, the happiness, welfare, edom and prosperity of his country. is a patriot, a statesman, a Christian, d a benefactor of man. He would a man others would call forth and ofide in. He would be true to every ust. He has a good intellect and a ll balanced mind; is excitable, how- er, by anything which might aim a ow at free institutions. He has a great al of the character of John Quincy lams, but more, I should think, of hn Adams. I do not think his intel- t is equal to my conception of Web er."

A letter on public business relating the war, and written by a distin- ished general, was placed upon the rehead of F. R——, a young man of lucation and talent. He remarked: I feel pleasant, self satisfied. I could ake a good fighting man now. I ould like to see it going on. I know ho it is from my feelings. It General ——. There is no use guessing any ore."

Some persons have the intuitive owers so well developed that they can ake revelations of character and sur- undings without a genuine autograph, ren with a name that has been written y another party; but in these cases ey will often describe both the person aring the name and the writer of it. a drawing or painting is used—any- ing maybe that has the mark of indi duality affixed thereto—an idea will given, not only to the artist, but of he scene represented. So also with tters; sometimes the person written is described as well as the writer. ike any other faculty of the human rain, intution may be stimulated by esmerism, applied either to oneself or y another party; it then become what known as clairvoyance. Or it may e active during sleep, while the other rgans are at rest; hence we often hear f remarkable dreams—prophesies of he future, or revelations concerning riends at a distance. It is useless to ive illustrations of these, while dreams nd presentiments are so common. These is a lady, now somewhat ad- anced in years, living near Chicago, whose intuitive faculties are developed n a remarkable degree. We first be- ame acquainted with her, and learned f her peculiar powers, at the begin- ing of the great rebellion. It was the lay of the first battle at Manassas that small party of us sat upon a veranda, discussing anxiously the condition of our public affairs. During the conver- sation Mrs. W—— covered her face with her hands and remained, for a few minutes, oblivious to her surroundings. Suddenly she started from her chair, and seemed to shrink from impending danger. Her husband laid his hand upon her shoulder and asked why she appeared frightened. She replied that a regiment of cavalry seemed to rush past her, and one of the horses came near stepping upon her. She gave us a graphic description of the battle then in progress, and said the Stars and Stripes would be clouded in defeat, but that another battle would yet be fought upon the same ground, wherein our troops would be victorious. The next day the confirmation of the first part of the prediction was flashed over the wires, but it will be remembered that we waited long before the battle was fought that gave us the victory there. Her husband was a warm personal friend of the lamented Lincoln, and during the early part of his first term in the presidential chair, Mrs. W—— foresaw his re-election, and described the scene of the second inaugural. Before the conflict closed, her husband and son were both in the service; and it was in the midst of a hard and doubtful campaign that the son, Capt. W——, wrote home to know when the war would be closed. She gave him the required date, and described the scenes of rejoicing that would hail the coming peace; but she said that, amid it all, the President looked sad and anxious, and there was a dark cloud before him that she could not account for. Years after that letter was written, when Lincoln fell by the assassin's bullet, the mystery of the cloud was solved. This lady could then and now make known the contents of sealed letters, describe the writer and his surroundings, and also the condition and circumstances of the person to whom it is addressed.

Mrs. W—— is not a spiritualist, but directly the reverse, being a firm believer in the theory that death is a sleep, and that there can be no future life until the resurrection. A volume might be filled with illustrations of her mental powers, but this is unnecessary, as many others may be equally proficient. Some of her children inherited her talents in this respect. Her daughter who had all the intellectual faculties well developed, could, at the age of ten or twelve years, write simultaneously with both hands, upon different subjects, and at the same time read from a volume placed before her. This is the feat that perhaps not one person in a hundred can perform after years of practice. She also manifested an interest in medicine, and even wrote a prescription that cured a younger sister of an affection of the eye that had rendered her totally blind. This must have been purely the work of her large intuitive organs, as a child of her age had of course no knowledge of medicine. Her brother inherited similar talents, and at the age of thirteen or fourteen was nearly as good a psychometer as the mother. His father experimented with him upon themes of which he (the father) had no knowledge in order to see whether the will or mental condition of the operator had any effect upon the subject. For instance, a pile of autographs were mixed in a hat, and one at a time was drawn at random and placed upon the forehead of the boy, who very seldom failed to correctly describe the person and circumstances of the writer. His playmates, however, learned to call him a "fortune teller," and he refused to experiment farther, so that his intuitive faculties have now become much impaired by disuse.

Mr. Brown, of Iowa, has recently been giving some interesting experiments in Chicago, where his powers have been fully tested by literary men and scientists. He requests persons to concentrate their own minds upon any theme and place the hand upon his forehead, when he will readily reveal the subject of their thoughts; or they may secrete an object in any part of a large building, and he will lead them directly to the place of concealment.

Every impressible person, who experiments for the purpose of developing his psychometric powers, will fall into the habit of some particular method of concentrating his mind and receiving impressions. For instance, Mrs. W—— sits with her eyes closed, and sometimes covered, and the impressions upon her brain are usually symbolic, and received, like Mr. G——'s, in the form of pictures. The son had acquired the habit of looking mentally for a guide-board, whereon statements appeared to be written, while the daughter delivered her intuitive perceptions only in writing, and wrote with open eyes and in full possession of all her faculties. Mr. Brown has learned to look mentally for rays of light, that lead him to the object sought. Here is a large field for investigation, which is open not only to the scientist but to the multitude, for it requires neither costly apparatus nor years of study to render the experiments interesting.

No doubt there are many clairvoyants, or mind readers, who, not knowing the scource of their power, honestly ascribe it to the spirits of the dead; but some of the leading minds among them have learned their mistake, and candidly confess it. Such men as A. J. Davis, John McQueen, and S. P. Leland repudiate their old theories, having learned, in the language of Mr. Davis, that whatever they could do when they supposed themselves under spirit influence they could do equally well in a natural condition. Thus every form of superstition, whether it be the mutterings of a Grecian Oracle or the claims of a modern medium, must fall before the feet of advancing Truth. Science wins her way slowly, but she holds it surely. The dross of superstition and the webs of false philosophy perish together in her crucible. The systems and theories of falsehood crumble at her touch. It is only the word of eternal truth that comes forth like pure gold from the furnace, gleaming more brightly in the fiery test. —MRS. H. V. REED, in Chicago Illustrated Journal.

The Kingdom of Heaven's Election.

A. J MARSH.

How plainly does Rom. 8:28–31 show that there is a calling and election, or a foreordination and predestination by the Almighty, of which He foreknows who will be partakers: and just as plainly, also, does 2 Peter 1st chapter from the 3d to the 11th verse inclusive, show that this predestination or election, is totally predicated upon our own free will, by belief and obedience, or faith and works.

"To them who are called according to his purpose; for whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the first-born among many brethren. Moreover, whom he did predestinate, them he also called: and whom he called, them he also justified: and whom he justified, them he also glorified. What shall we then say to these things? If God be for us, who can be against us?" (Rom. 8: 28—31)

All men are called to repentance and faith and so to life eternal; but they do not all heed the call: a calling is made effectual by being heeded, i. e., by the hearer believing and obeying it; and the Lord well knows all who will do this; and it is his plan that they who do, must conform to the image of Christ, in all spirituality and righteousness in this life, and by immortal and glorified bodies in the world to come. By faith and obedience they are justified, and then conformed to the image of Christ, by putting on the "new man" (Col. 3: 10,) and having his spirit, with "fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life." (Rom. 6: 22.)

In the 2d Epistle of Peter, 1st chapter, we learn how this election or conversion is attained, viz., "Through the knowledge of him that hath called us," which corresponds with John 17: 3—"And this is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent;" and by the "exceeding precious promises" that this knowledge makes us acquainted with; we "become partakers of the divine nature." (See 2d (Peter 1: 4.)

Then in the 5th and 6th verses we learn how this election is carried on and ultimately won; and indeed it is a very plain, simple and easy way, through Christ strengthening us, to get into the kingdom of heaven. Here we have it:

"And besides this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness: and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity. For if these things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren (margin, "idle") nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. But he that lacketh these things is blind, and can not see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins, (being back slidden.) Wherefore the rather brethren, give diligence to make your CALLING and ELECTION SURE: for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall: for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ."

Dear reader, let us enter into this heavenly campaign, and prosecute the work faithfully, and thus gain an entrance into the kingdom, and secure our election to a crown and kingship.

"Jesus."

The most fascinating theme for a heart properly attuned, is the Saviour. There is something in the morning light to suggest Him, and something in the evening shadow to speak His prase. The flower breathes Him, the star shines Him, the cascade proclaims Him, all the voices of nature chant Him. Whatever is grand, bright and beautiful, if you only listen to it, will speak His praise. So now, when I come in the summer time and pluck a flower, I think of Him who is "the Rose of Sharon and the Lily of the valley." When I see in the fields a lamb, I say, "behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world." When in very hot weather, I come under a projecting cliff, I say:

"Rock of ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in thee!"

Over the old fashioned pulpits there was a sounding board. The voice of the minister rose to the sounding board and then was struck back again upon the ears of the people. And so the ten thousand voices of earth rising up, find the heavens a sounding board which strikes back to the ear of all the nations the praises of Christ. The heavens tell His glory and the earth shows his handiwork. The Bible thrills with one great story of redemption. Upon a blasted and faded Paradise, it poured the light of glorious restoration. It looked upon Abraham from the ram caught in the thicket. It spoke in the bleating of the herds driven down to Jerusalem for sacrifice. It put infinite pathos into the speach of uncouth fishermen. It lifted Paul into the seventh heaven, and it broke upon the ear of St. John with the brazen trumpets and the doxology of the elders, and the rushing wings of the seraphim.

Instead of waiting until you get sick and worn out before you speak the praise of Christ, while your heart is happiest, and your step is lightest, and your fortunes smile, and your pathway blossoms, and the overarching heavens drop upon you their benediction, speak the praises of Jesus.

The old Greek orators when they saw their audiences inattentive and slumbering, had one word with which they would rouse them up to the greatest enthusiasm. In the midst of their orations, they would stop and cry out, "MARATHON!" and the people's enthusiasm would be unbounded. My hearers, though you may have been borne down with sin, and though trouble, and trials, and temptation, may have come upon you, and you feel to-night hardly like looking up, methinks there is one grand, royal, imperial word that ought to rouse your soul to infinite rejoicing, and that word is "Jesus."—From a Sermon on "Christian Song," by Rev T De Witt Talmage.

The Christian Life.

Time is Passing.

Time is running in his chariot,
  Rapidly his wheels go round;
Though they leave no dust behind them
  Though they have no rumbling sound;
Silently they bear us onward.
  Soon our journey will be o'er,
Soon our feet shall press the meadows
  Of the vast eternal shore.

Flying months and years remind us
  Of the world we're passing to;
Let us leave good deeds behind us,
  In the world we're passing through,
Which shall be the seeds of kindness,
  Watered by celestial dew,
And shall bear good fruit for others—
  Fruits of joy, and peace, and love—
Which shall lead to songs of triumph,
  In the immortal land above.

Men are born and men are dying,
  Thousands come, not one to stay;
Time is swift, his wheels are flying,
  Never ceasing, night or day.
For the laughter, nor the crying,
  For the stricken or the gay;
Crushing down the God-defying—
  They who laugh at death's delay;
And for sorrow, sin, and sighing,
  Bearing gentle souls away.

Plans and schemes of men and nations,
  Hearts and homes and homesteads free,
Granite walls and art's creations,
  All the eye delights to see.
All the ear delights in hearing,
  Crumble, tumble, fall and fade.
Oh! we need a world more cheering,
  Free from graves and cypress shade.
Thanks to God! that world we're nearing
  In eternal sapphires laid.

The Latter Rain.

It is very usual in the life of grace for the soul to receive, in after years, a second very remarkable visitation of the Holy Spirit, which may be compared to the latter rain. The latter rain was sent to plump out the wheat, and make it full, mature, ready for the after harvest ripening. So there is a time of special grace granted saints, to prepare them for glory, to make them completely meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light.

To some this is given in the form of what is very commonly, and I think correctly, been called a second conversion. "When thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren," was Christ's remark to Peter, who was even then a converted man. My brethren, there is a point in grace as much above the ordinary Christian, as the ordinary Christian is above the worldling. Believe me, the life of grace is no dead level; it is not a fen country—a vast flat. There are mountains, and there are valleys. There are tribes of Christians who live in the valleys, like the poor Swiss of the Valois, who live in the midst of the miasma, where fever has its lair, and the frame is languid and enfeebled. Such dwellers in the lowlands of unbelief are forever doubting, fearing, troubled about their interest in Christ, and tossed to and fro; but there are other believers who, by God's grace, have climbed the mountain of full assurance and near communion. Their place is with the eagle in his eyrie, high aloft. They are like the strong mountaineer, who has trodden the virgin snow, who has breathed the fresh, free air of the Alpine regions, and therefore his sinews are braced, and limbs are vigorous; these are they who do great exploits, being mighty men—men of renown. The saints who dwell on high in the clear atmosphere of faith are rejoicing Christians—holy and devout men, doing service for the Master all over the world, and everywhere conquerors through him that loved them. And I desire, oh! how earnestly I desire you to be such men. My craving is that all of you, my beloved, who have been watered by the former rain, may also be refreshed by a more than ordinary latter rain, which shall make you more than ordinary Christians, bringing you beyond the blade period and the ear period, into the full corn in the ear.—Spurgeon.

.tograph, was a rude forest home—a le clearing in the woods—the kettles nging over a fire from forked sticks, l a studious boy cultivating his mind id the wild surroundings. After .rds the scene changed; villages and ies sprang up; the youth was seen in .er positions, and finally became an quent and powerful pulpit orator. course no experiment can be a fair .e if the subject has any knowledge what he is about to investigate. ychometric descriptions of character naturally colored by the different ntal positions of the persons giving m; as much so perhaps as a written story by an honest biographer. If character is admired by the delinea- he will natural describe it in warmer ms than if he has no natural sympa- y with its object and aims. This t is illustrated by the following des- ption of John Quincy Adams, which .s give by a clergyman who naturally mired such a character, and who .s also accustomed to express himself warm terms. It was derived from genuine letter written by the old atesman. After describing his physi- .l sensations Mr. K —— said: "I feel disposition to mirthfulness, it is a rious character. I should say he is sorbed in great subjects, and rarely s a smile on his face. It is one hose whole mental energy and tenor his thoughts are given to the vancement, the happiness, welfare, edom and prosperity of his country. is a patriot, a statesman, a Christian, d a benefactor of man. He would a man others would call forth and nfide in. He would be true to every ust. He has a good intellect and a ll balanced mind; is excitable, how- er, by anything which might aim a ow at free institutions. He has a great al of the character of John Quincy lams, but more, I should think, of hn Adams. I do not think his intel- t is equal to my conception of Web er."

A letter on public business relating the war, and written by a distin- ished general, was placed upon the rehead of F. R——, a young man of ucation and talent. He remarked: I feel pleasant, self satisfied. I could ake a good fighting man now. I uld like to see it going on. I know ho it is from my feelings. It General ——. There is no use guessing any ore."

Some persons have the intuitive wers so well developed that they can ake revelations of character and sur- undings without a genuine autograph, en with a name that has been written y another party; but in these cases ey will often describe both the person aring the name and the writer of it. a drawing or painting is used—any- ing maybe that has the mark of indi iduality affixed thereto—an idea will given, not only to the artist, but of he scene represented. So also with tters; sometimes the person written is described as well as the writer. ike any other faculty of the human rain, intution may be stimulated by esmerism, applied either to oneself or y another party; it then become what known as clairvoyance. Or it may active during sleep, while the other rgans are at rest; hence we often hear f remarkable dreams—prophesies of he future, or revelations concerning riends at a distance. It is useless to ive illustrations of these, while dreams nd presentiments are so common. There is a lady, now somewhat ad- anced in years, living near Chicago, whose intuitive faculties are developed n a remarkable degree. We first be- ame acquainted with her, and learned of her peculiar powers, at the begin- ing of the great rebellion. It was the lay of the first battle at Manassas that small party of us sat upon a veranda, discussing anxiously the condition of our public affairs. During the conver- sation Mrs. W—— covered her face with her hands and remained, for a few minutes, oblivious to her surroundings. Suddenly she started from her chair, and seemed to shrink from impending danger. Her husband laid his hand upon her shoulder and asked why she appeared frightened. She replied that a regiment of cavalry seemed to rush past her, and one of the horses came near stepping upon her. She gave us a graphic description of the battle then in progress, and said the Stars and Stripes would be clouded in defeat, but that another battle would yet be fought upon the same ground, wherein our troops would be victorious. The next day the confirmation of the first part of the prediction was flashed over the wires, but it will be remembered that we waited long before the battle was fought that gave us the victory there. Her husband was a warm personal friend of the lamented Lincoln, and during the early part of his first term in the presidential chair, Mrs. W—— foresaw his re-election, and described the scene of the second inaugural. Before the conflict closed, her husband and son were both in the service; and it was in the midst of a hard and doubtful campaign that the son, Capt. W——, wrote home to know when the war would be closed. She gave him the required date, and described the scenes of rejoicing that would hail the coming peace; but she said that, amid it all, the President looked sad and anxious, and there was a dark cloud before him that she could not account for. Years after that letter was written, when Lincoln fell by the assassin's bullet, the mystery of the cloud was solved. This lady could then and now make known the contedts of sealed letters, describe the writer and his surroundings, and also the condition and circumstances of the person to whom it is addressed.

Mrs. W—— is not a spiritualist, but directly the reverse, being a firm believer in the theory that death is a sleep, and that there can be no future life until the resurrection. A volume might be filled with illustrations of her mental powers, but this is unnecessary, as many others may be equally proficient. Some of her children inherited her talents in this respect. Her daughter who had all the intellectual faculties well developed, could, at the age of ten or twelve years, write simultaneously with both hands, upon different subjects, and at the same time read from a volume placed before her. This is the feat that perhaps not one person in a hundred can perform after years of practice. She also manifested an interest in medicine, and even wrote a prescription that cured a younger sister of an affection of the eye that had rendered her totally blind. This must have been purely the work of her large intuitive organs, as a child of her age had of course no knowledge of medicine. Her brother inherited similar talents, and at the age of thirteen or fourteen was nearly as good a psychometer as the mother. His father experimented with him upon themes of which he (the father) had no knowledge in order to see whether the will or mental condition of the operator had any effect upon the subject. For instance, a pile of autographs were mixed in a hat, and one at a time was drawn at random and placed upon the forehead of the boy, who very seldom failed to correctly describe the person and circumstances of the writer. His playmates, however, learned to call him a "fortune teller," and he refused to experiment farther, so that his intuitive faculties have now become much impaired by disuse.

Mr. Brown, of Iowa, has recently been giving some interesting experiments in Chicago, where his powers have been fully tested by literary men and scientists. He requests persons to concentrate their own minds upon any theme and place the hand upon his forehead, when he will readily reveal the subject of their thoughts; or they may secrete an object in any part of a large building, and he will lead them directly to the place of concealment.

Every impressible person, who experiments for the purpose of developing his psychometric powers, will fall into the habit of some particular method of concentrating his mind and receiving impressions. For instance, Mrs. W—— sits with her eyes closed, and sometimes covered, and the impressions upon her brain are usually symbolic, and received, like Mr. G——'s, in the form of pictures. The son had acquired the habit of looking mentally for a guide board, whereon statements appeared to be written, while the daughter delivered her intuitive perceptions only in writing, and wrote with open eyes and in full possession of all her faculties. Mr. Brown has learned to look mentally for rays of light, that lead him to the object sought. Here is a large field for investigation, which is open not only to the scientist but to the multitude, for it requires neither costly apparatus nor years of study to render the experiments interesting.

No doubt there are many clairvoyants, or mind readers, who, not knowing the soource of their power, honestly ascribe it to the spirits of the dead; but some of the leading minds among them have learned their mistake, and candidly confess it. Such men as A. J. Davis, John McQueen, and S. P. Leland repudiate their old theories, having learned, in the language of Mr. Davis, that whatever they could do when they supposed themselves under spirit influence they could do equally well in a natural condition. Thus every form of superstition, whether it be the mutterings of a Grecian Oracle or the claims of a modern medium, must fall before the feet of advancing Truth. Science wins her way slowly, but she holds it surely. The dross of superstition and the webs of false philosophy perish together in her crucible. The systems and theories of falsehood crumble at her touch. It is only the word of eternal truth that comes forth like pure gold from the furnace, gleaming more brightly in the fiery test. —MRS. H. V. REED, in Chicago Illustrated Journal.

The Kingdom of Heaven's Election.

A. J. MARSH.

How plainly does Rom. 8:28–31 show that there is a calling and election, or a foreordination and predestination by the Almighty, of which He foreknows who will be partakers: and just as plainly, also, does 2 Peter 1st chapter from the 3d to the 11th verse inclusive, show that this predestination or election, is totally predicated upon our own free will, by belief and obedience, or faith and works.

"To them who are called according to his purpose; for whom he did fore know, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the first-born among many brethren. Moreover, whom he did predestinate, them he also called: and whom he called, them he also justified: and whom he justified, them he also glorified. What shall we then say to these things? If God be for us, who can be against us?" (Rom. 8: 28—31)

All men are called to repentance and faith and so to life eternal; but they do not all heed the call: a calling is made effectual by being heeded, i. e., by the hearer believing and obeying it; and the Lord well knows all who will do this; and it is his plan that they who do, must conform to the image of Christ, in all spirituality and righteousness in this life, and by immortal and glorified bodies in the world to come. By faith and obedience they are justified, and then conformed to the image of Christ, by putting on the "new man" (Col. 3: 10,) and having his spirit, with "fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life." (Rom. 6: 22.)

In the 2d Epistle of Peter, 1st chapter, we learn how this election or conversion is attained, viz., "Through the knowledge of him that hath called us," which corresponds with John 17: 3— "And this is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent;" and by the "exceeding precious promises" that this knowledge makes us acquainted with; we "become partakers of the divine nature." (See 2d (Peter 1: 4.)

Then in the 5th and 6th verses we learn how this election is carried on and ultimately won; and indeed it is a very plain, simple and easy way, through Christ strengthening us, to get into the kingdom of heaven. Here we have it:

"And besides this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness: and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity. For if these things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren (margin, "idle") nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. But he that lacketh these things is blind, and can not see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins, (being back slidden.) Wherefore the rather brethren, give diligence to make your CALLING and ELECTION SURE: for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall: for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ."

Dear reader, let us enter into this heavenly campaign, and prosecute the work faithfully, and thus gain an entrance into the kingdom, and secure our election to a crown and kingship.

"Jesus."

The most fascinating theme for a heart properly attuned, is the Saviour. There is something in the morning light to suggest Him, and something in the evening shadow to speak His prase. The flower breathes Him, the star shines Him, the cascade proclaims Him, all the voices of nature chant Him. Whatever is grand, bright and beautiful, if you only listen to it, will speak His praise. So now, when I come in the summer time and pluck a flower, I think of Him who is "the Rose of Sharon and the Lily of the valley." When I see in the fields a lamb, I say, "behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world." When in very hot weather, I come under a projecting cliff, I say:

"Rock of ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in thee!"

Over the old fashioned pulpits there was a sounding board. The voice of the minister rose to the sounding board and then was struck back again upon the ears of the people. And so the ten thousand voices of earth rising up, find the heavens a sounding board which strikes back to the ear of all the nations the praises of Christ. The heavens tell His glory and the earth shows his handiwork. The Bible thrills with one great story of redemption. Upon a blasted and faded Paradise, it poured the light of glorious restoration. It looked upon Abraham from the ram caught in the thicket. It spoke in the bleating of the herds driven down to Jerusalem for sacrifice. It put infinite pathos into the speach of uncouth fishermen. It lifted Paul into the seventh heaven, and it broke upon the ear of St. John with the brazen trumpets and the doxology of the elders, and the rushing wings of the seraphim.

Instead of waiting until you get sick and worn out before you speak the praise of Christ, while your heart is happiest, and your step is lightest, and your fortunes smile, and your pathway blossoms, and the overarching heavens drop upon you their benediction, speak the praises of Jesus.

The old Greek orators when they saw their audiences inattentive and slumbering, had one word with which they would rouse them up to the greatest enthusiasm. In the midst of their orations, they would stop and cry out, "MARATHON!" and the people's enthusiasm would be unbounded. My hearers, though you may have been borne down with sin, and though trouble, and trials, and temptation, may have come upon you, and you feel to-night hardly like looking up, methinks there is one grand, royal, imperial word that ought to rouse your soul to infinite rejoicing, and that word is "Jesus."—From a Sermon on "Christian Song," by Rev T De Witt Talmage.

The Christian Life.

Time is Passing.

Time is running in his chariot,
Rapidly his wheels go round;
Though they leave no dust behind them
Though they have no rumbling sound;
Silently they bear us onward,
Soon our journey will be o'er,
Soon our feet shall press the meadows
Of the vast eternal shore.

Flying months and years remind us
Of the world we're passing to;
Let us leave good deeds behind us,
In the world we're passing through,
Which shall be the seeds of kindness,
Watered by celestial dew,
And shall bear good fruit for others—
Fruits of joy, and peace, and love—
Which shall lead to songs of triumph,
In the immortal land above.

Men are born and men are dying,
Thousands come, not one to stay;
Time is swift, his wheels are flying,
Never ceasing, night or day.
For the laughter, nor the crying,
For the stricken or the gay;
Crushing down the God-defying—
They who laugh at death's delay;
And for sorrow, sin, and sighing,
Bearing gentle souls away.

Plans and schemes of men and nations,
Hearts and homes and homesteads free,
Granite walls and art's creations,
All the eye delights to see.
All the ear delights in hearing,
Crumble, tumble, fall and fade.
Oh! we need a world more cheering,
Free from graves and cypress shade.
Thanks to God! that world we're nearing
In eternal sapphires laid.

The Latter Rain.

It is very usual in the life of grace for the soul to receive, in after years, a second very remarkable visitation of the Holy Spirit, which may be compared to the latter rain. The latter rain was sent to plump out the wheat, and make it full, mature, ready for the after harvest ripening. So there is a time of special grace granted saints, to prepare them for glory, to make them completely meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light.

To some this is given in the form of what is very commonly, and I think correctly, been called a second conversion. "When thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren," was Christ's remark to Peter, who was even then a converted man. My brethren, there is a point in grace as much above the ordinary Christian, as the ordinary Christian is above the worldling. Believe me, the life of grace is no dead level; it is not a fen country—a vast flat. There are mountains, and there are valleys. There are tribes of Christians who live in the valleys, like the poor Swiss of the Valois, who live in the midst of the miasma, where fever has its lair, and the frame is languid and enfeebled. Such dwellers in the lowlands of unbelief are forever doubting, fearing, troubled about their interest in Christ, and tossed to and fro; but there are other believers who, by God's grace, have climbed the mountain of full assurance and near communion. Their place is with the eagle in his eyrie, high aloft. They are like the strong mountaineer, who has trodden the virgin snow, who has breathed the fresh, free air of the Alpine regions, and therefore his sinews are braced, and limbs are vigorous; these are they who do great exploits, being mighty men—men of renown. The saints who dwell on high in the clear atmosphere of faith are rejoicing Christians—holy and devout men, doing service for the Master all over the world, and everywhere conquerors through him that loved them. And I desire, oh! how earnestly I desire you to be such men. My craving is that all of you, my beloved, who have been watered by the former rain, may also be refreshed by a more than ordinary latter rain, which shall make you more than ordinary Christians, bringing you beyond the blade period and the ear period, into the full corn in the ear.—Spurgeon.

Advent Christian Times.

WM. SHELDON, - EDITOR.

Give your Name, Postoffice, County and State every time you write.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, October 28, 1873.

THE Chicago Exposition is attracting multitudes from every quarter, and from a human standpoint, is pronounced a success.

BR. J. W. BURRETT, of Effingham City, Effingham Co., Ill., requests the P. O. address of I. H. Burritt. Will he please give it?

BR. C. MARSHAL, of Elm Wood, Saline Co., Mo., wishes some minister of our faith to settle in that vicinity, and devote his time to the ministry for the coming year. Write him as above.

Do stop it. Please stop writing for the paper with a pencil. Use a pen and ink, and take pains, too, to write plain. Better re-write and abridge your articles. It will pay to take the time.

BR. MANSFIELD and family took their departure from Chicago for their new field of labor in Minnesota on Tuesday, 21st instant. Hereafter their address will be at Minneapolis, Minn. They take with them the best wishes of many warm friends for their future happiness and welfare. T.

THE recent financial panic has served to tighten the purse-strings of our patrons in every quarter. Now that a reaction is taking place, please remember that your littles are necessary to help meet our outgoes at the office, and withhold no longer. Please keep even with the office, that we may keep even with our dealers.

IN response to inquiries about the curative properties of the Waukesha water for kidney complaints, &c., we can only say that it has a tendency to temporarily relieve the difficulty—this is all we know about it—though it has the reputation of permanently curing, and perhaps justly so. Further we cannot say.

ALL orders for tracts or books are recorded on our order book. It often happens that we have on hand only a part of the works ordered, and so send only a part at the time, but the others will be sent in every case as soon as we get a supply; so let no one fear that a mistake is made because they get only a part of the works ordered at once.

FINANCIAL embarrassment is staring our office in the face. Our income, as the result of the recent panic, is very small (outside of what is designed for the debt), so that we are able to pay our employes only part of their wages, and the present editor has never received enough to pay his board. We expect others feel the hard times as well as we; but cannot those who are in arrears to the paper manage to pay at least a part of what is due the office. Let us have a generous response this week.

WHEN several articles are sent about the same time, on a similar subject, we sometimes are obliged to defer some of them for a time, and put in others written later, even, on a different topic, so as to have a variety, and not have the paper monopolized by any one theme. This will explain some delays in the past, and some that are liable to occur in the future. It sometimes happens that we have a scarcity of articles on themes we wish to present in the paper, while we have an overplus on other subjects. Keep us well supplied with articles, and allow us to take our time to publish.

Arrearages.

If those subscribers who are in arrears will remit without further delay, it would greatly help the office at the present time. All can determine how their accounts stand by looking at the direction label on the paper or its wrapper.

IN the New Jerusalem Messenger (Swedenborgian organ) we find the following statement of faith concerning the second coming of Christ:

> Now is the time of the Second Coming of the Lord, foretold in Matt. 24, and the establishment of the New Church signified by the New Jerusalem in Revelations 21., and this Second Coming is not a visible appearance on earth, but a new disclosure of Divine Truth and the promulgation of true Christian Doctrine, effected by means of the Lord's servant, Emanuel Swedenborg, who was specially instructed in this Doctrine, and commissioned to published it to the world.

We like the Bible statement best: "This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." "Behold, he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him." "Wait for this (God's) Son from heaven, whom he raised from the dead, even Jesus." "If I go away, I will come again."

Theological Death.

In the Journal and Messenger, we find a report of a sermon preached before the "Philadelphia Baptist Pastors' Conference," by Rev. A. J. Rowland, on the "meaning of the word death," from Rom. 5:12: "As by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men."

Mr. Rowland says:

> A class of writers, of whom C. F. Hudson and H. H. Dobney are prominent examples, affirm that the word "death," as used throughout the Scriptures, invariably means the entire extinction of personal and conscious being. In opposition to these men we maintain that it is never so used. Sometimes, indeed, it is employed to designate the departure of the soul from the body, as in the passage, "It is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment;" but in many other, perhaps the most other places, it has a spiritual or tropical sense. Death is not so much the extinction of being as of well being—a state of excision from the sources of true goodness and joy.

We simply affirm that death is the opposite of life, or the absence of life—that literal death is the absence of literal life, and spiritual death is the absence of spiritual life—and we insist that consciousness is impossible without literal life; hence, literal death ends consciousness.

1. Mr. Rowland quotes a text to prove that death sometimes means "the departure of the soul from the body."—"Is is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment;" but this text says nothing about the departure of the soul. Death brings men into bondage, and holds them there till the resurrection arrives; then they will be judged—not before.

2. Mr. Rowland, however, concludes that death, in "most other places," means "a state of excision from the sources of true goodness and joy," Let us try the gentleman's definition and see whether it will work smoothly, or like sand among the wheels of a watch: "For me to die again," or "For me to experience a state of excision from the sources of true goodness and joy, is gain"—is that it? "Christ died for our sins," or, according to this new definition, "Christ experienced a state of excision from the sources of true goodness and joy"—is that the meaning? Christ's death, certainly, was penal, for "the Lord laid on him the iniquity of us all," and he "died for the ungodly."

Mr. Rowland continues:

> In this profounder meaning it is employed in this passage, as is evident from the following considerations:
>
> 1. Physical death seems to have been in the world before Adam's sin, as the Record of the Rocks shows. We have no certain ground for affirming that Adam and his descendants, had they remained sinless, would have had an earthly immortality.

If death was in the world before Adam sinned, and if Adam and his posterity would have died "had they remained sinless," how could the apostle have affirmed that death came "by sin"? Nor can this death mean "a state of excision from the sources of true goodness and joy," for Paul affirms, "Death reigned from Adam to Moses, even over them that had not sinned;" and certainly "a state of excision from the sources of true goodness" did not prevail over those who had not sinned.

Mr. Rowland continues:

> 2. The arguments of the passage requires us to give the deeper meaning to the word. Death is spoken of by the apostles as a penal infliction for sin. But penalty should be adequate to the guilt incurred. Physical death or even annihilation, would not be adequate. Many men would accept such a visitation with delight. A state of guilt requires for penalty the deeper and more continuous pangs of death spiritual and eternal.

True, the death due the sinner is penal—the second death—to be inflicted at the judgment, and that punishment with its inseparable appendages is surely adequate, if the wisdom of Deity may be preferred to that of Mr. Rowland, else God would never have decreed a "second death." If a desperado should accept the gallows "with delight," for fear of a worse doom, would that prove hanging no punishment? To talk about spiritual and eternal death, is to change guilt into punishment, for spiritual death is but the absence of spiritual life, and not a punishment.

Again Mr. Rowland says:

> 3. The strong antithesis brought out in the passage between what is lost in Adam and what is gained in Christ, necessitates the tropical meaning of the word. If eternal life in the passage means, as it certainly does, communion with God, personal holiness, and consequent blessedness, the term death, which is thrown in the strongest and most positive antithesis to it, must mean the possession of the opposite of these qualities, extended equally through time.

That word "if" is well used—"If eternal life means communion with God," etc. "Life" means life, and "eternal" gives its length; and that it does not mean "communion with God," is evident from the fact that those who now have communion with God, are still destitute of eternal life, for, "He that soweth to the spirit shall of the spirit reap life everlasting," and the holy sleepers shall "awake to everlasting life." The reaping comes at the end of the age, and so does the awakening, and the everlasting life.

The Spirit World.

Why so many teach a spirit world for men, and deny such a world to animals, is surprising. If death does not fully kill men, why insist that it thus kills animals? Why not admit the claim that the spirit world is filled with disembodied animals, as well as disembodied men? While the Bible speaks about the "spirit (ruach) of man," it as really speaks about the "spirit (ruach) of the beast," and also affirms, "They have all ONE ruach;" (Eccl. 3:19–21) hence, if the spirit is an invisible organization in the one case, instead of being a vitalizing element, why is not the same true in the other case? And why may not the old Indian speculations about "the happy hunting ground" have as good a foundation as any part of this theory of a disembodied existence? To present this speculative theory fairly before our readers, we clip the following "Vision of Scenes in Spirit Life," from the Religio-Philosophical Journal, which unfolds to our view a spirit world with its spirit rivers, spirit boatman, spirit canoe, spirit forests, spirit cedars, spirit shade, spirit sunshine, spirit animals, spirit cascades, spirit lakelets, spirit wigwams, spirit Indians with gray hair, &c.

> Again we stand by the shining stream with our good spirit guide. This time a stalwart Indian advances to meet us, and proposes to be our boatman. Seated in his light canoe which he propels by a single short paddle at the stern, we move very rapidly, and are soon landed near a magnificent forest, the grand old trees casting beautiful shadows on the silvery water. Cedars, [illegible] of ancient Lebanon, like the [illegible] in perpetual verdure; and as we [illegible] every variety of forest trees, beautiful [illegible] are presented to our view; whose deep umbrageous shade subdues the sunshine to the "dim religious light of old cathedral aisles," and fills the soul with reverence and spiritual delight. The ground beneath our feet is soft and smooth as a velvet carpet, and neither brush or stone to annoy or impede our progress. We see many animals called wild on earth, roaming in careless freedom, fearless of hound or hunter.
>
> At length we come to a beautiful valley through which courses a lovely stream, forming fairy cascades and charming lakelets here and there. Beside the stream are many wigwams, or tepees, as some of the Indians designate their habitation, and around the council fires sit the gray haired patriarch of many tribes, recounting the traditions of their race. Some claim great antiquity and trace their history back through many thousand years, even to the time of the Egyptian bondage; for they assert they are descended from the "lost tribe of Israel."
>
> They say they were a great and noble nation on the western continent for ages before the white man appeared on its shores; but their glory was departing, and they were becoming degenerate before their time; and they saw with sorrow their tribes growing less in numbers and strength without being able to discern the cause.
>
> Now with the clearer vision of spirit life, and the recent history of their race before them, they see it was necessary in the progress of events that they pass away before advancing civilization, and give place to a different people, who could develop the wonderful resources of the country.
>
> They now regret the fierce cruelty they displayed in many instances; though they then thought it right to attempt the extermination of the invaders of their country.
>
> We pass on and behold multitudes of dusky warriors ranged in companies as if for battle, but are told their mission is now peaceful. The chief of each company calls them out from the ranks singly or in groups, and appoints to each one his work, till all are employed in doing good. To one, a tall, athletic brave, who towers above all his comrades, he speaks in this wise: "You, while on earth, killed a hundred white men, now you must return to earth and give good magnetism to some medium to heal a hundred sick ones, before you can enjoy rest and peace in the happy hunting grounds." Another is sent to help the weary, aged man whose spirit struggles to be free from the casket of clay; while others are bidden to give magnetic strength to those newly born in the spirit world; and a large delegation are dispatched to influence the western tribes to make peace with the white chiefs of the nation; each on receiving his orders starts instantly, and seems to float away on a line of electric light.
>
> We notice that emong all who are sent away, there are no women, and inquire the reason. We are told, that as they bore the heaviest of the burdens in earth life, and were more kind and loving, they are not sent back, unless at their own desire, but are permitted to roam at will through flowery fields and verdant groves, by lake or stream, as fancy guides. We saw multitudes of them, with many groups of happy children, roaming through lovely natural gardens, gathering fruits and flowers at pleasure, all seeming in perfect love and harmony. We are glad to know the beautiful law of compensation is manifest here, as in every other phase of life, and we trust all may learn this Divine law, and those who are weary and heavy laden with burdens of earth life, may take heart of grace, and look forward to a sure recompense for all their trials. Our guide informs us we must be content with a brief glimpse of summer land this time, as earthly duties wait our return, and he hurries us back to the river, and, as he bids us adieu, we see him float away in company with a very lovely lady, which leads us to infer that he has more pleasant engagements than acting as guide for visitors from earth.

The World.

BR. SHELDON: I herewith send you a short article for the press, if you deem it worthy, on "The World." (2 Peter 3: 6, 7.)

Peter has reference to a particular world "that then was;" that was in the days of Noah; the world that was overflowed with water. It seems that after the world had been so beautifully made, and man placed thereon, that that old serpent, the devil, beguiled the woman, and sin was introduced, and became very prominent. After God suffered it over 1600 years he thought to put a stop to sin and transgression upon the earth; but how was it to be brought about? God in his great mercy and goodness was not going to deluge the whole earth without giving a warning. Therefore, Noah, being a preacher of righteousness upon the earth, was chosen to warn the sinners of their danger. God told Noah to build an ark for the saving of his family, there being but eight righteous persons upon the face of the earth. How kind, how good, how merciful was God to save so few, after all the transgression for so many generations, and yet God was willing to save. And when Noah entered the ark, methinks I hear the blasphemers making the village ring with oaths and scorn for the making of such a mighty boat on land; but says God, "Yet seven days," and then the flood gates of heaven were opened, and down came the mighty flood where no man could swim. Oh, what a scene—what a multitude calling to God to save them from his wrath, but alas! it was too late. Death was their portion, and death they received.

But, says Peter, "The heavens and earth which are now by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire, against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men." Has God given a warning to this dispensation that the earth is to be destroyed again, or the works therein? Yes, and by fire, more complete, if possible, than before. Why? Because sin has been predominant for over four thousand years, and God declares that he will cleanse it, and make it pure, and a home for the righteous. (2 Peter 3:13.) But here we are, poor, weak, sinful creatures, without hope; but in due time God sent his only begotten Son into the world to suffer and die, that we, through him, might live. (Oh, how kind a Father.) Can we ever repay him for it? Read Heb. 10: 19–23. We cannot repay by blasphemy, transgression, &c. But thank him, we have his word, which is a lamp to our feet, and a guide to our path. He has given us signs that we might know when the time draws near for his second coming, when the adversaries are to be destroyed, root and branch; when Jesus is to set up a kingdom that cannot be destroyed. But the children of God have a work to do; they have to put the house in order to receive the Bridegroom; and when we see and know by what he has told us, that he is so nigh, it is surely time for us to awake, and see the condition of our earthly house. May God help us to see to it at once, and be fully prepared to meet our Lord when he shall come, for he is truly near. Amen.

DANIEL L. WEAVER.

The Weekly Prayer Meeting.

No matter how often a church may have preaching, or how good the preaching may be, it cannot enjoy spiritual health without a weekly prayer meeting, for this is a part of the Divine arrangement. If a church cannot have both, better by far do without the preaching, and have the prayer meeting. A church will flourish for years with only a prayer meeting in their midst, while it will pine away under the best kind of preaching, without a prayer meeting. But in order to have a prayer meeting profitable, it must be the meeting of the church, and not merely of a limited few. When the church will attend the prayer meeting, and attend it to take part, it will always prove a source of sacred vigor. But how many attend it reluctantly, if at all, and act like strangers, and not like loving members of one family when they do attend. On this point the Methodist Recorder has made some timely remarks which we here quote:

> The timidity of some Christians is remarkable. You will see it on Wednesday evening at prayer meeting. They come into the room as if they were walking on eggs, and look as demure and pitiful as if they were entering a jail, or a hospital of contagious diseases. At the hour of opening the services, these rabbit-hearted believers will be seated in the border pews and nearest the door, as if to make a speedy escape, in case of an earthquake or a fire. They circle round the cold walls of the prayer room, as if they had got inside of a powder magazine which might explode were they to come near enough together to make any warmth!

The minister or leader is expected to bridge over all the gulfs, to thaw out all the ice, to light up all the gloom, to sweep out all the cobwebs, to put smiles on every lip, tears in every eye, and songs on every tongue.

The week day evening audience ought to be the very vitality of the congregation, and the pastor's electrifyer for Sunday sermons and prompted to daily work. The warm hearted people should come up close around him in the social meeting, and sing back into his soul the gospel they have heard from his lips and seen in his life during the week. Every nearest seat to the stand should be the first one filled. There is a wonderful power in this intimacy that confides, sympathizes, sustains, and blends into brotherhood around the leader where he stands to talk of Jesus to the people.

But where professing believers act with the woodenness of things, expecting to be told where to sit, what and how to sing, how to do the childhood duties of the gospel; where they make no effort to advance, to build up, to reach and rescue fellow men from sin; where they come to service as a mere obligation, bringing no neighbor, cheering no sufferer, radiating no light—it is enough to kill an ordinary pastor, mind and body, to sustain such a charge.

If any of two or three, quoted so often in social prayer, would but get to work and imitate the early disciples in evangelical effort, go out into the highways and hedges after the perishing people, and by love and good nature compel them to come in, there would soon be a change from iciness to a pentecost. If the inner circles round the altar were kept close and full, the genial warmth of the meetings would flame and glow, and the church would be stirred as with a mighty rushing wind, and thousands would be converted in a day.

But as long as Christians go in and out in the touch-me-not by-ways of self and clan, and turn the cold shoulder to the Lord, we cannot expect prosperity or power.

Questions on Baptism.

BR. SHELDON:—Will you explain to us the commission in Mat. 28, "Baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." Is this not an interpolation? And if not, why did the disciples, as it seems, baptize in the name of "Jesus Christ," or "The Lord Jesus"? After the day of Pentecost they never baptized in the name of the Trinity, to my understanding.

N. C. MILLER.

1. The argument to show this text an interpolation is very weak, and has its only foundation in the fact that in some copies it was carelessly omitted in transcribing, while other earlier ones contained it. Besides very early writers,—those of the first and second centuries,—quote the text without having its genuineness called into question.

2. They were baptized into the name of Christ, as the Son, but that does not exclude the name of the Father and the Spirit; all three are included in the commission, and the commission was faithfully respected both before and after Pentecost. All the baptizing done after the ascension, was done under this commission, "Baptizing them in the name of the Father, Son, and Spirit," though the previously repudiated Son is specially mentioned in the records.

The Sacred Relics.

The Rev. Dr. Duff, of Scotland, thus speaks of the relics which the Catholic church claim to have preserved, and exhibit to their wondering dupes from time to time:

> Some of the bones of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob! The stone on which the father of the faithful offered his only son! Chips of the brazen serpent! Preserved specimens of the manna in the wilderness, and of the blossoms of Aaron's rod!
>
> Descending to gospel times, we have the ax, saw, and hammer of Joseph, the espoused husband of Mary! the camel's hair garment of John the Baptist, and the linen on which he was beheaded; and the forefinger wanting the nail, the identical forefinger with which he pointed to the blessed Saviour, saying, "Behold the Lamb of God!" the holy coat of the Redeemer himself; spikes of his thorny crown; and fragments of his cross! a piece of Peter's staff and chain, his sword somewhat rusty, the stone on which the cock crew, and rags of the sail of his boat when a fisherman on the Lake of Galilee! part of the Virgin Mary's hair, and veil and girdle, one of her combs and shoes, her spousal ring, and very considerable quantities of her milk! Of other apostles and prophets and holy martyrs we have endless and countless fragments and memorials, in the diversified form of hair and heads and skulls, tongues and teeth and beards, jaw-bones and shoulder-blades, ribs and livers and hearts, legs and toes and slippers, yea, and portions of the very breath of some, carefully enclosed in stoppered vials, with one feather out of the wings of the Archangel Gabriel!

False Messiahs.

Those who persist in rejecting the true Messiah, are constantly being deceived by false Messiahs. The catalogue has been long, but frequent additions are being made to this list. We clip the following item from an exchange:

> The New Free Press of Vienna has just published from the pen of the eastern traveler, Baron de Maltzan, an account of a pretended Messiah who has appeared in Arabia: He "is a Jew, of Sana, in Yemen, with a fascinating exterior, having remarkable, brilliant eyes, and a melodious voice. After studying the mysteries of the great cabalistical work, the Zoha, he withdrew from men, eventually retired to a desert, where he submitted to bodily mortifications and self-denial. He soon became distinguished as a worker of miracles, and, as such, attracted the attention of the superstitious, brought various descriptions of food, and were pleased that he condescended to accept their offerings. The increase of their flocks and of their households, and even their success in the attack upon hostile troops, were attributed to the power peculiar to this worker of marvelous doings. His reputation has spread far and wide among the Arabian population, and many incredible stories are circulated about him.

The Beast and his Mark.

What power is the beast of Rev. 20:4, and at what time did it rise? Who are they that sat upon the thrones, and at what time did the beast most likely make his mark?

M. D. PEAVEY.

The beast having seven heads and ten horns, is sometimes presented as a beast like a leopard, and sometimes a scarlet colored beast—a symbol of the same government in its different stages, that is, the Roman. It arose early enough to persecute the saints forty-two months, and succeeded the supremacy of the dragon. It enforced its mark through its entire predominance, which commenced with the rise of the horned beast, which arose a little later than the other. The dragon was in the ascendancy at the time of Christ's birth; the beast succeeded him, for the dragon "gave him his seat." Our remarks upon the thrones and their occupants will appear in another connection.

How Worldlings View It.

The following note is taken from the Kingston Whig, and deals out a just rebuke to those who do evil that good may come:

> In another column will be found a report of a church raffle of a sewing machine for one hundred and four dollars. The machine is worth let us say forty dollars. Did the church coffers come honestly by the remaining sixty-four dollars? When churches and persons descend to gambling practices to fill the Lord's treasury, sermons against betting and similar sins are hardly in place. The next thing in order will be the prize package dodge to increase the offertory. Raffling a sewing machine at a church bazaar, swindling with a prize package, or pigeoning the gullible at a card or faro table are cognate practices, and equally sinful, unless modern casuistry can prove that a good end will justify any means, however bad.

"I Die Daily."

G. E. MERRILL.

What does the apostle mean by saying, "I die daily"? This question is asked, supposing that the apostle died daily in sin. If this be so, then he had to live to sin daily in order to die to sin daily. Hence they make out that he was sinning and repenting, sinning and repenting all his life time. This does not correspond with what he said in another place, "How shall we that are dead to sin live any longer therein?" Now if we will carefully examine the chapter where the words "I die daily" are found (1 Cor. 15:31), we shall find Paul teaching the glorious hope of the church—the resurrection—and not that he was sinning and repenting, sinning and repenting, or that he died daily to sin; no, no.

Well, what did he mean in saying, "I die daily"?

He meant that he was daily expecting to lose his life, that "every day I am exposed to death." What for? For his hope. We find Paul in v. 30 asking a question like this, "Why are we in jeopardy every hour?" Jeopardy is danger, or peril. Why was he in danger, peril, every hour? Why was he exposed to death daily? Was it not for his belief in Jesus, and his resurrection, and this resurrection of all the dead? We believe it was. In another place Paul says he was "in death oft"; that is, he often expected to die; often exposed to death—have his life taken from him by his enemies, directly or indirectly.

Much might be said on this text of Scripture, and many texts quoted to prove that Paul did not mean that he died to sin daily; but that he did mean that he was in daily expectation of losing his own natural or physical life, all for his faith.

We believe we are right in our exposition of the words, "I die daily." The Lord help us that we may die to sin once for all, and not live any longer therein; but the life that we live here in the flesh, let us live by faith of the Son of God.

Sorrow for the Dead.

CORNELIUS MARSHAL.

The sorrow for the dead is only sorrow from which we refuse to be divorced. Every other wound we seek to heal; every other affliction to forget. But this wound we consider it a duty to keep open. This affliction we cherish and brood over in solitude. Where is the mother that would willingly forget the infant that perished from her arms like a blossom from the parent stem, though every recollection is a pang? Where is the child that would willingly forget the most tender of parents, though to remember is but to lament? Who, even in the hour of agony would forget the friend over whom he mourns? Who, even when the tomb is closing over the remains of the most loved, when he feels his heart, as it were, crushed in the closing of its portal, would accept of a consolation that must be bought by forgetfulness? No; the love which survives the tomb is one of the noblest attributes of the soul. If it has its woes, it likewise has its delight; and when the overwhelming burst of grief is calmed into the gentle tear of recollection—when the sudden anguish and the convulsive agony is over, the present ruins of all we most loved is softened away into pensive meditation on all that it was in the days of loveliness. Who would root out such a sorrow from the heart, though it may sometimes throw a passing cloud over the bright hour of gayety, or spread a deeper sadness over the hour of gloom? Yet who would exchange it even for the song of pleasure, or the burst of revelry? No; there is a voice from the tomb sweeter than song; there is a remembrance of the dead to which we turn even from the charms of the living.

O the grave! the grave! It buries every error, covers every defect, extinguishes every resentment. From its peaceful bosom springs nothing but fond regrets and tender recollections. Who can look down upon the grave, even of an enemy, and not feel compunctious throbs that he should ever have warred with the poor handful of earth that now lies mouldering before him?

But the grave of those we loved; what a place for solemn meditation. There it is we call up in long reverie the whole history of virtue and gentleness, and the thousand endearments lavished upon us almost unheeded in the daily intercourse of intimacy. There it is that we dwell upon the tenderness of the parting scene—the bed of death. With all its stifled griefs, its noiseless attendants, its mute watchful assiduities, the last ceremonies of expiring love, the feeble fluttering, thrilling, O how thrilling! pressure of the hand—the last fond look of the glazing eye turning upon us, even from the threshold of existence, the faint, faltering accents, struggling in death to give one more assurance of affection.

Aye, go to the grave of buried love, and meditate, and there settle the account with thy conscience for every past benefit unrequited, every past endearment unregarded of that departed being who can never—never—never return to be soothed by thy contrition.

If thou art a child, and hast ever added a sorrow to the soul, or a furrow to the silver brow of an affectionate parent; if thou art a husband, and hast ever caused the fond bosom that ventured its whole happiness in thy arms to doubt one moment of thy kindness or thy truth; if thou art a friend, and hast ever wronged in thought, word, or deed, the spirit that generously confided in thee; if thou art a lover, and hast ever given one unremitted pang to that true heart that now lies cold and silent beneath thy feet, then be sure that every unkind look, every ungracious word, every ungentle action will come thronging back upon thy memory, and knocking dolefully at thy soul, then be sure that thou wilt lie down sorrowing and repent on the grave, and utter the unheard groan, and pour forth the unavailing tear more deep and more bitter, because unavailing and unheard.

Then weave thee a chaplet of flowers and strew the beauties of nature about the grave, and console thy broken spirit, if thou canst, with these tender, yet futile tributes of regret, and take warning by the bitterness of this thy contrite affliction over the dead, and henceforth be more faithful and affectionate in the discharge of thy duties to the living.

Possible to Live Without Sin.

G. E. MERRILL.

Is it possible to live without sin? Yes, we believe it possible to live without sin—willful sin. Not but we are liable to sin. If we do sin, we are drawn away by our own lust. We err in judgment many times, but that is not sin. We are not perfect in judgment, neither in wisdom; but we can be perfect in love. How? By having Christ formed within us, the hope of glory; being filled with his Spirit. The Lord help us then, that we may have Christ thus formed within—be filled with his Spirit, and so be perfect in love. They that are born or begotten of God, we read, do "not commit sin." Why? "Because he is born of God," and he "cannot sin." "His seed remaineth in him." Christ is sinless; and if we have his Spirit, we shall be like him, pure and holy. No guile will be found in our mouth. "They that have this hope in them (the coming of Jesus) will purify themselves even as he is pure." Then we shall be ready when he comes to enter into the joys that await all the holy ones. If we want to see God, and live eternally with his Son Jesus, we must be holy, for without "holiness ....no man shall see the Lord." How important, then, if we want to see Jesus, and be made like him, that we become partakers of his holiness.

Let us live by faith near the cleansing stream, and thus, moment by moment, feel its power to cleanse us, and keep us clean all the time. How blessed the words, "The blood of Jesus ....cleanseth us from all sin."

Miscellaneous.

AT HOME.

—The remnant of the Modoc tribe are on their way to Fort Russell, escorted by two companies of troops.

—A private dispatch from Calvert, Texas, says: "The fever here is worse than at Shreveport. Seven per cent of our population have died."

—Eight inches of snow fell on the line of the Union Pacific Railroad, in Wyoming and Utah Territories, on the 17th, causing some delay to trains.

—The Icelanders are beginning to emigrate quite extensively to the United States. They are a bright, clean and healthy looking class of people.

—According to recent Texas dispatches, it is very unsafe traveling for Americans on the Mexican border. It is alleged that outrages of various kinds have been perpetrated upon citizens of the United States, revenge for the Mackenzie raid being the presumed motive.

—A little boy named Jacob Strife, living at Van Wert, is reported to have vomited a garter snake eighteen inches long, and half an inch thick. The snake is blind, but otherwise is perfectly formed. It is thought that the boy swallowed it about two years ago while drinking from a spring, as he had terrible convulsions from that time, the cause of which could not be detected before.

—A newspaper correspondent has discovered a new solution of the Mormon difficulties. He says that the waters of Salt Lake have been rising for years, and are now twenty feet higher than they used to be. They are moreover inclosed by a ridge far above the doomed city of the plain, and sooner or later the imprisoned waters will break out and engulf the modern Sodom and settle the Mormon question forever.

—On Thursday, September 25, an aeronaut named Prof. John H. Boley, came to a terrible death at Wapella, Iowa. He had been engaged for some time in making ascensions during the fair, and notwithstanding through the illness of one of his assistants he could not take usual precautionary measures for safety, he deemed it his duty to make the ascension as advertised. Soon after he started the balloon was discovered to be on fire, and nothing could be done but to wait for the terrible ending which soon came, by his falling in a stubble field nearly half a mile from the starting-point. He fell feet foremost, and his limbs were driven into the ground nearly a foot. The bones of his legs were badly broken. The body, arms and head were apparently uninjured. The balloon came down about a quarter of a mile further on.

—The members of the Evangelical Alliance arrived at Washington at 3 o'clock p. m., on the 14th; they numbered about 250. They were received by Geo. Shepherd, in the parlors of the Willard Hotel. From there they were taken to the White House, where President Grant and all the members of the Cabinet were waiting to receive them. The Rev. Dr. Tiffany introduced the most prominent delegates, and made a short address to the President, after which the Dean of Canterbury led in prayer. The President, in reply to Dr. Tiffany's speech, said: "It affords me very great pleasure to welcome the alliance to the capital of this great nation, which I feel is the freest of all nations to work out the problem of your mission, [Applause.] The Rev. Narayan Sheshadri made a short address, after which H. W. Beecher was introduced and said: I also have a profound respect for the President of the United States, as he is almost the only man in this nation who thinks a good deal but can hold his peace. (Laughter and applause.) After which the delegates withdrew.

ABROAD.

—It is reported that John Bright is opposed to the war against the Ashantees, and will resign his position in the Cabinet if it is further prosecuted.

—France lost during the Franco-Prussian war 200,000 horses. There are now three million horses left in that country.

—A British regiment in Burmah supports a paper of its own, editors, printers, and publishers being all attached to the regiment.

—A large cargo of slaves on the way to Mejunga, Madagascar, has been captured in the Mozambique channel. Proof has been found that a large slave trade is carried on almost under the guns of the Mozambique fort.

—Advices from Pekin say that an edict had appeared stating that thirty-seven villages had been swept away in the province of Shansee by the waters of the Young Imo river and its branches having burst their banks, and that a great amount of human and animal life had been lost by the floods.

—Advices from Hayti state that Jacmel and several other places in Southern Hayti, were visited by a severe hurricane on the 28th ult. Many houses were demolished, roofs blown off, and trees torn from their roots and carried a great distance. There was considerable loss of life and serious damage to shipping.

—The Turkish Ministry of Foreign Affairs recently sent abroad a circular memorandum, giving as is alleged, a one-sided account of an Austrian Consul's conduct in Bosnia, and complaining of the reception of Prince Milan, of Servia, in Vienna. The Austrian Government has taken offence, and a note from the Porte, expressing regret at the issue of the memorandum, is looked for with some anxiety.

Correspondence.

Northern Michigan Special Conference.

A special conference was held in the Cornell S. H., Wexford county, Oct. 2-5, 1873. This meeting was called for the benefit of the isolated brethren in this northern field, of which there was a general rally. It was good to be there. We had a heavenly sitting together in Christ—a foretaste of the blessedness to be enjoyed when we all get home.

The meeting was largely attended. The interest was intense. Six put on Christ by baptism.

Some fifteen expressed a desire to be Christians, and testified to their love of God. All spoke of this meeting as one of the best. Praise God for his goodness to the children of men.

We think the cause of Christ has received a new impetus in this whole region. Br. Bower remained to carry on the meeting a few evenings longer, and we hope for good results.

Br. Albert Brigham was received as a member of this conference. E. B. Scott, Sec'y.

N. W. Kansas Q. Conference.

The friends and lovers of Jesus' appearing met with the A. C. church at Athens, Saturday Oct. 4, 1873, for the purpose of uniting the churches in north-western Kansas in quarterly conference.

Meeting opened with prayer and praise, after which on motion, Eld. J. C. Smith was called to the chair, when the articles of the constitution and by-laws were read, and on motion adopted.

It was decided that the officers of this quarterly conference be, for the present year, a president and secretary. Eld. E. N. Bliss was nominated for president, and J. S. Thorp for secretary, and unanimously elected.

Thus our little conference is organized in weakness here in this far western field. Pray for us, friends of Jesus, that our organization may be owned and blessed of God; and that all its members may work in harmony—a unit in Christ Jesus.

A tent meeting was also held here, in the state mission tent, by Eld. J. C. Smith, assisted Elds. E. N. Bliss, N. J. Sade, and J. S. Thorp. The meeting commenced Wednesday evening, Sept. 24, and continued over two Sundays.

The Lord's sweet blessing rested upon us from the first, and the closing Sabbath of the meeting six happy souls were buried in the likeness of the Redeemer's death, and raised in the likeness of his resurrection.

The meeting closed in the evening with the Lord's supper, which was partaken of by over forty, thirty-one of whom gave testimony for Jesus: and all present felt that it was good to be there.

Some came a distance of 12, 15, 20, and one brother and sister even 75 or 80 miles to meet with us, and went home feeling amply repaid for their journey.

All praise to the name of Jesus. Amen.

J. S. Thorp, Sec'y.

Minnesota Conference.

The Minnesota Annual Advent Christian conference convened at Utica, Winona Co., on the old camp ground, in Cheatham's grove, Sept. 10, in connection with the annual camp meeting. But the weather was unfavorable, and the farmers all busy threshing in the vicinity, so that the attendance was quite small until Sunday, when a large congregation gathered upon the ground.

Preaching brethren present.—Brs. Allen, Ramer, Bursell, Miller, Lombard, Mitson, Chapman, Rims, Wellcome, and Sr. Duby. Br. Tucker, Business Agent of the Publishing Society, and Br. and Sr. Mansfield, from Chicago, were invited to a seat in the conference.

Delegates were present from Minneapolis, Vernon Springs, Pierce Valley, and Utica churches.

Committees were appointed to transact such business as should come before the meeting. Minutes of the last conference were read and approved.

The president's address was read. It was able and timely. The secretary then gave his report as follows:

I have had a good opportunity to learn the state of the cause in many portions of our state. In some localities where we have regular meetings, either preaching or prayer meetings, the cause is prospering, and the truth spreading. In some isolated places, where they had but little or no preaching, they keep the fire burning by holding prayer meetings and distributing tracts, and living their religion. But in a large portion of our state the cause is suffering for want of good, earnest laborers. The cry is in many places, "Come over and help us"; and while some of our preachers have left our state, and some have fallen by death, a few are doing what they can, and others we fear are almost idlers in the vineyard. There is a lack of system in our labors in many localities and a lack of punctuality in filling appointments, and helping sustain prayer meetings, in visiting families. There is a worldly-mindedness that prevents earnest, effectual labor, a lack of entire consecration to God and his work on the part both ministry and laymen, which prevents the truth from taking effect when preached. Now I have a few suggestions to make:

1. That we as preachers, consecrate ourselves more fully to God, and get endued with power from on high, and give our time as much as possible to the work of preaching, attending prayer and conference meetings, visiting, and talking, and praying in families; thus spreading the truth among the people.

2. That we encourage system in all our churches, in the support of the gospel, by appointing committees whose work shall be to visit the people and raise funds for such purposes.

3. That we discountenance the practice of of laboring in the field, or doing any business on Sunday, the Christian Sabbath, as it is a great injury to the cause, a complete barrier to the success of those who practice it, and a stumbling block to the world.

4. That we have officers appointed in all our quarterly districts in accordance with our constitution.

5. That we have our constitution read at every session of our conference, and such by laws as are necessary; also the minutes of last conference and quarterly meeting.

6. That we have an earnest, devoted preacher travel as an evangelist through the state, to visit and preach in places destitute of regular preaching, visit new places, organize new churches, etc.

7. That we have a camp meeting committee appointed, whose duty it shall be to make arrangements for the same the ensuing year.

8. That we have a delegate or delegates appointed at this meeting whose duty it shall be to attend any conference or association which may require a delegate or delegates from this state conference.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

The treasurer, (J. Raymond,) reported by letter, five dollars in the treasury.

Reports of churches.—But few reported.

Minneapolis.—S. W. Thurber, pastor. Present membership 22; added during the year, 10; good Sunday school of 52 members, including Bible class, choice library of books for them. Built a house of worship in 1872, and gave it to the Lord free from debt. Eld. S. W. Thurber presided at dedication service. The Minneapolis church, though it has passed through severe trials in the past, is now in a flourishing condition.

Anoka.—Organized by Eld. G. W. Miller, August 13, 1873. No. of members, 7. Hold weekly prayer meetings. Brother Miller has preached to us twice since organization, striving for the faith once delivered to the saints.

Montivideo church.—Organized in July, 1873, by Eld. G. W. Miller. Present number, 7; baptized, 4. L. R. Wood, Pastor.

Utica.—No of membership, 36; are trying to live; need more preaching.

Monticello church.—Pastor, S. C. Wellcome; present number of membership, 72; added during the year in full fellowship, 27; and 15 have given in their names to join. Baptized, 17; weekly prayer meeting and a flourishing Sabbath school of 60 scholars, 8 teachers, and 3 officers; the cause prospering. To God be all the praise.

Eagle Lake church.—Organized March 12, 1873, by S. C. Wellcome, with 12 members, one baptized since. Weekly prayer meeting but no preaching; small Sabbath school. Live trusting in God.

Lemond church.—Organized May 19, 1872, with 10 members; somewhat scattered, but trying to live. Sister Duby preaches to them occasionally; one came out on the side of truth the present year.

Vernon Springs church.—Pastor, Eld. Wm. Chapman; organized by him, with 14 members; have much opposition, but trust in God.

Ridgway church.—Organized by Br. Peter Mitson; 8 members: 3 baptized; have preaching by brethren Mitson and Chapman.

Pierce Valley church.—Organized with 14 members; have but little preaching; but few remain; need help, but are determined to live.

Cottage Grove church.—Nine members. Sister Duby preaches occasionally; have weekly prayer meetings.

On motion voted to receive the following churches into our conference, viz: Anoka, Montevideo, Eagle Lake, Vernon Springs, Ridgway, and Pierce Valley.

REPORT OF PREACHERS.

Sister R. M. Rowell, (by letter.) In the east on a visit; health has somewhat improved since last conference, traveled and labored some in Minnesota and Wisconsin, and now in the eastern country, find an open door and warm hearts. I feel that whether east or west I have the same precious message to the sons and daughters of men, and expect to proclaim it until death lays me low, or the Saviour comes.

Brother T. J. Allen. Have preached some in Sparta, Wis., some in Canton, but most of the time in Winona; have had some precious seasons; feel like going forward bearing precious seed; have had severe affliction, and have been seeking to get upon higher ground by consecrating myself more fully to God and like saying to God, "Here I am," and expect him to manifest himself to me in a peculiar manner.

Brother P. Raymer. Was silent a part of last winter; passed through deep waters of affliction by the death of a beloved companion, but God sustained me; labored for a while in Winona; preached and traveled some in other places in the state, at Rush River, High Prairie, and at Elliot at the quarterly meeting, also at Utica; have passed through a furnace which has done me good; have sweet peace and consolation of the gospel.

Wm J Bursell. My heart is in the work; have been preaching almost one-half the time Sundays, have one appointment in Austin, about 30 miles away, the other in Winneshiek, about 12 miles from home, new fields; hope before long to be able to spend more time in the field. The harvest time is soon coming, the fields are getting white, there is great call for labor, hope God will give me health to labor and go forward in this glorious work until the Master appears.

G. W. Miller. Am still in the work to the best of my ability; have attended 9 quarterly meetings in the conference district; would state that I lost my diary before coming to the conference, with all my reports in it. Our quarterly meetings have been seasons of interest, and I trust profit. Have received eighty-nine dollars, paid out forty-five dollars; the brethren have done well by me in this vicinity. Have held three tent meetings, one at Madelia; had a good time; left the cause in good condition. The next at Montevideo, on the extreme frontier of the state; good interest. Last meeting at Anoka, results good. Feel that I am at work in a glorious cause. Have learned many useful lessons, am willing to work anywhere.

P. Mitson. Can say my heart is in the work; have been preaching all I could the past year; have been in some new fields. Preached at Ridgeway and other points; some converted; organized a church; baptized some. Have had a hard time in reaching appointments; passed through snow and water; also had much opposition, but God has blessed my labors; am willing to go anywhere or make any sacrifice to preach the word.

A. G. Lombard. Have been silent about one half the time since conference; moved to Chatfield; health poor; have preached of late at Viola, and some other points; baptized one. Am with you in heart, and hope to be able to do more.

C. D. W. Scott, (by letter.) Am not able to meet in conference; am working to raise money to buy me a horse; am preaching nearly every Sunday in different places. The cause is prospering where I have been in brother Parson's field of labor.

Michael Wellcome, (by letter.) Am unable to meet you in conference; am much disappointed, as I would have been glad to have met with the many dear friends I have enjoyed precious seasons with in the past in brother Cheatham's grove. God bless them all. I preach in the S. H. in my neighborhood, and have for the past year. We have a good Sunday school and Bible class. Most of the members of the Garden City church have moved away, but the few that are left are striving to live for the kingdom. My prayer is that God will pour out his spirit upon you while in conference, and so bless you in all your deliberations that the blessed cause may prosper as it never has before in this state.

William Parsons, (by letter.) Since our last conference I have kept up four regular appointments, once in four weeks; at some of them there has been a good interest.

C. Rims. Went east on a visit and preached a number of times with good success; came back, and lost my wife since; feel it deeply; health has peen poor, unable to labor the past summer; hope to be able to go, and am ready to go when able.

S. C. Wellcome. Am still striving to proclaim the glad news of a soon-coming Saviour. Since last conference preached some at Eagle Point, in Blue Earth county, and organized a church of 12, baptized one; preached some near Shelbyville, and Kasota. Came to Monticello at the call of the church; have preached at the Monticello chapel about every Sabbath since, except June; have also preached at Bailey S. H., and Lilly Pond [illegible] Otsego; a good interest. God [illegible] people and helping them [illegible] Have baptized 18 the past summer, taken into the church, and 15 more names have been given in; attended the Wisconsin state camp meeting and preached once, then went to the Association meeting at Norwood Park, as delegate from this conference; preached a number of times on my way back; am still at work; preach three times a Sunday, traveling 10 to 15 miles, and visit what I can during the week, and attend from one to three prayer-meetings. God is blessing me and my labors; to him be all the glory. Have received since conference about two hundred and fifty dollars, and paid out traveling expenses about sixty dollars.

Hannah M. Duby. Have preached at Cottage Grove, Pierce Valley, High Point, and Lemond, near Owatonna. God has blessed me in laboring. Some of the churches that were discouraged have arisen; some backsliders have been reclaimed, and one soul converted. Received one hundred and fifty five dollars and eighty five cents, and paid out twenty-four dollars and seventy-five cents. Desire to be clothed with power to preach the word.

Wm. Chapman. Have passed through as it were a furnace of fire, but God has been with me; have preached at Vernon Springs; organized a church of 12 members; one, brother Kimer's wife, sleeps in Jesus beloved by all who knew her. Also preach at Ridgeway once in four weeks. Brother Mitson also preaches there; three have been baptized. There is much opposition, but in the midst of it all God is blessing us with prosperity; but as to what I have received for labor I don't wish to speak, as I do not wish to expose our poverty.

The following resolutions were passed, viz:

Resolved, That we hold our next annual conference in the month of June, 1874, in connection with the annual camp meeting in the western part of the state.

Resolved; That brother and sister Mansfield be invited to make Minnesota their home in the future, to labor with us in the Master's cause.

Resolved; That brethren G. W. Miller, Wm. J. Bursell, and S. C. Wellcome act as camp meeting committee the ensuing year.

Resolved; That brethren G. W. Miller, Wm. J. Bursell, and S. C. Wellcome be and are hereby appointed as delegates to any convention or association that may require delegates from this conference the ensuing year.

Resolved; That we will give to the A. C. Times, published in Chicago, our hearty support and co-operation.

Resolved; That we will discountenance the practice of laboring in the field or elsewhere, or doing business on Sunday, the Christian Sabbath.

Resolved; That G. W. Miller be appointed state evangelist.

The names of preachers reporting personally or by letter were passed upon as all right, as follows:

T. P. Allen, R. M. Rowell, P. Ramer, Wm. J. Bursell, G. W. Miller, C. D. W. Scott, Peter Mitson, A. G. Lombard, Michael Wellcome, Wm. Parsons, S. C. Wellcome, Charles Rims, Hannah M. Duby, L. R. Wood, Wm. Chapman.

On motion, voted to drop brother Jedediah Raymond's name, in accordance with his request.

Officers elected for the ensuing year:

President, G. W. Miller.
Secretary, S. C. Wellcome.
Treasurer, Wm. J. Bursell.

Notwithstanding the cold weather, our meetings, though small, were excellent. Brethren Chapman, Allen, and Mitson preached to us at the commencement of the meeting, then brother and sister Mansfield arrived and gave us a number of discourses, which will long be remembered by all who listened. They were timely Bible truths. Our social meetings were good. Our love feast Sunday morning especially so; 75 sat down to the Lord's table Sunday eve.

On Monday morning we gathered at the large board tent upon the ground, and took the parting hand, brother and sister Mansfield singing the "Sweet Bye and Bye," assisted by others. It was a season long to be remembered. God bless all the dear brethren and sisters of Minnesota. Brother Cheatham's family were sick, but done all in their power to make us comfortable, as did other kind friends. May God bless them.

S. C. Wellcome, Sec'y.

From Mary A. Tibbets, Volga, Ind.

Perhaps the dear waiting ones scattered abroad, would be glad to hear that our blessed Lord, in his stately steppings, has come into our midst, and by his divine presence greatly cheered our hearts, and blessed our efforts as a church, in the salvation of some for whose spiritual interest we have long been anxiously interested. Our much beloved and venerable brother, Dr. N. Field, has again been with us, and for six days with well improved evenings, preached the glad tidings of the coming kingdom, the destiny of man, and the glorious reign of our Lord and Saviour, with his usual energy and logical clearness, which not only [illegible] in comforting the church, enlightening the community in general, but also in convincing five dear ones that it was their duty to profess their faith in a coming Saviour. O, it was a beautiful sight to see the father and a dearly beloved daughter embrace each other with tears of rejoicing, and both go down together into the water of baptism, in imitation of their risen Lord, and expressive of our glorious hope of a resurrection unto eternal life when our Saviour shall come to make up his jewels.

Our social meetings for mutual exhortation and prayer, were truly interesting and comforting to our hearts, as day after day we were permitted to sit together in heavenly places in Christ, receiving each others testimonies of faith, and to our blessed Saviour who has done so much for us. We trust the rays of Scriptural light which many received in their new and impressive beauty, will lead them on in a greater investigation of the sacred page which will in due time lead them into the performance of all the duties imperatively required of every earnest and loving follower of the Lamb. Some of our dear members live at a distance, and hence could not enjoy this feast of fat things with us. We trust when they read this humble notice of the goodness and mercy of the Lord toward us, they will write to the church and tell us of their enjoyment in the blessed hope, that thus we may mutually rejoice together in hope of the glory soon, as we trust, to be revealed at the appearing of our Redeemer.

We are all interested in our valuable paper, and much rejoiced at [illegible] ing prospect of soon closing up the [illegible] has so long saddened the hearts of [illegible] noring most for its publication. We earn[illegible] hope it may now go right onward and forward, with nothing to occur to blight its increasing prosperity. May all who love the progress of Advent truth do all they can to push it forward, and nothing that would militate against the high position which is before it in the candid and truth-loving part of the Christian world. May we all, as churches and individuals, be ready, with lamps trimmed and burning, to meet our blessed Lord, is the prayer of your humble sister in the blessed hope.

From Eld. P. W. Hough, Cross Plains, Iowa Co., Wis.

Br. Sheldon:—As you left Arena on Monday after the dedication with the understanding that we would continue the meeting some days, I did so, and herewith send you a report, supposing that you have noted the dedication services.

I would say the meeting increased slowly but certainly, both in numbers and interest, until I left, which was Friday, Oct. 3. The last evening two arose to confess Christ, and about two thirds arose to have the meeting continued. It was done by Br. Alvirus Hitchcock and Br. Meigs taking charge. I had the assistance of these two brethren during my stay, Br. Hitchcock preaching one evening to great acceptance. I shall expect that good has resulted from the effort. I did not hear Br. Meigs preach, but he is a man accredited at home. Should think his mind was well stored with truth, and his heart warmed with love; but sometimes, like Peter, his mind may be diverted from Jesus to look at the foaming waters around him; but I think that Peter's example would save him from sinking. But of Br. A. Hitchcock I would say, as Paul said about young Timothy, "Let no one despise his youth." May he walk in the humble path of self denial, that God may exalt him in due time.

My visit to Eld. Thomson was instructive. He is lonely, yet joyful in the blessed hope; but he is confined to his bed, and yet, possessed of so active a mind, when reading about others labors who are much older than himself, he often asks the question to himself, Why this mysterious providence? Yet he is reconciled, because he knows that his Father is too wise to err, and too good to be unkind. I thought what a contrast between him and some others who have good health and yet preach but little. May his mantle fall on such minds. Amen.

I shared while at Arena due Christian respect and hospitality at the house of Br. and Sr. Hodson. They are quite aged, of English descent, have a large family settled convenient to them, mostly believers, which is a comfort to the aged pair. The friends, brethren and sisters paid due Christian respect to me while there, and amply remembered me after a goodly manner, when I left. May God, our Father, bless them in basket and store, soul and body.

From Eld. S. K. Gibson, Brooklyn, Iowa.

Br. Sheldon:—I wish to say to the friends and lovers of Jesus, that the little church at this place is prospering in the Lord. They meet about twice a week for worship, in the absence of a preacher, with the best of feeling and excellent interest.

Several of our Methodist brethren and sisters unite with them, and are one in worship and feeling, like a band of Christian brethren, loving the same Jesus. They are not afraid to talk of his coming and his kingdom, of the resurrection and glory, and look to him as the great Life Giver. But these glorious truths are "too dangerous" to be talked about in the Methodist church, and these Adventists are not worthy of a place in their sanctuary, as "they are always quoting Scripture to prove doctrines we do not believe." So says the minister. Very well, "where the spirit of the Lord is there is liberty"; and thank the blessed Jesus, there is one congregation in the city of Brooklyn where lovers of the Lord can worship "in spirit and in truth." Come, then brethren and sisters in Christ far and near, meet with the church here, and help n on in the good work, as often as you ; and may be that the fire of divine love ning already in the hearts of those dear s, will kindle a flame in yours, and lead to a futher consecration to the Lord.

t is time to be awake and at work for Jesus, he is coming soon; iniquity abounds and love of many waxes cold; the days of d are upon us, and many, I fear, who pro- to love Jesus, will be found among the s, when he shall come to gather his wait- ones. Awake, O bride of Christ! and be ly for the glorious majesty of the heavens, r he cometh, he cometh, to judge the h." "Even so come, Lord Jesus, and e quickly."

n Eld. Philo Hitchcock, Cross Plains, Wis.

oon after the dedication at Arena, Eld. P. Hough came to this place and held meet- over one Lord's day, and partly through week. The church was greatly strength- d and edified under his faithful ministra- ns His whole heart is in the work of aning a bride for Christ, ready for the mar- ge of the Lamb.

An incident worthy of notice came before while engaged in our meetings here. A tleman who formerly resided at this place, t his family of a wife and several children, d went to California and Oregon, where he nained eleven years. He was not a Christ- when he left, neither were any of his fam- . He was a dissipated man while at home, d left in that condition, and remained so r a number of years. Circumstances led to s conversion, and finally to his reception of e truths relating to the Advent of Christ, hich stopped his career of sin, and led him love and feel for his neglected wife and nily. He procured a quantity of our publi- tions in Oregon, and made up his mind to rt on a mission to his own dear family. ending his way through crowded cities and wns on the Pacific coast, passing by scenes revelry, in which he once participated, he last reached his home in Grant county, is., joyful to tell the story of a speedy com- g Saviour, whom he had once despised, but d now learned to love, and obey. What as his surprise when he found his wife, not ly on the "old place," doing well, but al- ady engaged in the service of Christ, and ooking for the blessed hope," together with her members of the family, who had long en praying for the conversion and return their husband and father. God heard the dow's cry in heaven, he answered on earth, d they are now a united and happy family. To God be all the glory.

Death.

E. ROYCE.

This term is often used in Script- re and has various significations. As plied to a dead animal, or blasted rain, it means the entire extinction of oth form and life. This however is ot its use when applied to man; for death he is compared to good grain own in the ground, in order that it ay be quickened and thereby pro- ce a new body. The apostle Paul, explanation of the mystery of a future fe for man, says: "That which thou west is not quickened except it die." his teaches us that the spirit of man ntains his life as the kernel, or spirit grain possesses the life of its partic- ar species. Hence when it is said of an that he is dead, we are not to sup- se that his life is extinct any more an is good grain. In the one case it waits the quickening power of nature's ws to call forth its life from its spirit r kernel as a nucleus for a new body; the other the spirit returns to God ho gave it, there to await his pleas re. And as grain may not be quick- ned for the want of coming in con- ot with nature's laws ordained for at purpose, and consequently will ltimately perish, so also God may, for wise purpose withhold his quickening ower from the spirits of some men, ence they will not be raised from the ead, and consequently will perish for- ver.

I have now given the true Scriptural efinition of the term under considera- on as applied to materiality, and will ow examine its use as applied to spir- uality. And between them there is difference; whereas in the case of he material, or natural, the quickening nd death transpire at the same mo- ent, on the other hand spiritual death not necessarily connected with quick- ning power. That is, if grain dies rst it cannot be quickened, but spir- ual death may transpire years before the "spirit in man" is quickened to spiritual life. Spiritual death (I use this as a distinguishing term), is caused by man's being enlightened by God's word; that he is naturally in a sinful state. "The carnal mind," as the apostle says, "is enmity to God;" but men do not realize this fact until obedience is demanded of them by their Maker, and they could not realize it then if they did not possess what beasts do not, an intuitive knowledge between good and evil. Hence no man is accounted a sinner by his Maker until he is enligtened on the former point, and is endowed with the latter, as all intelligent persons are. Therefore wherever God's word is proclaimed the hearers thereof die spiritually, and if they believe and obey, they are quickened from that death; i. e., made spiritually alive. We learn by this what the term death often means in Scripture. At a certain time Jesus said, "let the dead bury the dead." That is, let such as had heard the gospel and had not obeyed it—the spiritually dead—bury their friends who were literally or physically dead. More proof might be adduced on this point, but this will suffice.

I have already remarked in substance that man must know good from evil, and not that alone, but must have a knowledge of God's commands and the obedience required, before he can in a Scriptural sense become a sinner, or, in other words, die. And as has been previously shown, every man must necessarily—like grain—pass into that state before he can be quickened to spiritual life; and as Adam, being made of dust, could not have been endowed with a knowledge of good and evil, and consequently of his Maker's demands on him as a responsible being, therefore some provision was necessary to endow him with the one, so he might inteligently understand the other. And this provision was made by his Maker in causing to grow in a conspicuous place, i. e., "in the midst of the garden," the tree of knowledge of good and evil. This is evident from the following considerations:

In the first place, as God made nothing in vain, and as this tree in common with all others in the garden, was "pleasant to the sight and good for food," he must have designed it for Adam's use, and consequently for his ultimate benefit, else it was deceptive: and who dare bring the charge of intentional deception against his Maker? Second, the name of the tree desgnated its object and use, which was to so operate on Adam's spirit as to open his eyes as to his Maker's claims on him to obedience, and this as before shown, would produce death. And thus Adam died in the day of his transgression, as his Maker told him he should. And by that act he fell, by figure only, as grain falls into the ground in order to be quickened, but was in reality elevated above the brute creation, inasmuch as he could now do what they could not, lay hold on eternal life. I know this is turning the tables on the popular view, and it is time they were turned, for a more God-dishonoring dogman never was invented than the popular one of the fall of Adam and Eden from holiness to depravity. Where did the advocates of this dogma get their vaunted knowledge that Adam was created holy? Do not the Scriptures repeatedly affirm the opposite? Is it not recorded of him that he was made of dust, "of the earth, earthy"? And as this proves he was created in the image of the earthy, will its advocates please inform us at what time in his history, while a resident of the garden, he was converted and thus obtained the heavenly image? Or, if this should prove a difficult task, please inform the reader, as collateral evidence, at what hour and place Adam and Eve were accustomed to offer up their devotions to their Maker, either by prayer, singing, or any other way? Is it not really about time that some one among the millions who subscribe to this dogma should, instead of trying continually to make one assertion back up another, produce at least one well sustained argument from Scripture in its favor? Adventists demand Scripture proof of their opponents that the dogma of immortal soulism and endless torment are true. "Physician heal thyself." Here is one you endorse, as destitute of a Scripture basis as theirs. I know you will say Adam disobeyed his Maker and consequently deserved punishment. True, and he received "a just recompence of reward" for his transgression. But are you not aware that a wise Father punishes his children only for their good? And rest assured if Adam forfeited by his as he might and ought to have done, it worked out for him a "far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory" than he could ever have attained unto if he had never eaten of the forbidden tree. Man was made subject to "vanity," or mortality, "in hope," and it will be his own fault if he does not profit by it.

Our Young Folks.

The Baby.

BY GEORGE MACDONALD.

Where did you come from, baby dear?
Out of the everywhere into the here.

Where did you get that little tear?
I found it waiting when I got here.

What makes your forehead so smooth and high?
A soft hand stroked it, as I went by.

What makes your cheek like a warm white rose?
I saw something better than any one knows.

Whence that three cornered smile of bliss?
Three angels gave me, at once, a kiss.

Where did you get that pretty ear?
God spoke, and it came out to hear.

Where did you get those arms and hands?
Love made itself into hooks and bands.

Feet, whence did you come, you darling things?
From the same box as the cherubs' wings.

How did they all come just to you?
God thought of me, and so I grew.

But how did you come to us, you dear?
God thought about you, and so I'm here.

Bible Stories for Children.

UNCLE SIMEON.

(ELIJAH.)

One of the boldest and most striking characters we have presented in the Old Testament, is that of Elijah. "Elijah the Tishbite of the inhabitants of Gilead," is about all that is given in the Bible of his parentage of or where he lived. The nature of the country on the east of the river Jordan, called Gilead, or Mount Gilead, was very hilly—almost mountainous, and the people living in those regions lived somewhat different from those in the valleys and plains. Elijah's clothing consisted mostly of skins of animals, and he had a mantle or cloak made from sheep-skins, which is frequently spoken of in the Bible.

Like Jeremiah, he was called by God to an important work, and he went about it with much boldness and zeal. The life he led in the rough country lying east of Jordan was calculated to develop almost a fierceness of zeal in him, and also make him bold and direct of address or speech. This may be seen in his accusation of Ahab, the most wicked king that ever ruled Israel. God had chosen Elijah for this special purpose, because this wicked king had openly sinned against God, had married a wicked woman from one of the heathen nations, and submitted himself to the idolatrous customs of her heathen country, by instituting in the land of Israel the worship of Baal, instead of the worship of the true God.

By direction from heaven Elijah pronounced a curse upon this wicked king and his kingdom, that the dews should cease to fall, and there should be no rain for a certain time only as Elijah should pray for it. Accordingly the dearth came, and the wicked woman caused the young prophets of the land to be put to death, and sought the life of Elijah; but the Lord conducted him to a place of safety, to the brook a lesson is here taught of the watchful care of the Divine Father over his faithful children, and what an impressive example of faith and confidence in him can be seen in the solitary wanderings of this man of God.

But at length the water in this brook all dried up, and under the direction of God, the prophet sought another home. Near the place called Zerephath he saw a poor widow gathering a few sticks with which to cook her meal; for the famine was hard, and she had but a handful of meal. When he asked for a drink of water, and a piece of bread, she told him of her wretched condition: "I have not a cake, but a handful of meal in a barrel, and a little oil in a cruise, and behold I am gathering two sticks that I may go in and dress it for me and my son, that we may eat it and die." Do you not think this was a sad tale? We have no reason to doubt but that all the people in the land of this wicked ruler were as near starving as this poor woman, all because they forgot their God and worshiped idols, as did the heathens.

Elijah told the woman to prepare a cake for him, and then one for herself and her son, and that she need not fear, as the meal and the oil should not fail during the remainder of the famine. He remained in her house over two years—until the famine had passed, the three living on the multiplied meal and oil. So the prophet was not only miraculous at the brook for a few months, but by the same miraculous power was he sustained through the entire dearth.

When the famine was so great that there was not to be found in any of the deep shaded torrent beds, nor around the springs, to be found any vegetation growing, then the prophet appeared before Ahab, saying, "Thou hast forsaken Jehovah and followed Baals." The account given in 1 Kings and 18th chapter, of the assembly of 850 prophets of idolatry in all their splendor and the one lone man of God with his wild, shaggy hair, scanty garb of skins, and the mantle, accompanied by his one attendant, but in calm dignity of demeanor repairing the ruined altar of Jehovah with twelve stones.

The prophets of Baal offered their sacrifice and prayed, "O Baal, hear us." But all was a failure. Elijah then slew his sacrifice, laid it on his altar, drenched the sacrifice and altar with water, until a large trench was filled around the altar. He then prayed God to show his divine power by destroying it in the presence of all these people, which was very soon done by fire from heaven. The people were astonished, and cried out. "The Lord is God." Cherith, where the water would be the longest in drying up. Here the prophet was hid in a cave in the rocks, and in this solitary spot he was miraculously fed by ravens, who "brought him bread and flesh in the morning, and bread and flesh in the evening." What Elijah then had the prophets of Baal all slain, none escaping. Elijah then told Ahab that the drouth would soon end. But we will have to stop—will tell you more about this good man at some future time.

Answers to Questions.—No. 1.

1. Persia—Ez. 7:1.
2. Elisha—2 Kings 14:21.
3. Uzziah—2 Chron. 26:9.
4. Sisera—Judges 3:18—21.
5. Thirty three years—2 Sam. 5:5.
6. Jacob—Gen. 29:20.
7. Mount of Gilboa—1 Sam. 31:1.
8. Esau—Gen. 25:33.
9. Elisabeth—Luke 1:5.

GET to the root of things. The gold mines of Scriptures are not in the top soil, you must open a shaft; the precious diamonds of experience are not picked up in the roadway; their secret places are far down. Get down into the vitality, the solidity, the veracity, the divinity of the word of God, and seek to possess with it all the inward work of the blessed Spirit.—Spurgeon.

Books and Tracts.

List of Books, Tracts, etc., kept on sale at the Advent Christian Times office.

RESURRECTION OF THE DEAD IN Christ, (German.)

NATURE AND DESTINY OF MAN; (German.)

RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. (German.)

DESTRUCTION OF THE WICKED (German.)

SOUL OF MAN. (German.)

THE KINGDOM OF CHRIST ON Earth (German.)

IS MAN IMMORTAL? (German.)

☞ The above seven German tracts are published by L. Reimer, 1618 Chestnut st., Philadelphia, Pa., and can be ordered either of this office or of him.

IMMATERIALISM, by Wm. Sheldon Post-paid, 5c.

THE PENALTY OF SIN, by O. R. Fassett. Post-Paid, 6c.

AN ADDRESS TO M. E. CON- ference of Minnesota, by Eld. L. C. Collins. Should have a very wide circulation. Post-paid 7c.

THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL answer to the questions: Is the popular conception of the soul that of Holy Scripture? By Chas. L. Ives, M. D., Professor of the theory and practice of Medicine in Yale College, 1873, 119 Pages. For sale at this Office. Price 25 cents

END OF THE KING OF THE NORTH, and the Impending Time of Trouble, and the soon Coming of Christ. By L. T. Cunningham. Price, 15 cents.

THE JUDGMENT IMPENDING Prophecy and Chronology converging to one grand culmination. By L. T. Cunningham, Price, 15 cts.

THE DESTINY OF MAN, by William Erwin. An excellent treatise by a member of the M. E. denomination that gives the Bible view in a radical style. 2:8 pp. nicely bound in cloth and gilt. $1,50 post paid.

MODERN SPIRITISM, its origin, character and tendencies, by C. C. Marston 50 pp. in paper $6,00 per hundred; $1.00 per dozen; 12 cts per dozen

COMPLETE WORKS OF FLA- vius Josephus: translated by William Whiston. 879 pp. in cloth post paid $3.00

THE COMING EARTHQUAKE, By D. T. Taylor. 25 Cents.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—Unabridged. $3, by express. Condensed, sufficiently full for ordinary purposes, by mail. $1 75.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE: with engravings, maps, and tables. $1 50. By mail. $1 75.

BIBLE DICTIONARY: by Smith & Bre- num. The best abridgment of Smith's larger work. Leather $6. cloth $5. By express.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. $22 by express.

ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORD- ance. With Greek and English index. $5 by express.

ENGLISH-GREEK LEXICON. By Lid- dell & Scott. A standard work. $7 50. by express.

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 32mo. 25c.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock, $2 50, Post-paid.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3:1. By H. L. Hastings. Paper, 50c. Postage, 5c.

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY of God: and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By P. A. Smith. 12c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble, 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man of the earth earthy: the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 7c.

PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC meet- ings. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 40c. a hundred.

THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; with a re- view of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabbath By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of Scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added History, Statistics and Tables. Cloth, $3; leather $ 00

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. By Wellcome and Good. 460 pp. $1 25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATTHEW, 24 and 25, 20c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM. 20c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM. 25c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic; Which? 10c. $3 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a dozen, The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one adress, post-paid, for $4 00.

LAST DAY TOKENS: by S. S. Brewer. 35 cts.

FUTURITY; by Wm. Sheldon. 20 cts.

THE INDEX BOOK MARK; 25c a dozen.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. Nothing so good on this topic. Cloth $1. Paper, 50c. 3 copies for $1, post paid.

GOOD TIDINGS; a general view of Advent doctrine. By an Association of Authors. 428 pages. Cloth 65c, Paper 40c. Post paid.

THE NATURE AND DURATION OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT: By Henry Con- stable, Prebendary of Cork, 25c, Post paid.

THE FAITH OF ST. PAUL; showing it to have been neither Pharisaic nor Sadducean, but Hebrew. By L. C. Collins. 15c.

THE STATE OF THE DEAD; a Discus- sion between N. Field, M. D. and T. P. Connelly, Esq. pp. 200. 50c. Post Paid.

THE JUBILEE HARP. $1. $9 a d zen.

HADES AND SHEOL; by L. C. Collins. The best published exposition of the parable of Dives and Lazarus. 15c.

THE ADVENT MINSTREL; a choice collec- tion of spiritual songs. Flexible cloth, 25c. $2 13 a dozen. Paper, 15c. $1.50 a dozen.

HYMNS OF THE HARP; Cloth, 75c, Leath- er $1.

HYMNS OF THE MORNING; A new and rich collection. Cloth 50c. Leather, 60c.

PAULS EARNEST EXPECTATION and hope; (Phil. 1:21: 23.) By O. R. Fassett. 5c.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT: containing the original Greek text of the New Testament with an interlineary word for word English translation and a new emphatic version, ... pp. Cloth $4; leather back, $5. Postage, 15c.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, October 28, 1873.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES

IS PUBLISHED BY THE

Western Advent Christian Publishing Society.

Business Office: McCormick's Block, corner of Randolph and Dearborn Sts., Room 27.

[Printing Presses located at Norwood Park.]

TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.

Sent Three Months for Fifty cents.

The officers of the Society are as follows.

President—DARIUS MATHEWSON,
Vice President—L. C. COLLINS.
Secretary—FRANK BURR.
Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

GEO. HOWARD, E. McCULLOCH,
J. M. SNOOK.

A. W. TUCKER, TREASURER & BUSINESS AGENT.

Don't Fail

To give your name and address full and complete every time you write.

Remember

That all Drafts, Money Orders, etc., payable to the Business Agent, A. W. Tucker.

☞ Address articles intended for publication in THE TIMES to Wm. Sheldon, and all business communications to

A. W. TUCKER,
27, McCormick Block,
Chicago, Ill.

☞ Write Appointments, Notices, Communications for THE TIMES, and business matters, each on separate pieces of paper.

☞ Do not fail to comply with the above suggestions.

APPOINTMENTS, NOTICES, etc., must reach us by Thursday night to be in time for the next issue. Please remember this.

Business Department.

Book and Job Work.

We are now prepared to do all kinds of BOOK and JOB PRINTING with despatch, and in a satisfactory manner. Books, Pamphlets, Tracts, Leaflets, Circulars, Envelopes, Letter-Heads, Note-Heads, Bill-Heads Cards of all kinds, etc., etc. Our friends and the business public will do well to get our figures before ordering work elsewhere. Estimates cheerfully given.

A new edition of the "Harmonium," by J. W. Taylor Send in your orders.

The Swedish tract, "Paull Trangtan och Hopp," by O. R. Fassett, is again ready for delivery, and can be had in large or small quantities at this office.

"Immortality," by James H. Whitmore, printed in the Swedish language. 200 pp. For sale at this office. Price 50 Cents.

We have just received a quantity of "Hymns of the Morning," with music, neatly bound in cloth or leather with stiff covers. Price, 50 cents cloth, 60 cents leather. Sent by mail or express.

WE are now ready to fill orders for the Rochester discussion between Chas. C. Barker and James H. Whitmore. Subject: "Is the definite time of the second advent revealed in the Holy Scriptures?" Price 50 Cents.

WE have now ready and for sale at this office, the new tract entitled "Sanctification: or The Gift of the Holy Spirit," written by Thomas G. Baxter, of Chicago. All requiring the same will please address the Business Agent, 25 West Lake street, Chicago. Single copies, five cents.

⁂ Any book or tract treating of the Destiny of man, Soon coming of Christ, His Reign on the Renewed Earth, the Reward of the Righteous, and kindred Bible topics, can be had by addressing,

A. W. TUCKER,
27, McCormick Block, Chicago.

Letters Received.

☞ ALL letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgement is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

J J Friend
O H Hammond
D Young
L R Bowen
J T Ongley 2
E Angel
D Mathewson
N J Sade
D Claw
C Morgan
P H Drake
M Trask
J Luna
J V Himes
M A Newcomb
E McNutt
H A Plank
M Thomson
J Hamilton
M Mathews

J S Mowlin
N J Sade
C Rima
Uncle Simeon
M S Hall
E McNutt
E Royce
M McCulloch
D R Mansfield
L G Sovereign
M C Carter
M Grant
J Arnold
A P Brandt
S K Gibson
D Mathewson
J A Smith
L C Kerr
B J Goodwin
R J Jeffrey

J M Corey
H Ziegenfuss
E D Lyon
J Marsh
L A Gilpin
J Thompson
T Howell
D O Amos
J Pinkham
F Burr
W H Lansing
T W Richards
N McCulloch
A W Reedy
S K Gibson
T C Birkett
W H Hornaday
D B Beal
J M Bleven

Books and Tracts Sent by Mail.

J T Ongley
E Angell
P H Dayhoff

D O Amos
J J Smith
F W Powers

O H Hammond
N J Sade
E Howriet

Change of Post Office.

S. K. Gibson, Wilton Junction, Iowa.

The $4000 Fund.

To Free the Society from Debt.

CASH.

Previously Reported	$671 50
PLEDGES PAID.
Previously Reported	124 50
Martha Trask	10 00
Miles Grant	10 00
Mrs M. C. Carter	50

WESTERN TRACT FUND.

Previously Reported	$4 00

Notices.

A Request.

The undersigned would be glad to correspond with any brethren in N. W. Kansas, who want the word of life and the near approach of Christ proclaimed in their vicinity. Address, N. J. SADE,
Shackley, Mitchell Co., Kan.

Marriages.

MILLER—MILLER.—In Ionia, Warren Co., Ill., Oct. 12, 1873, by Eld. Marshall McCulloch, Mr. Brainard Miller and Miss Anna E. Miller, all of Warren Co., Illinois.

Appointments.

ILLINOIS.

Genoa, Oct. 27, and every other Sabbath until further notice. E. H. BURINGTON.

New Rutland, LaSalle county, the first and third Sabbaths of each month.
Alexis, Warren county, special meeting Oct. 15-26, and longer if the interest demands.
C. C. MARSTON.

Lynnville, 10:30 a. m., first and second Sabbath's in each month.

Phelps S. H. second Lord's day of Oct. and Nov., at 10.30 a. m.
Lynnville, at 7 p. m.
Rochelle, first and third Sabbaths, as brethren may arrange.
New Rutland, fourth Sabbath, morning and evening.
After November three-fourths of my time will be to use as the way may open.
Such are my arrangements until further notice.
ALICE E. RATHBUN.

Preaching brethren coming to Chicago wishing to preach in Advent Christian Chapel, will correspond with H. P. WRIGHT,
203 Walnut Street.

Advent Christian Mission, Cairo, Ill.—On and after Sunday, Aug. 31, services will be held in the school-room on the corner of Twelfth street and Washington avenue, opposite the Bulletin office. Morning discourse 11 o'clock a. m. Bible class for adults 4 p. m. Evening preaching at the ringing of the bells in the city. Brethren passing are cordially invited to call. H. JOHNSON,
T. S. THOMASSON.

To the friends of the Advent cause in Southern Illinois.—There will be a meeting of days, commencing at the Mt. Joy Advent Church, Johnson County, Sunday, Nov. 3, and continue over the second Sunday. Eld. Wm. McCulloch has consented to be with us on that occasion, and will probably remain for a number of weeks. Come, brethren, from all parts of this section of the State and work for the Lord. F. A. CHILDS.

Hinckley, 10:30 a. m., Sabbath, Nov 2.
Eagle S. H., 2:30 p. m., Sabbath, Nov. 2.
C. W. SMITH.

Mineral, Nov. 2.
Wyanet, Nov. 2.
Toulon, Winn S. H., Nov. 9.
Mineral, Nov. 16.
L. F. COLE.

MICHIGAN.

To the churches in Branch County, Michigan, I would say that my appointments for the year 1873 will be as follows:
East Gilead, Jan. 5, 10 a. m., and every two weeks after.
California, Jan. 12, 10:30 a m and every two weeks after.
Alganese, every Sunday 2:30 p m and evening. Prayer meeting every Wednesday evening.
Moscow, as Br. Buell may arrange, Nov. 10, eve.
Clinton, as Br. Fabrick " " 11,
Canton, as Br. Clark " " 12, 13,
Dearborn, Friday evening and over Sunday, Nov. 14, 16. J. R. PRESTON.

Pt. Sanilac, Advent chapel, every Sunday morning, at 11 o'clock.
Lexington, Everett's Hall, every Sunday evening 7½ o'clock. GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.
Lexington Lake Shore Advent Chapel, 3 miles north of village, Sabbath, Jan. 26, at 3 p. m., and every two weeks after.
Lexington Ridge, White S. H., Feb. 2, at 3 p. m. and every two weeks after.
GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.

Woodbridge, Johnson S. H., 10:30 a. m.
Bell S. H., 2:30 p. m., Sunday, July 20, and every two weeks thereafter.
Brodock S. H., Tuesday eve., July 22, and once in two weeks.
WM. BRANCH.

There will be preaching in the Louis S. H., Almer, Sept. 7, 3 p. m., and every two weeks.
In the Delling S. S., Almer, Sept. 7, 10½ a. m., and every two weeks.
In the Graham S. H., Fairgrove, Sept. 14, 10½ a. m. Centre S. H., 5 p. m., and in the Huron S. H. 8 p. m. and every two weeks.
E. H. DURAND.

Porter Centre, Mich., Sept. 21, 10½ a. m., and 8 p. m., and every four weeks.
JAS. FERRISS, Pastor.

INDIANA.

Meeting every Sunday at the Volga Church, commencing at half-past 10 o'clock, preaching alternately by T. V. Porter and the pastor,
LEMUEL RECORD.

Lavalle, Oct. 5, and every four weeks until further notice. Fairfield, Sept. 12, and once in two weeks. Baraboo, Sept. 12, and once in four weeks. Webster's Prairie, Sept. 28, and once in four weeks. Fisher Valley, Sept. 21, and once in four weeks. E. P. GRAVES.

WISCONSIN.

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.
Call upon Brn. Bracket or Reese, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.
A. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

Springville, May 4, and every two weeks until further notice.
Dudley S. H., May 11, and every four weeks until further notice.
Chaseburg, May 17, and every four weeks until further notice. JOS BROWN.

Burns (Methodist House) Nov. 2, at 11 a. m. and 7 p. m.
Sparta, Nov. 9, at 10.30 a. m. and 7. p. m.
May the divine counsel direct, and the ever blessed Spirit be signally present in these christian gatherings of the saints. F. W. HOUGH.

There will be a quarterly meeting at Williamsburgh, Trempealeau Co., in the northern district of Wis. conference, as Br. Lewis may arrange, to commence Friday eve., Oct. 31, and hold over the following Sunday. Eld. Adams and myself will be present. Come brethren and sisters, one and all. Let us have a refreshing season in the name of the Lord. G. W. TURNER.

Montpelier, Sunday, July 13, at 10:30 a. m., and 7:30 p. m., and every four weeks following.
Bridgewater, Sumner S. H., Monday eve., July 14, and once in two weeks thereafter.
WM. BRANCH

Preaching at the Cain S. H., Decatur Co., first Sunday in each month, at 11 a. m.
Duble S. H., 3 p. m., first Sunday in each month. J. F. ADAIR, Pastor.

Preaching in Thompson's Hall, Delmar, Clinton Co., Jan. 5, and every two weeks until further notice. C. W. PITCHER.

Manchester, the first and third Sabbaths of each months, at 11 a. m. and 2:30 p. m.
J. RIDLEY, Pastor.

MINNESOTA.

Ridgeway, Feb. 8 and 9, and once in four weeks.
P. MITSON.

The Lord willing, I will preach at Monticello, Wright Co., Minn., every Sunday at 10½ a. m.
Bally S. H., at Bally Station, near Elk River, Oct. 12, at 3 p. m. and every two weeks after until further notice.
Otsego Village S. H., Sunday Oct. 5, at 3½ p. m. and once in two weeks after, until further notice.
Lilly Pond, Sunday eve., Oct. 5, at 7 p. m., and once in two weeks after, until further notice.
Preach at Big Lake Station, Sunday eve., at 7 o'clock.
S. C. WELLCOME.

P. S. Our Covenant Meeting is held the last Saturday, before the first Sunday in each month, at 2 p. m., at the Monticello Chapel.

NEW YORK.

Saratoga Springs; meetings every Sunday in the Lower Town Hall, corner of Broadway and Lake Avenue, at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday School and Bible class directly after morning service.
Prayer meeting every Thursday eve., at the residence of the pastors, 213 Broadway, nearly opposite Town Hall.
Saratoga Springs, N. Y., prayer meeting every Thursday evening, at the residence of the pastors, Van Dam street, first house east of Broadway.
WM. A. and M. L. DURAND, Pastors.

Elmira, N. Y., near Br. John S. Smith's Nov. 14. JOHN T. ONGLEY.

OHIO.

A meeting of days will be held at Rockbridge, O., commencing on the second Saturday in Nov. Br. Frank Burr will be our minister.
WM. H. HULL.

IOWA.

Warsaw, third Saturday in each month, in the evening.
Chester S. H., Sunday following, 11 a. m.
Corydon, 3 p. m. J. F. ADAIR.

Clinton, Iowa, July 1873. Gospel meetings held every Sunday. Prayer meetings on Thursday evening. S. B. MARSH, Pastor.

Broken Kettle S. H., the first and third Sunday of each month, until further notice.
HATTIE A. PLANK.

Preaching at Crook's School-house, Wayne county, Sunday, Aug. 24, at 3 p. m., and every three weeks until further notice.
A. A. DAVIS.

The first session of the A. C. Q. Conference of Iowa, Manchester District, for the present Conference year is to be held at the Odell, School House, located about 3½ miles N. E from Greeley, Delaware Co., to commence Oct. 31, at 7½ o'clock p. m. Come one, come all. M. J. JAMES, Sec.

PENNSYLVANIA.

In Quincy Hall, 127 Leacoc Street, Allegheny, Wednesday evening, Nov. 26, and over Sunday, the 30th, as the brethren may arrange.
G. W. STETSON.

There will be preaching at Sutton's Corners, (first station below Meadville, on Atlantic and G. W. R. R.,) every evening from Monday, Nov. 3d, to Friday, the 7th, at such place and hour as the brethren and friends residing there may arrange and give notice of. G. W. STETSON.

Warrensville, Lycoming Co., Sunday at 10.30 a. m. and 7 p. m., Nov. 2.
Quaker Hill or Shangai S. H., as the friends may appoint, Eve., Nov. 4.
Montoursville, Eve., Nov. 5.
Muncy, Eve., Nov. 6.
Canton, Bradford Co., Eve., Nov. 7.
Segurs S. H. Tioga Co., Eve., Nov. 8, and Sunday at 10.30 a. m., Nov. 9.
Chases Mills, Eve., Nov. 9.
Wellsboro, as brethren may appoint, Nov. 11 and 12.
Sutton S. H., as brethren may appoint, Nov. 13.
South Creek, Bradford Co., Nov. 16.
East Troy, " " Nov. 18.
Williamsport, Lycoming Co., Nov. 19, 20.
Waterford, Erie Co., Eve., Nov. 22, and over Sunday, as friends may appoint, Nov 23.
Millers Station, Crawford Co., Nov. 24.
Rootville, Crawford Co., Nov. 26.
JOHN T. ONGLEY.

MISSOURI.

There will be a special meeting at the McKinley S. H., eight miles east of Unionville, Putnam Co., Mo., to commence Nov. 14, at candle lighting, and continue over Sunday. The object is to organize a quarterly conference for the southern part of the annual conference known as the S. Iowa and N. Mo. A. C. conference. There are a small number of churches that have not as yet been known in the annual conference. Will Br. Snow be with us? Brethren, let us make a grand rally. N. C. MILLER.

The first Quarterly Meeting of the Western M. O. Conference will be held with the Greenland Church for 1873, commencing on Friday, December 5, and will hold over Sunday. We shall look for a full delegation from all of the churches for there will be much important business.
Visiting brethren will find a cordial welcome. Try and come out largely. Our cause is one of immense interest. Don't delay.
J. M. BLIVEN, Sec'y.

The first Quarterly Meeting of District 2, in the S. W. Iowa and N. W. Mo. Conference will be held with the Quitman Church, commencing Oct. 31, and continuing over Sunday.
Dear brethren suffer me a word. If you would see the cause placed upon a firmer basis, see it grow and prosper. Be present at this meeting. If you desire to have your heart warmed anew with holy fire, and nerved for deeds of noble daring, "be present at this meeting." If you have any love in your poor hearts for Jesus, any love for the brethren, any bowels of compassion for perishing sinners.
Come praying, come hoping, yea come believing. Oh for more faith in God.
In behalf of the Conference. D. O. HINE.

CANADA.

The Advent church at Montreal, holds regular meetings every Sabbath, at Temperance hall, 6 Craig St.

JOSEPH LUTRELL, Sec'y. 357, St. Joseph St.

Advertisements.

HADES
OR
The Intermediate State of Man,

BY HENRY CONSTABLE, A. M.

Author of The Duration and Nature of Future Punishment. This work consists of twenty-four chapters, 167 pages, at $1.00 per copy, and can be had by addressing A. W. TUCKER, 27 MacCormick Block, Chicago, Ill.

"DOMESTIC" PAPER FASHIONS.

Agents Wanted.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE.

DOMESTIC SEWING MACHINE CO., N. Y.

National Agriculturist & Bee Journal.

In its new form—16 large quarto pages—adorned with beautiful engravings, is now offered to subscribers with the choice of four beautiful chromos, for $1.50; or with a choice Lithograph or Book, for $1.25 or for only $1.10 without any Premium. Only $1.10 in clubs of ten without any premium. One copy free, one year to the agent sending a club of ten, besides the regular cash commission or premiums; or one copy free as a premium for three subscribers Send for a sample copy (sent free) and see our list of valuable Premiums and cheap outfit of Chromos Lithographs, &c., offered very low to those who will [illegible] agents. Write now before you forget it, to
H. A. KING & CO., 14 Murray St., New York.

LATEST GEMS OF MUSIC.

PRICE REDUCED.

The Second Edition, Hymns of the Morning, by Dr. Barker. Fifty-cents cloth; Sixty-cents leather

First Edition of Songs of Praise, by Dr. Abbott. Ten cents. Both books sent by mail for Fifty cents.

Address, C. W. SARGENT,
Box 436, Concord, N. H.

THE CHRISTIAN. A large live, Eight Page Family Paper, containing incidents, records of providences, sketches, music, poetry, true stories for young, old, saints and sinners. No sectarianism, controversy, politics, puffs, pills, or patent medicines. ONLY 50 CENTS A YEAR; 10 COPIES, $5.00 Send 10 CTS. for THREE specimens. BEFORE YOU FORGET IT! Volumes begin with Jan. THE LITTLE CHRISTIAN. FOR SUNDAY SCHOOLS: 5 copies, $1.00 A YEAR. Live TRACTS 1,000 pp. for $1.00. BEST GREEK AND ENGLISH CONCORDANCE in the world, $2.50. By a new and special arrangement, THE CHRISTIAN, and LLOYDS MAP OF PALESTINE will be sent for $1.00. Those wishing the Map on rollers (which is much the best) will send 25 cents extra. Address H. L. HASTINGS, Scriptural Tract Repository, 20 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

The Bible Banner.

THIS PAPER IS EDITED BY

ELDS. JOHN COUCH, WILLIAM SHELDON,
A. A. PHELPS.

Published monthly, at $1 a year, with a choice book, or fine lithograph engraving, given to each subscriber Furnished to subscribers of THE TIMES three months free, or both one year for $2.75, with a book or engraving free. All orders for the Banner and TIMES should be addressed to W. L. HIMES, 25 West Lake St., Chicago, Ill. All orders for sample copies (sent free) or for the Bible Banner ALONE, should be addressed to H. A. KING, 14 Murray St., New York.

SUBSCRIBE FOR

The Millenarian,

A

New Monthly Periodical.

THE MILLENARIAN advocates the Personal Coming of Messiah, the Restitution of all things spoken by the Prophets, the Resurrection of the holy dead at the commencement of the Millennium, the overthrow of all anti-christian systems, the literal fulfillment of prophecy, a life of purity, and trust as necessary to an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom of Jesus our Lord.

Terms, $1.00 per year.

Address, H. V. REED, Norwood Park, Cook Co., Illinois. 10-73

THE RAINBOW,

A Magazine of Christian Literature,

With special reference to the revealed future of the Church and the World.

Published Monthly, at $2.50 Per Year.

EDITED BY WM. LEASK, D. D.

Address, KELLAWAY & BROWN,
78 Newgate St.,
LONDON, E. C., ENGLAND.

To every New subscriber paying for THE TIMES one year in advance, also to every Old subscriber paying ALL ARREARS and one year in advance, we will send a copy of one of the following valuable works:

DEBATE ON

"THE STATE OF THE DEAD,"

Field vs. Connelly, 300 pp.

BIBLE DOCTRINE of the SOUL,

By Prof. Ives, 110 pp.

NATURE AND DURATION OF

"FUTURE PUNISHMENT,"

By H. Constable.

We have a large number of these good works which we want placed in the hands of the reading public, thereby doing good to them, and largely increasing our list of subscribers. We desire that every reader of the TIMES to at once enter earnestly into this good work.

Anyone sending Four New Subscribers With eight dollars, will receive their choice of the above works in addition to the one to each subscriber.

Begin the work at once. Sample copies of the paper sent on application. Address,

A. W. TUCKER.

THE
American Bee Journal

Established by the late Samuel Wagner in 1861, at Washington, D. C., is now published at Chicago, Ill., and edited by

W. F. CLARKE,

President of the North American Bee-Keepers' Society.

The American Bee Journal.

is the organ of no man, party, patent hive, or selfish interest. Its one aim will be to advance Apiculture.

We expect to give good value to all who subscribe, and the larger our hosts of readers the better value we shall be able to give them.

Lend us a hearty Vigorous Co-operation, and we promise on our part to SPARE NO PAINS to make this the

BEST SCIENTIFIC AND PRACTICAL JOURNAL OF APICULTURE IN THE WORLD.

SINGLE COPIES, TWO DOLLARS A YEAR IN ADVANCE.

CLUB RATES:

$1 75	per year, in clubs of	two	or $3 50
1 67	" " "	three	" 5 00
1 50	" " "	six	" 9 00
1 40	" " "	ten	" 14 00
1 25	" " "	twenty	" 25 00

Specimen Copies sent on application. Communications and remittances to be addressed to

W. F. CLARKE,
AMERICAN BEE JOURNAL,
Room 27, McCormick Block, Chicago, Ill.

Chicago & North-Western Railway.

THE ROUTE DIRECT

From CHICAGO to OMAHA,
From CHICAGO to MILWAUKEE,
From CHICAGO to SHEBOYGAN,
From CHICAGO to ST. PAUL.
From CHICAGO to MADISON,
From CHICAGO to GREEN BAY,
From CHICAGO to MARQUETTE,
From CHICAGO to SIOUX CITY,
From GHICAGO to YANKTON, DAK.
From CHICAGO to GENEVA LAKE,
From CHICAGO to FREEPORT,
From CHICAGO to DUBUQUE,

IS VIA THE

Chicago and North-Western
RAILWAY.

In Going North, North-West or West
You cannot go amiss if you buy your Tickets Via this Route.

See that Your Tickets Read via
Chicago & N-W. Railway.

This is the Pioneer Route to and from
CALIFORNIA and the PACIFIC SLOPE.

Full information in regard to this Route will be cheerfully furnished by all Ticket Agents in the EAST, WEST, NORTH or SOUTH.

Running Through Five States,

This Great Railway Line, made up of nearly Two Thousand Miles of the best Railroad there is in the North-West, offers inducements to the traveling public second to none in the country, and superior to any offered by its competitors.

Steel Rail, Shortest and Quickest Route, Westinghouse Safety Air Brakes, Miller's Safety Platform, Pullman Palace Cars.

Speed, Comfort and Safety, are combined, and render this the Great Route for the People.

IT REACHES

North, North-West and West,
And Traverses the Garden Spot of the World.
ILLINOIS, MICHIGAN, IOWA, WISCONSIN, AND MINNESOTA,
ARE ALL TRIBUTARY TO THIS LINE.

Chicago Ticket Offices:

Corner LaSalle and Randolph Street.
Corner Canal and Madison Streets.
Kinzie Street Depot, cor West Kinzie and Canal Streets.
Wells Street Depot, cor. Wells and North Water Streets.

W. H. STENNETT, MARVIN HUGHITT,
Gen'l Passenger Agent. Gen'l Superintendent.

AGENTS. Terms Extra. "CYCLOPEDIA of Things Worth Knowing," &c., 25,000 WANTS SUPPLIED. CHROMO The greatest of the age. RECEIPT BOOK FREE. Continental Pub. Co., St. Louis, Mo.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, October 28, 1873.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES
IS PUBLISHED BY THE
Western Advent Christian Publishing Society.
Business Office: McCormick's Block, corner of Randolph and Dearborn Sts., Room 27.
[Printing Presses located at Norwood Park.]

TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.

Sent Three Months for Fifty cents.

The officers of the Society are as follows.
President—DARIUS MATHEWSON,
Vice President—L. C. COLLINS.
Secretary—FRANK BURR.
Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND.
PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
GEO. HOWARD, E. McCULLOCH,
J. M. SNOOK.

A. W. TUCKER, TREASURER & BUSINESS AGENT.

Don't Fail
To give your name and address full and complete every time you write.

Remember
That all Drafts, Money Orders, etc., payable to the Business Agent, A. W. Tucker.

☞ Address articles intended for publication in THE TIMES to Wm. Sheldon, and all business communications to

A. W. TUCKER,
27, McCormick Block,
Chicago, Ill.

☞ Write Appointments, Notices, Communications for THE TIMES, and business matters, each on separate pieces of paper.

☞ Do not fail to comply with the above suggestions.

APPOINTMENTS, NOTICES, etc., must reach us by Thursday night to be in time for the next issue. Please remember this.

Business Department.

Book and Job Work.

We are now prepared to do all kinds of BOOK and JOB PRINTING with despatch, and in a satisfactory manner. Books, Pamphlets, Tracts, Leaflets, Circulars, Envelopes, Letter-Heads, Note-Heads, Bill-Heads Cards of all kinds, etc., etc. Our friends and the business public will do well to get our figures before ordering work elsewhere. Estimates cheerfully given.

A new edition of the "Harmonium," by J. W. Taylor Send in your orders.

The Swedish tract, "Paall Trangtan och Hopp," by O. R. Fassett, is again ready for delivery, and can be had in large or small quantities at this office.

"Immortality," by James H. Whitmore, printed in the Swedish language. 265 pp. For sale at this office. Price 50 Cents.

We have just received a quantity of "Hymns of the Morning," with music, neatly bound in cloth or leather with stiff covers. Price, 50 cents cloth, 60 cents leather. Sent by mail or express.

WE are now ready to fill orders for the Rochester discussion between Chas. C. Barker and James H. Whitmore. Subject: "Is the definite time of the second advent revealed in the Holy Scriptures?" Price 50 Cents.

WE have now ready and for sale at this office, the new tract entitled "Sanctification: or The Gift of the Holy Spirit," written by Thomas G. Baxter, of Chicago. All requiring the same will please address the Business Agent, 26 West Lake street, Chicago. Single copies, five cents.

⁂ Any book or tract treating of the Destiny of man, Soon coming of Christ, His Reign on the Renewed Earth, the Reward of the Righteous, and kindred Bible topics, can be had by addressing,

A. W. TUCKER,
27, McCormick Block, Chicago.

Letters Received.

☞ ALL letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgement is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

J J Friend
O H Hammond
D Young
L R Bowen
J T Ongley 2
E Angel
D Mathewson
N J Sade
D Clow
C Morgan
P H Drake
M Trask
J Lunn
J V Himes
M A Newcomb
E McNutt
H A Plank
M Thomson
J Hamilton
M Mathews
J S Mowlin
N J Sade
C Rima
Uncle Simeon
M S Hall
E McNutt
E Royce
M McCulloch
D R Mansfield
L G Sovereign
M C Carter
M Grant
J Arnold
A F Brandt
S K Gibson
D Mathewson
J A Smith
L C Kerr
B J Goodwin
R J Jeffrey
J M Corey
H Ziegenfuss
E D Lyon
J Marsh
L A Gilpin
J Thompson
T Howell
D O Amos
J Pinkham
F Burr
W H Lansing
T W Richards
N McCulloch
A W Reedy
S K Gibson
T C Birkett
W H Hornaday
D B Beal
J M Bleven

Books and Tracts Sent by Mail.

J T Ongley
E Angell
P H Dayhoff
D O Amos
J J Smith
F W Powers
O H Hammond
N J Sade
E Howrist

Change of Post Office.

S. K. Gibson, Wilton Junction, Iowa.

The $4000 Fund.

To Free the Society from Debt.

CASH.
Previously Reported	$671 80
PLEDGES PAID.
Previously Reported	194 50
Martha Trask	10 00
Miles Grant	10 00
Mrs M. C. Carter	50

WESTERN TRACT FUND.

Previously Reported	34 00

Notices.

A Request.

The undersigned would be glad to correspond with any brethren in N. W. Kansas, who want the word of life and the near approach of Christ proclaimed in their vicinity. Address, N. J. SADE,
Shackley, Mitchell Co., Kan.

Marriages.

MILLER—MILLER.—In Ionia, Warren Co., Ill., Oct. 12, 1873, by Eld. Marshall McCulloch, Mr. Brainard Miller and Miss Anna E. Miller, all of Warren Co., Illinois.

Appointments.

ILLINOIS.

Genoa, Oct. 27, and every other Sabbath until further notice. E. H. BURINGTON.

New Rutland, LaSalle county, the first and third Sabbaths of each month.
Alexis, Warren county, special meeting Oct. 15-26, and longer if the interest demands.
C. C. MARSTON.

Lynnville, 10:30 a. m., first and second Sabbath's in each month.

Phelps S. H. second Lord's day of Oct. and Nov., at 10.30 a. m.
Lynnville, at 7 p. m.
Rochelle, first and third Sabbaths, as brethren may arrange.
New Rutland, fourth Sabbath, morning and evening.
After November three-fourths of my time will be to use as the way may open.
Such are my arrangements until further notice.
ALICE E. RATHBUN.

Preaching brethren coming to Chicago wishing to preach in Advent Christian Chapel, will correspond with H. P. WRIGHT,
203 Walnut Street.

Advent Christian Mission, Cairo, Ill.—On and after Sunday, Aug. 31, services will be held in the school-room on the corner of Twelfth street and Washington avenue, opposite the Bulletin office. Morning discourse 11 o'clock a. m. Bible class for adults 4 p. m. Evening preaching at the ringing of the bells in the city. Brethren passing are cordially invited to call. H. JOHNSON,
T. S. THOMASSON.

To the friends of the Advent cause in Southern Illinois.—There will be a meeting of days, commencing at the Mt. Joy Advent Church, Johnson County, Sunday, Nov. 3, and continue over the second Sunday. Eld. Wm. McCulloch has consented to be with us on that occasion, and will probably remain for a number of weeks. Come, brethren, from all parts of this section of the State and work for the Lord. F. A. CHILDS.

Hinckley, 10:30 a. m., Sabbath, Nov 2.
Eagle S. H., 2:30 p. m., Sabbath, Nov. 2.
C. W. SMITH.

Mineral, Nov. 2.
Wyanet, Nov. 3.
Toulon, Winn S. H., Nov. 9.
Mineral, Nov. 16.
L. F. COLE.

MICHIGAN.

To the churches in Branch County, Michigan, I would say that my appointments for the year 1873 will be as follows:
East Gilead, Jan. 5, 10 a. m., and every two weeks after.
California, Jan. 12, 10:30 a m and every two weeks after.
Algansee, every Sunday 2:30 p m and evening. Prayer meeting every Wednesday evening.
Moscow, as Br. Buell may arrange, Nov. 10, eve.
Clinton, as Br. Fabrick " " 11,
Canton, as Br. Clark " " 12, 13,
Dearborn, Friday evening and over Sunday, Nov. 14, 16. J. R. PRESTON.

Pt. Sanilac, Advent chapel, every Sunday morning, at 11 o'clock.
Lexington, Everett's Hall, every Sunday evening 6½ o'clock. GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.
Lexington Lake Shore Advent Chapel, 3 miles north of village, Sabbath, Jan. 26, at 3 p. m., and every two weeks after.
Lexington Ridge, White S. H., Feb. 2, at 3 p. m. and every two weeks after.
GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.

Woodbridge, Johnson S. H., 10:30 a. m.
Bell S. H., 2:30 p. m., Sunday, July 20, and every two weeks thereafter.
Brodock S. H., Tuesday eve., July 22, and once in two weeks.
WM. BRANCH.

There will be preaching in the Louis S. H., Almer, Sept. 7, 3 p. m., and every two weeks.
In the Delling S. S., Almer, Sept. 7, 10½ a. m., and every two weeks.
In the Graham S. H., Fairgrove, Sept. 14, 10½ a. m. Centre S. H., 5 p. m., and in the Hinron S. H. 8 p. m. and every two weeks.
E. H. DURAND.

Porter Centre, Mich., Sept. 21, 10½ a. m., and 3 p. m., and every four weeks.
JAS. FERRISS, Pastor.

INDIANA.

Meeting every Sunday at the Volga Church, commencing at half-past 10 o'clock, preaching alternately by T. V. Porter and the pastor,
LEMUEL RECORD.

Lavalle, Oct. 5, and every four weeks until further notice. Fairfield, Sept. 19, and once in two weeks. Barabo, Sept. 12, and once in four weeks. Webster's Prairie, Sept. 26, and once in four weeks. Fisher Valley, Sept. 21, and once in four weeks. E. P. GRAVES.

WISCONSIN.

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.
Call upon Brs. Bracket or Reese, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.
A. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

Springville, May 4, and every two weeks until further notice.
Dudley S. H., May 11, and every four weeks until further notice.
Chaseburg, May 17, and every four weeks until further notice. JOS BROWN.

Barns (Methodist House) Nov. 2, at 11 a. m. and 7 p. m.
Sparta, Nov. 9, at 10.30 a. m. and 7. p. m.
May the divine counsel direct, and the ever blessed Spirit be signally present in these christian gatherings of the saints. P. W. HOUGH.

There will be a quarterly meeting at Williamsburgh, Trempealo Co., in the northern district of Wis. conference, as Br. Lewis may arrange, to commence Friday eve., Oct. 31, and hold over the following Sunday. Eld. Adams and myself will be present. Come brethren and sisters, one and all. Let us have a refreshing season in the name of the Lord. G. W. TURNER.

Montpelier, Sunday, July 13, at 10:30 a. m., and 7:30 p. m., and every four weeks following.
Bridgewater, Sumner S. H., Monday eve., July 14, and once in two weeks thereafter.
WM. BRANCH.

Preaching at the Cain S. H., Decatur Co., first Sunday in each month, at 11 a. m.
Duble S. H., 3 p. m., first Sunday in each month. J. F. ADAIR, Pastor.

Preaching in Thompson's Hall, Delmar, Clinton Co., Jan. 5, and every two weeks until further notice. C. W. PITCHER.

Manchester, the first and third Sabbaths of each months, at 11 a. m. and 2:30 p. m.
J. RIDLEY, Pastor.

MINNESOTA.

Ridgeway, Feb. 8 and 9, and once in four weeks.
P. MITSON.

The Lord willing, I will preach at Monticello, Wright Co., Minn., every Sunday at 10½ a. m.
Bally S. H., at Bally Station, near Elk River, Oct. 12, at 3 p. m. and every two weeks after until further notice.
Otsego Village S. H., Sunday Oct. 5, at 3½ p. m. and once in two weeks after, until further notice.
Lilly Pond, Sunday eve., Oct. 5, at 7 p. m., and once in two weeks after, until further notice.
Preach at Big Lake Station, Sunday eve., at 7 o'clock.
S. C. WELLCOME.

P. S. Our Covenant Meeting is held the last Saturday, before the first Sunday in each month, at 2 p. m., at the Monticello Chapel.

NEW YORK.

Saratoga Springs; meetings every Sunday in the Lower Town Hall, corner of Broadway and Lake Avenue, at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday School and Bible class directly after morning service.
Prayer meeting every Thursday eve., at the residence of the pastors, 313 Broadway, nearly opposite Town Hall.
Saratoga Springs, N. Y., prayer meeting every Thursday evening, at the residence of the pastors, Van Dam street, first house east of Broadway.
WM. A. and M. L. DURAND, Pastors.

Elmira, N. Y., near Br. John S. Smith's Nov. 14. JOHN T. ONGLEY.

OHIO.

A meeting of days will be held at Rockbridge, O., commencing on the second Saturday in Nov. Br. Frank Burr will be our minister.
WM. H. HULS.

IOWA.

Warsaw, third Saturday in each month, in the evening.
Chester S. H., Sunday following, 11 a. m.
Corydon, 3 p. m. J. F. ADAIR.

Clinton, Iowa, July 1873. Gospel meetings held every Sunday. Prayer meetings on Thursday evening. S. B. MAREY, Pastor.

Broken Kettle S. H., the first and third Sunday of each month, until further notice.
HATTIE A. PLANK.

Preaching at Crook's School-house, Wayne county, Sunday, Aug. 24, at 3 p. m., and every three weeks until further notice.
A. A. DAVIS.

The first session of the A. C. Q. Conference of Iowa, Manchester District, for the present Conference year is to be held at the Odell, School House, located about 2½ miles N. E. from Greeley, Delaware Co., to commence Oct. 31, at 7½ o'clock p. m. Come one, come all. M. J. JAMES, Sec.

PENNSYLVANIA.

In Quincy Hall, 127 Leacoc Street, Allegheny, Wednesday evening, Nov. 26, and over Sunday, the 30th, as the brethren may arrange.
G. W. STETSON.

There will be preaching at Sutton's Corners, (first station below Meadville, on Atlantic and G. W. R. R.,) every evening from Monday, Nov. 3d, to Friday, the 7th, at such place and hour as the brethren and friends residing there may arrange and give notice of. G. W. STETSON.

Warrensville, Lycoming Co., Sunday at 10.30 a. m. and 7 p. m., Nov. 2.
Quaker Hill or Shangai S. H., as the friends may appoint, Eve., Nov. 4.
Montoursville, Eve., Nov. 5.
Muncy, Eve., Nov. 6.
Canton, Bradford Co., Eve., Nov. 7.
Segurs S. H. Tioga Co., Eve., Nov. 8, and Sunday at 10.30 a. m., Nov. 9.
Chases Mills, Eve., Nov. 9.
Wellsboro, as brethren may appoint, Nov. 11 and 12.
Button S. H., as brethren may appoint, Nov. 13.
South Creek, Bradford Co., Nov. 16.
East Troy, " " Nov. 18.
Williamsport, Lycoming Co., Nov. 19, 20.
Waterford, Erie Co., Eve., Nov. 22, and over Sunday, as friends may appoint, Nov 23.
Millers Station, Crawford Co., Nov. 24.
Rootville, Crawford Co., Nov. 26.
JOHN T. ONGLEY.

MISSOURI.

There will be a special meeting at the McKinley S. H., eight miles east of Unionville, Putnam Co., Mo., to commence Nov. 14, at candle lighting, and continue over Sunday. The object is to organize a quarterly conference for the southern part of the annual conference known as the S. Iowa and N. Mo. A. C. conference. There are a small number of churches that have not as yet been known in the annual conference. Will Br. Snow be with us? Brethren, let us make a grand rally. N. C. MILLER.

The first Quarterly Meeting of the Western M. O. Conference will be held with the Greenland Church for 1873, commencing on Friday, December 5, and will hold over Sunday. We shall look for a full delegation from all of the churches for there will be much important business.
Visiting brethren will find a cordial welcome. Try and come out largely. Our cause is one of immense interest. Don't delay.
J. M. BLIVEN, Sec'y.

The first Quarterly Meeting of District 2, in the S. W. Iowa and N. W. Mo. Conference will be held with the Quitman Church, commencing Oct. 31, and continuing over Sunday.
Dear brethren suffer me a word. If you would see the cause placed upon a firmer basis, see it grow and prosper. Be present at this meeting. If you desire to have your heart warmed anew with holy fire, and nerved for deeds of noble daring, "be present at this meeting." If you have any love in your poor hearts for Jesus, any love for the brethren, any bowels of compassion for perishing sinners.
Come praying, come hoping, yea come believing. Oh for more faith in God.
In behalf of the Conference. D. O. HINE.

CANADA.

The Advent church at Montreal, holds regular meetings every Sabbath, at Temperance hall, 6 Bleury St.

JOSEPH LUTRELL, Sec'y. 257, St. Joseph St.

Advertisements.

HADES
OR
The Intermediate State of Man,

BY HENRY CONSTABLE, A. M.

Author of The Duration and Nature of Future Punishment. This work consists of twenty-four chapters, 167 pages, at $1.00 per copy, and can be had by addressing A. W. TUCKER, 27 McCormick Block, Chicago, Ill.

"DOMESTIC" PAPER FASHIONS.
Agents Wanted.
SEND FOR CATALOGUE.
DOMESTIC SEWING MACHINE CO., N. Y.
490w7.

National Agriculturist & Bee Journal.

In its new form—16 large quarto pages—adorned with beautiful engravings, is now offered to subscribers with the choice of four beautiful Chromos, for $1.50; or with a choice Lithograph or Book, for $1.25 or for only $1.10 without any Premium. Only $1.10 in clubs of ten without any premium. One copy free, one year to the agent sending a club of ten, besides the regular cash commission or premiums; or one copy free as a premium for three subscribers. Send for a sample copy (sent free) and see our list of valuable Premiums and cheap outfit of Chromos Lithographs, &c., offered very low to those who will be agents. Write now before you forget it, to
H. A. KING & CO., 14 Murray St., New York.

LATEST GEMS OF MUSIC.
PRICE REDUCED.
The Second Edition, Hymns of the Morning, by Dr. Barker. Fifty-cents cloth; Sixty-cents leather
First Edition of Songs of Praise, by Dr. Abbott. Ten cents. Both books sent by mail for Fifty cents.
Address, C. W. SARGENT,
Box 496, Concord, N. H.

THE CHRISTIAN. A large live, Eight Page Family Paper, containing incidents, records of providences, sketches, music, poetry, true stories for young, old, saints and sinners. No sectarianism, controversy, politics, puffs, pills, or patent medicines. ONLY 60 CENTS A YEAR; 10 COPIES, $5.00 Send 10 CTS. for THREE specimens. BEFORE YOU FORGET IT! Volumes begin with Jan. THE LITTLE CHRISTIAN, FOR SUNDAY SCHOOLS: 8 copies, $1.00 A YEAR. Live TRACTS 1,000 pp. for $1.00. BEST GREEK AND ENGLISH CONCORDANCE in the world, $2.50. By a new and special arrangement, THE CHRISTIAN, and LLOYDS MAP OF PALESTINE will be sent for $1.00. Those wishing the Map on rollers (which is much the best) will send 25 cents extra. Address H. L. HASTINGS, Scriptural Tract Repository, 30 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

The Bible Banner.
THIS PAPER IS EDITED BY
ELDS. JOHN COUCH, WILLIAM SHELDON,
A. A. PHELPS.

Published monthly, at $1 a year, with a choice book, or fine lithograph engraving, given to each subscriber Furnished to subscribers of THE TIMES three months free, or both one year for $2.75, with a book or engraving free. All orders for the Banner and TIMES should be addressed to W. L. HIMES, 25 West Lake St., Chicago, Ill. All orders for sample copies (sent free) or for the Bible Banner ALONE, should be addressed to H. A. KING, 14 Murray St., New York.

SUBSCRIBE FOR The Millenarian,
A
New Monthly Periodical.

THE MILLENARIAN advocates the Personal Coming of Messiah, the Restitution of all things spoken by the Prophets, the Resurrection of the holy dead at the commencement of the Millennium, the overthrow of all anti-christian systems, the literal fulfillment of prophecy, a life of purity, and trust as necessary to an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom of Jesus our Lord.
Terms, $1.00 per year.
Address, H. V. REED, Norwood Park, Cook Co., Illinois. 10-73

THE RAINBOW,
A Magazine of Christian Literature,
With special reference to the revealed future of the Church and the World.
Published Monthly, at $2.50 Per Year.
EDITED BY WM. LEASK, D. D.
Address, KELLAWAY & BROWN,
78 Newgate St.,
LONDON, E. C., ENGLAND.

To every New subscriber paying for THE TIMES one year in advance, also to every Old subscriber paying ALL ARREARS and one year in advance, we will send a copy of one of the following valuable works:

DEBATE ON
"THE STATE OF THE DEAD,"
Field vs. Connolly, 300 pp.
BIBLE DOCTRINE of the SOUL,
By Prof. Ives, 110 pp.
NATURE AND DURATION OF
"FUTURE PUNISHMENT,"
By H. Constable.

We have a large number of these good works which we want placed in the hands of the reading public, thereby doing good to them, and largely increasing our list of subscribers. We desire that every reader of the TIMES to at once enter earnestly into this good work.
Anyone sending Four New Subscribers With eight dollars, will receive their choice of the above works in addition to the one to each subscriber.
Begin the work at once. Sample copies of the paper sent on application. Address,
A. W. TUCKER.

THE
American Bee Journal
Established by the late Samuel Wagner in 1861, at Washington, D. C., is now published at Chicago, Ill., and edited by
W. F. CLARKE,
President of the North American Bee-Keepers' Society.

The American Bee Journal.
is the organ of no man, party, patent hive, or selfish interest. Its one aim will be to advance Apiculture.
We expect to give good value to all who subscribe, and the larger our hosts of readers the better value we shall be able to give them.
Lend us a hearty Vigorous Co-operation, and we promise on our part to SPARE NO PAINS to make this the
BEST SCIENTIFIC AND PRACTICAL JOURNAL OF APICULTURE IN THE WORLD.
SINGLE COPIES, TWO DOLLARS A YEAR IN ADVANCE.
CLUB RATES:
$1 75 per year, in clubs of two..........or $3 50
1 67 " " " three.......... " 5 00
1 50 " " " six.......... " 9 00
1 40 " " " ten.......... " 14 00
1 25 " " " twenty.......... " 25 00
Specimen Copies sent on application. Communications and remittances to be addressed to
W. F. CLARKE,
AMERICAN BEE JOURNAL,
Room 27, McCormick Block, Chicago, Ill.

Chicago & North-Western Railway.
THE ROUTE DIRECT
From CHICAGO to OMAHA,
From CHICAGO to MILWAUKEE,
From CHICAGO to SHEBOYGAN,
From CHICAGO to ST. PAUL.
From CHICAGO to MADISON,
From CHICAGO to GREEN BAY,
From CHICAGO to MARQUETTE,
From CHICAGO to SIOUX CITY,
From GHICAGO to YANKTON, DAK.
From CHICAGO to GENEVA LAKE,
From CHICAGO to FREEPORT,
From CHICAGO to DUBUQUE,
IS VIA THE
Chicago and North-Western
RAILWAY.
In Going North, North-West or West
You cannot go amiss if you buy your Tickets Via this Route.
See that Your Tickets Read via
Chicago & N-W. Railway.
This is the Pioneer Route to and from
CALIFORNIA and the PACIFIC SLOPE.
Full information in regard to this Route will be cheerfully furnished by all Ticket Agents in the EAST, WEST, NORTH or SOUTH.
Running Through Five States,
This Great Railway Line, made up of nearly Two Thousand Miles of the best Railroad there is in the North-West, offers inducements to the traveling public second to none in the country, and superior to any offered by its competitors.
Steel Rail, Shortest and Quickest Route, Westinghouse Safety Air Brakes, Miller's Safety Platform, Pullman Palace Cars.
Speed, Comfort and Safety, are combined, and render this the Great Route for the People.
IT REACHES
North, North-West and West,
And Traverses the Garden Spot of the World.
ILLINOIS, MICHIGAN, IOWA, WISCONSIN, AND MINNESOTA,
ARE ALL TRIBUTARY TO THIS LINE.
Chicago Ticket Offices:
Corner LaSalle and Randolph Street.
Corner Canal and Madison Streets.
Kinzie Street Depot, cor West Kinzie and Canal Streets.
Wells Street Depot, cor. Wells and North Water Streets.
W. H. STENNETT, MARVIN HUGHITT,
Gen'l Passenger Agent. Gen'l Superintendent.

AGENTS. Terms Extra. "CYCLOPEDIA of Things Worth Knowing," &c., 25,000 WANTS SUPPLIED. CHROMO The greatest RECEIPT BOOK FREE. of the age. Continental Pub. Co., St. Louis, Mo.

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. XI.—NO. 13. CHICAGO, NOVEMBER 4, 1873. WHOLE NO. 496

Advent Christian Times.
Published Every Tuesday by the
Western Advent Christian Publishing Society.
27, McCormick Block, Chicago.

Poetry.

Under the Cross.

I CANNOT, cannot say—
Out of my bruised and breaking heart
Storm-driven along a thorn-set way,
While blood-drops start
From every pore as I drag on—
"Thy will, O God, be done!"

I thought but yesterday
My will was one with God's dear will;
And that it would be sweet to say—
Whatever ill
My happy state should smite upon—
"Thy will, my God, be done!"

But I was weak and wrong,
Both weak of soul and wrong of heart;
And pride alone in me was strong,
With cunning art
To cheat me in the golden sun,
To say, "God's will be done!"

O shadow, drear and cold,
That frights me out of foolish pride;
O flood, that through my bosom rolled
Its billowy tide—
I said, till ye your power made known,
"God's will, not mine, be done!"

Now faint and sore afraid,
Under my cross—heavy and rude—
My idols in the ashes laid,
Like ashes strewed,
The holy words my pale lips shun,
"O God, thy will be done!"

Pity my woes, O God!
And touch my will with thy warm breath;
Put in my trembling hand thy rod
That quickens death;
That my dead faith may feel thy sun,
And say, "Thy will be done!"

—Baptist Union.

Our Saviour's Prayers.

The inspired record shows that our Saviour's life abounded in prayer to his heavenly Father.

He is first presented to us at prayer, at the very beginning of his ministerial work: "Being baptized and praying, the heaven was opened." (Luke 3: 21.)

He next appears at prayer in the course of the sermon on the mount, when he first delivered the "Lord's Prayer." (Matt. 6: 9.)

Later in his history, on a different occasion, we find him repeating essentially the same form of prayer. (Luke 11: 1.)

About the beginning of his miracles, after great success, he goes out into a mountain near Capernaum, a great while before day, to pray. (Mark 1: 35.)

When his enemies were powerfully stirred up against him, he spends a whole night at prayer, and the following day calls his twelve apostles. (Luke 6: 12.)

At another time his history presents him in the wilderness, praying. (Luke 5: 16.)

Again the scene is Jesus, alone, praying. (Luke 9: 13.)

Again, as he is surrounded by a great multitude; mothers present their little ones, asking him to put his hands upon them and pray. (Matt. 19: 13-15.)

After feeding the five thousand with the five loaves, we find him withdrawing in the evening to a mountain near the Sea of Galilee, and spending the greater part of the night in prayer. At the fourth watch of the night (about 3 o'clock A. M.) he came to his disciples, walking on the sea. (Matt. 14: 23.)

At the grave of Lazarus, deeply sympathising with the bereaved, we hear him groaning, (probably mentally praying,) and then making a prayer of thanksgiving. (John 11; 33, 38, 41, 42.)

The next scene of prayer is upon a mountain near the Sea of Galilee, at the time of his transfiguration. "He took Peter and John and James, and went up into the mountain to pray; and as he prayed the fashion of his countenance was altered, and his raiment was white and glistening." (Luke 9: 28, 29.)

Next, a few days before his death, he prays, and is answered with an audible voice from heaven. (John 12: 17, 28.)

The fullest of all his prayers on record, is that one just after he had instituted the supper, and at the close of his sermon. (John 17.)

Next, the scene is in the dark, retired walks of Gethsemane. Alone, at a little distance from Peter and James and John, at the critical period of redemption, with the most urgent entreaty, and yet with submission to the divine will, he prays three times. (Matt. 26: 39, 44)

Last of all, on the cross, he prays for his enemies, "Father, forgive them," &c., and then prayerfully commends his spirit into the hands of his Father. (Luke 23: 34, 45)

After the resurrection, on four occasions, we find him pronouncing a blessing upon his disciples. Such was the last of his life on earth. "He led them out as far as to Bethany, and he lifted up his hands and blessed them. And it came to pass, while he blessed them he was parted from them, and carried up in to heaven." (Luke 24: 50, 51.)

We may observe that his prayers were often made alone, sometimes where two or three were met together, sometimes in a larger social circle, and sometimes in the great congregation. He prayed when temptations were before him, after great successes, in times of deep trial, and when he was about to accomplish some important work.

As our High Priest he has now entered into the most holy place, within the true tabernacle, and there "he ever liveth to make intercession for us."

When he taught that "men ought always to pray," he was himself practicing what he preached to us; and as he taught so much, both by precept and example, and the Bible introduces the subject so many hundreds of times, and under so great a variety of forms, prayer must be a momentous agency in the economy of grace. "Lord, teach us to pray."—American Messenger.

A Word to the Unconverted.

"As on a sphere all smooth and round,
End and beginning are not found,
Forever, even thus with Thee—
Unending rest, Eternity!
Eternity! Eternity!
How long art thou, Eternity?
Oh man! full oft thy thoughts should dwell
Upon the pains of sin and hell,
And on the glories of the pure,
That both beyond all time endure.
Ponder, O man! Eternity!"

On the night after Hedley Vicars read in his Bible—"The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin," he could hardly sleep for thinking over that most wonderful of all truths which a sinner can discover. But it was enough. His mind was made up. "If this be true, for me, henceforth, by the grace of God, I will live as a man should live who has been washed in the blood of Christ." He displayed his banner. The Bible, lying open on his table at this passage, was hence forward to tell what a Saviour he had found, and under whose colors he intended to march the rest of his journey. And God gave him grace to hold on, till, in the trenches of Sebastopol, the bullet pierced his heart, and the good fight was ended.

Oh, my friends, young and old, who are not yet decided, may God give you grace to do as that gallant soldier did; as also did one of old, who preferred the "reproach of Christ to the treasures of Egypt." May he so reveal to you the surpassing worth of your soul, and the peerless claims of the Son of God the Saviour, that there shall henceforth be no more halting 'twixt two opinions; but that for you to live henceforward shall be Christ—the sole foundation of your hopes, the supreme object of your affections! How it would rejoice his tender, generous heart if this moment you would say, "Lord Jesus, thou art worthy, and to thee I give myself, body, soul and spirit, to be forever thine. Lord Jesus, thou art mighty; keep me from sin and Satan; keep me to thy heavenly kingdom. Lord Jesus, thou art merciful; wash away my sins in thine own most precious blood, for thine name's sake."

But perhaps you don't much like the people of God. You say that they are dull and melancholy, censorious and severe, narrow-minded and bigoted, and that you cannot take to them at all. Well, you certainly are not bound to love gloom and moroseness, and uncharitable partisanship; and it is to be regretted if the Christians you have met are marred by such infirmities. They would be far nobler characters, and more worthy of their name, if they were bright and open, expansive and magnanimous. And that is the sort of Christian which the Lord asks you to become—upright and manly, brave and truth-loving, with a mind as highly cultivated as you please, but with a pure and fervent heart. It is not so much with God's people as with God himself that you have to do, and his claims are paramount. To give him your heart. He asks it, he deserves it, and if you have a heart to give, and hold it back from infinite excellence—if you have a heart to give, and refuse it to your best friend and benefactor, there may be blemishes in Christians, but amongst the true Christians there is no one with ingratitude so base, and rebellion so dark as yours. None of them are saying, "Depart from me," or "We will not have this man to rule over us."

Never forget that God says, "The wages of sin is death," and there is death in leaving Jesus, the fountain of life. Oh, it is a chilly clime, the land of estrangement from God; and under the hazy, frosty cloud which a guilty conscience brings over the scene, confidence Godward, and the hope of a glorious hereafter, wither away. So, as you would desire never to penetrate the fearful mysteries of the second death, escape from the darkness and horrors of the first. Be sure that you have really emerged from the grave of ungodliness—the death of trespasses and sins. Be sure that, like a tombstone on your soul, there is no bad besetment, no sinful habit, holding down your spirit; and in loving obedience and affectionate communion, keep near that Conqueror of death who to faithful discipleship says, "Because I live ye shall live also."

And in daily devotion, in the sanctified Sabbath, and the frequent sanctuary, keep as near as you can to heaven's gate; in those connections and employments where He, the sinner's friend, will meet you daily, and at last give you an abundant entrance into his everlasting kingdom.—Hamilton.

The Relapse of Faith.

Peter was in prison. Herod meant to kill him after the Passover. But the Christian friends of Peter did not forget him. "Ceaseless" prayer was offered up for his deliverance. A special prayer-meeting was held at the house of Mary Mark for that purpose. It was a solemn time. James was dead; his blood even then reddened the ground. Was Peter to die too? His precious life hung in the balance. Unless God stepped beyond the operation of natural law to interfere in his behalf, his useful years must end. They believed God could do it. They had not yet learned that God was a slave to the laws himself had made, and could not suspend their operation, or go beyond it for man's good, and in answer to prayer. It was left for the unbelief of a succeeding age to shut God up in a network of law, from which he could not escape.

They asked God in the symplicity of their faith, to deliver Peter from jail; and God did it. While they were praying and believing, there was a knock at the door. Rhoda, a young girl who was there with them praying, tripped softly to the door, and asked, "Who is there?" "It is I—Peter!"

Immediately her soul overflowed with joy. "Glory to God! He has heard our prayers; Peter is free!"

She didn't even think to open the door, but ran back crying to the others, "Peter is free; he is out of jail."

Did they rejoice, praising God too? No; they would not believe her word, but said "Thou art mad!" Strange relapse into unbelief! Had been praying in faith for this very thing, and now, when their prayer was answered in full, and one of their number reported Peter standing at the outer gate, free and well, they swung back into unbelief, and said it could not be. How natural is unbelief! Thus you, young convert, when under the conviction of sin, prayed God to forgive you, and convert your soul. It was done. You were filled with the light of the morning. Joy, like a flood, poured in upon your soul, and testified of God's grace.

But in a little while, the tempter suggested that it was a delusion, and you said, "Oh, I am afraid that I was mistaken!" You relapsed again into unbelief.

Mother, your child was sick. The crisis came; you knelt by the bedside; how you prayed God to raise your child; it was done. Next morning, when the physician came, he said the child was better, and would recover. Did you praise God for it? No; you hardly remembered that you had prayed to him in behalf of your child. You praised the physician; recommended him to all your acquaintances, but said nothing about the Great Physician; to whom you had applied in your trouble; you suffered a relapse of faith.

Or, you were sick yourself. The tide of life ran far down. Physicians gave you up. Some dear friend knelt at your side as knelt Luther at the side of the sick Melancthon, and wrestled with God for you. You felt in your soul that his prayer saved you.

But as you got better, you became ashamed of that impression, and spoke not of it, lest some one should consider you a fanatic; for that kind of faith is not fashionable in the churches. You relapsed into unbelief.

Or, you were in a financial strait; your note in bank was maturing. You had asked for help all around among your friends. No help was found; ruin stared you full in the face. You got down on your knees, and asked God to help you in some way; and in a most unlooked-for way, the help came, and you were out of jail.

But did you glorify God for deliverance? No; you almost forgot that you had prayed, or if you remember it, perhaps you were ready to think your deliverance as much due to your own perseverance and skill, and to luck, as to any interference on the part of God. So you yielded to unbelief.—Methodist Home Journal.

Events of the Day of our Lord.

"But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night, in which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also, and the works that are therein shall be burned up."—2 Pet. 3: 10.

Some speak of inquiry into these subjects as mere speculation, wasteful of the energies and usefulness of the men who give attention to them, and productive of more mischief than good. Such people know not what they say. The Scriptures everywhere rank them among the great potencies of the gospel, intended to subserve the most important practical results both as the personal sanctification of believers and the success of truth with the careless and the skeptical. Of this the text [2 Pet. 3: 11] is an ample illustration. "Seeing then," says the holy apostle, "that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be, in all holy conversation and godliness, looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God?" What awakening and animating power he here ascribes to these contemplations! What adaptedness he thus assigns to these doctrines to give circumspection and softness to the steps of the saints, to purge levity and holiness from their words, to inspire them for all the duties of godliness, and to carry the anticipations out among the scenes of that life of blessedness to which this world is but the vestibule! But he goes further than this. He not only beholds and acknowledges this great power in these themes to search and shake the soul, but he proceeds to put that power into practical use, as the mightiest instrument in his possession with which to ply his readers for their greater security and more certain salvation. Pointing to this great and terrible day of the Saviour's coming, to the scenes of desolation which are to attend its introduction, and the glories which it is to bring to the believing and faithful, and drawing from these the considerations with which to make his admonitions effective, he takes his stand in the presence of the whole Christian Church, and makes, this as his select, last and most solemn appeal: —"WHEREFORE, BELOVED, SEEING THAT YE LOOK FOR SUCH THINGS, BE DILIGENT THAT YE MAY BE FOUND OF HIM IN PEACE, WITHOUT SPOT, AND BLAMELESS."

A subject capable of such a use as this it is profane and blasphemous to stigmatize as a matter of mere speculation. Could any thing be more solemn, or touch more deeply upon the profoundest vitalities of religion? Let us, then, take it duly to heart, and so much the more as we see the day approaching. Happy that minister who shall fashion his exhortations to this apostolic model; and happy that man who shall model his expectations and life according to this apostolic exhortation!—Rev. J. A. Seiss, D. D.

The Curse of Neutrality.

WM. CHAPMAN.

SERMON PREACHED BEFORE THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE, CONVENED AT UTICA, MINN., SEPT. 11, 1873.

"Curse ye Meroz."—Judges 5:23.

(CONCLUDED FROM LAST NUMBER.)

II. Again, almost in every age of reform some have remained sinfully neutral.

There is a difference between sinful enmity, or direct opposition to a work, and an indolent selfish neutrality. It was wrong for the Canaanites to oppress the Israelites—but it is difficult to decide, whether their active oppression was, under the circumstances, one more criminal than the inactivity of Meroz. The latter knew that it was their duty to aid their brethren. They knew that they were right, and that they needed assistance, and they knew also that their indifference might possibly be the occasion of their defeat. Still, they came not up to help them, but left them to struggle on along. I would that I had power to apply "this point of my discourse" right home to the inactive sympathiers of the truths we promulgate. Good, firm, true and noble self-denying Adventists, have gone forth from their homes and fire-sides to engage in the work of reform. The correctness of their principles, the purity of their motives, the benevolence of their designs, have forced the conviction upon many who have witnessed their efforts, that they are right; and yet they have never moved a finger to aid them or uttered a word to encourage them. After listening to the truth, and being persuaded, and acknowledge that they have all the Bible and truth on their side, content themselves with falling back to occupy neutral ground. They do not openly oppose the work: they do not enroll themselves among its enemies; but they are not prepared to make the sacrifice which a noble and manly advocate of the truth demands of them. With one hand on (so called) Orthodoxy, and the other on (so called) Heterodoxy, they submit to bow their heads, like the sun-flower, to the last rays that may happen to shine on them. The number of reasons that may actuate them are legion. Some fear that they may sustain injury in their business; perhaps the most wealthy and influential members of the community are opposed to this New Doctrine, and they fear that they will withdraw their patronage. Or they dread the sundering of social ties. Their relatives and friends believe in the very doctrine which reform aims to correct or remove, and they can not bear the thought of arraying themselves against the errors, which friends and loved ones believe; in a word, they esteem their friends more highly than the truth, having such a forgetful mind that they could not for a moment remember the Saviour's denunciation "He that is ashamed of me before men," &c., yea more, that, "Every one that forsaketh not houses, or brethren, or sisters, or fathers, or mothers for my namesake is not worthy of me." May God in his mercy awake this sleepy class to a sense of activity, and to remember that it is more honorable to be defeated while contending for the truth, that to be victorious on the side of error. "I would that ye were either cold or hot; but because ye are neither cold nor hot, I will spew thee out of my mouth." O ye Merozites, shall God send His Angel to curse you? Shall He call upon the little band whom you know is truthful, and yet will not help, or join? Curse them, curse ye Meroz, curse ye bitterly the inhabitants thereof." Why? tell me why? curse and not bless, because ye will not come to the help of the Lord, &c.

III. God's displeasure with this neutral (do nothing) class. "Curse ye, yea bitterly." O, what an offence, and what a sin, my hearers, must this sin of omission be. All sin is offensive to God; but sin against light and knowledge are especially heinous in his sight. Such is the nature of the sin we are contemplating, (the sin of omission,) the neglect of known duty. A person may oppose a work of reform from conscientious motives, while he believes that work to be wrong; but let him be convinced that the reform is necessary, that the purity of the church and the glory of God are connected with it, and he then cannot oppose it without guilt, or the bitter curse of God resting on his soul. A man whose judgment is thus convinced about a matter, occupies a far different and more responsible position than one who is in the doubt. He cannot remain in a neutral position, without sinning against light and knowledge. Hence, it was asked me by professor Young whether I would remain in the Baptist church, if the council saw fit not to withdraw the hand of fellowship from me. No! burst from my lips, like a spring that had been suppressed; and though tearing my heart asunder by the severing of the link with my church, yet death itself was preferable to a neutrality of the faith which I had espoused.

A good Adventist cannot remain in the orthodox church, no more than a Roman Catholic can remain in the Roman church after he is convinced of its errors. He cannot enjoy his faith while in fellowship with error. "Curse ye Meroz, curse ye bitterly." Yes bitterly the inhabitants thereof, "because they came not up to the help," etc. God has always been displeased with half-heartedness. The command is, Give me thine heart—not half thine heart, not divide it in sympathy between God's truth and man's errors. Some of the severest denunciations are against those who occupy a neutral position. The Lord aid us to be positive; and that for the truth.

IV. Again, and lastly, no portion of the Christian dispensation needed a reform, more than the present. We are drawing very near to the period of time, when but one reformation can take place, and that is the consummation of all things. And the church, though it has passed through many fires, yet to-day needs the purifying process of God's providences to bring her out pure, and as a chaste virgin. The fountain stream of pure, primitive simplicity, and of pure, and undefiled religion has become much defiled. Theology to-day is taught for Bible truths. The devil's lie of "never die," for the unadulterated word; going to heaven at death, for Jesus' coming; and the new birth a metaphor. Our High Priest is called King before he leaves the intercessional mercy seat, and his kingdom the human heart, connected with an etherial, ary home, "no one knows any thing about," for spirits or ghosts to dwell in. The word is allegorically explained, till the whole word suffers, and subjected to be explained away. When we view the defilement of the church, and its poluted theology, we know that there is great need of a reform; and every true Adventist, man, woman, and child, should cry aloud the truth which he believes. If God has brought us into the light, then it is not our duty to hide it under a bushel, by standing on neutral ground "in a do-nothing" position. "Go work in my vineyard," is the command; refuse, and the curse follows: "curse ye Meroz," etc. O, my brethren! the signs of the times admonishes us to activity. Alas! how much to do ere the church is ready to receive the bridegroom. The days in which we now live are most definitely marked by the prophecies of the Old and New Testaments. In this last hundred years event after event, long since foretold, have followed each other in such a chain of consecutive order, that for the want of faith by the church in the Sacred Scriptures, they have failed to produce the interest God intended they should. Pharaoh-like, who instead of becoming inspired with reverential awe, only hardened their hearts at the repeated exhibition of his love.

The history of this world for thousands of years, has been committed to the prophets, and told to us: Four universal powers, of which so much prophecy has been given, has sank beneath the waves of time. The awful reign of terror. The spilt blood of millions that has flowed, like a crimson wave under the reign of earth's tyrant. False Christs have risen and gone, Famine, pestilence and earthquakes have taken their ten thousand per day, and the great earthquake of Lisbon, that opened the sixth seal have long continued to move and agitate the bosom of the earth, swallowing up her millions, and covering up in one solemn grave men, women and children with their mighty cities. The darkening of the sun and moon and the falling of the stars, are all in the past. The roaring sea, with its tidal waves (that was never heard of till within six years,) has swept as with a besom all before it, covering twenty thousand square miles, at a quicker rate of travel then steam can propel. "God who in sundry times spake in times past unto the fathers by prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son." And what has been the revealed secret that God has given us by his Son? But a continual stream of communications, of warning concerning the consummation of all things as seen in the 24th of Matthew. I know, my brethren of this conference that you will concur with me in saying that we are near the end. Then how much need of activity in God's chosen ones, to go forth publishing the tidings. I can not say how near, but feel that it is so near that my expectations are strong that some of us will yet live to see our blessed Jesus coming, coming to his waiting and much loved ones. It is a period in which no drones should remain in or being around the hive; but in which all should watch with great care lest they become spotted with the world.

God, "my brethren of the Advent body," has called us to a noble work We have much to tell the world, hard knocks must be endured, steady fighting must be our lot, as it was in every age of reform. There is not one of us called to stand still, and fold our arms on neutral ground, not one a permission to hold his or her peace. But cry aloud, and spare not, and shame to that soldier "who hath a name and professes the name of Jesus," who dare not unfurl his banner and let the people know where his sympathy is. Come, ye timid, wavering doubting soldiers of Christ, let not the dread of mortal frowns or the quaking of your own fearful heart overwhelm you. O come, press forward in the ranks of Christ's warriors. Then when the battle is over, and the victory won, in His Kingdom coming you shall reign with him. Old things will then have passed away, and all will be new. It will be a pure world for the pure. That holy promise will bloom, with beauty on their cheeks. No idol temple will pollute the sweet groves and mountain tops of that heavenly kingdom. There no spirit of error shall brood over battle-fields, and spots where dark deeds were done; there no frightful Golgotha or places of skull shall awaken up rememberances and associations of guilt and death. There no foul fiends will pervade the air, fragrant with the flowers of the New Paradise, or dwell amid desolating tombs. There will be no ground which once drank up the blood of martyrs, or of God's own dear Son, but what shall be made pure by fire. No serpents hiss through that land, or under the Tree of Life. No power any more shall be given him, to bruise the head of the white-robed throng that may stray by the fountain of living waters. O that will be a happy day when our blessed Jesus shall give us rest in his kingdom. Do you cry, come Lord Jesus? Yes, he will come soon with his holy angels and a glorious time of greeting we shall have with him in the air. What a vast multitude is there; no man can number them, as the stars, as the sand of the sea-shore. Abraham's promise, is verified. See them soaring upward toward the heavenly city (Jerusalem). What a mighty procession is following the King in his glory Prophets with their long flowing robes, and white with age, prophecy no more, but shout for joy. Abel is there a martyr, and at once a trophy of the power of Christ's blood to save. And there is the Lord's body-guard, loved disciples, who labored and suffered with him while upon the earth. Still they pass along; there is no end of the heavenly train. Here comes a noble company of men, women and children by the million, firm in their tread, once scared, and the smell of fire upon their They are martyrs—these were they garments, but now clothed in white; that endured trial of cruel mockings and scourgings; yea, moreover, of bonds and imprisonment. "They were stoned, they were sawn asunder, were tempted, slain with the sword: they wandered about in sheepskins and goatskins; being destitute, afflicted, tormented (of whom the world was not worthy) cast out of this world," but happy people, received of Jesus, and right on the heels of these hardy soldiers comes the staunch reformers—thunderers of the truth that shook the Papal throne, and defied its destroying fires. Glory to God! all are saved even down to the little Advent Church where ungodly men have cried we hath a devil, because we publish the gospel of his kingdom. Their cries are not the least among that blood-washed throng. Hear them shout with the prophets words, (now prediction no more,) "Lo, this is our God, we have waited for him, and he will save us." And on they move. Jesus the conquerer with his blood-washed ones is nearing the City. Let the herald fly in advance of the royal procession. Like lightning he cleaves sky; sun, moon and stars diminish in the distance. The pearly gates connected with the jasper wall of the New Jerusalem is reached. Oh! how startling his cry, and how thrilling the notes of music that drop from his lips: "Lift up your heads, O ye gates; and be ye lifted up O ye everlasting doors: and the King of Glory shall come in." Who is this King of glory? cry the shining ones as they lean forward over the jasper walls? And the response comes: "The Lord strong and mighty, the Lord mighty in battle; Lift up your heads, O ye gates; even lift them up, ye everlasting doors, and the King of glory shall come in." Glory! glory to God. The pearly gates open, and Jesus enters the capital of his kingdom with the trophies of his hard-fought battles, amid shouts of blessings, and honors, and glories from the least to the greatest. May the Lord add His blessings, and we be preserved from the curse of the sin of omission, and finally be acknowledged in his kingdom.

A Short Sermon.

T. G. BAXTER.

"How can ye believe which receive honor one of another, and seek not the honor that cometh from God only?" (John 5: 44.)

Many of the deep sayings of Jesus have a depth of meaning that we can not usually grasp by a superficial examination. It often requires a painful increase of trials to gain anything like their true meaning. It requires an honest knowledge of the affections to correctly appreciate them. Jesus sometimes addressed the affections of his hearers, rather than their intellect; and as our affections (unsanctified) are radically deranged, they seldom feel the force of those truths which our intellects are often ready to admit; but there are truths uttered by the Lord Jesus that the Judgment does not feel the force of, from the fact that they have principal reference to the moral sense, which is rendered stupid by sin, and ignorance of our real condition. Such is the truth presented by our text, which seems to strike at the root of our pride and selfishness. The good Lord seems to be resolved upon killing the pride of human glory. No flesh shall glory in his presence. His people are to be a crucified people; that is, all the carnal affections must by some cause or other suffer death. (Gal. 5: 24.) "And they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts." There are two prominent points which are presented in this verse: (1) a life that God has no use for, from the fact that it cannot cut any figure in his kingdom, and (2) a real death of that life, a death that commenced, progressed, and is finished; and all this to be completed before they can be called Christ's. O, how many profess to be Christ's who look upon this death from a slip-shod standpoint, and in just about the same light our Orthodox friends do upon physical death, (more alive than they were before death). God's people are to have spiritual life vs. carnal life, and the spiritual life begins just where the carnal life ends. John caught the God-giving arraignment when he exclaimed (John 3: 30), "He (Christ) must increase, but I (John) must decrease." This is a primary and unalterable condition of discipleship—an antecedent of sonship. From these premises as a foundation, we have a few practical thoughts to offer. Christian perfection is eminently a practical matter. Our shortcomings herein are not so much in theory as in practice and in experience. Many professors are well instructed theoretically, but alas! how few real possessors there are. We have many teachers, but few living examples. Many write well, and preach well, and exhort well, and sing well, and pray well, upon entire holiness, who have a painful sense of their deficiencies in both experience and practice. The writer of this sermon feels what he has long since learned, that it were easier to teach twenty than to be one of twenty to be taught. Who of all that profess to be an Advent Christian, preacher or layman, that can truthfully re-utter the sentiment that fell from the Saviour's lips,—"I seek not mine own will, but the will of the Father that sent me." "I receive not honor from me." Can you, dear reader? can I? Whoever can has a glorious experience. Were we to answer the question: What is one of the strongest passions of men? we should answer, the love of human honor, the love of applause. If any say no, we fear it is because they do not understand what this means. We fear they have not learned the first and most important lesson in mental philosophy—"Know thyself." Wretched self: how it has polluted this world. It mars whatever it touches. It always seeks the highest seat in the synagogue. As a drop of some kinds of coloring will tincture a large pail of water, so a little self will destroy and mar that which would otherwise be a good Christian character. With most men this is the king passion. It is true it does not reveal itself in all men alike; but it is the same thing, a little honor. O, how sweet a thing it is—how palatable to the human nature: we drink it down as the thirsty ox drinks in the cool spring water. This passion, well regulated by the power of God, may be a great blessing; but how sadly is it abused. The honor that cometh from God only, men generally will not seek. We ought to say with Paul: "We preach not ourselves, but Christ Jesus the Lord." So in our writing, or singing, or whatever we do, we ought to make God very prominent, and eclipse self, and make all worldly honor bow to the honor and approbation of God—"please God if the heavens fail," should be the motto of all. What would we think of the photographer who, in taking a portrait of his customer, should make himself the most prominent and conspicuous in the picture? or the poet who should exalt himself more in his poem than his patron? this is the very thing we are guilty of who seek the honor of men more than that which comes from God only. Jesus said: "Woe to you when all men speak well of you;" but how many there are among us who think it a sad calamity when our names are cast out as evil for the truth we hold. When we fear the reproaches of men, how can we prize the honor of God? Do we love to be highly esteemed by our brethren? Do we love to be called smart? Do we love to be the bell sheep? These are the ways we receive honor from men. If the foregoing be a correct view of these words of Christ, then we have a correct clew to the fact why so few professors of religion ever attain to the full stature of a man in Christ, and why there are so many dry, lean dwarfs, even among our people—a people that ought to be, as it were, a blaze of fire in these dark sinful days. It seems the love of worldly honor, in some one of its varied forms, has so deep a hold upon some of our affections, that it seems to be almost an impossibility for us to be wholly the Lord's. The text informs us that faith is essential to a complete development in holiness, and that the love of worldly honor is fatal to the exercise of the faith that purifies the heart. "How can ye believe which receive honor out of another?"

Professors often ask themselves, What is it that prevents me from stepping into the highest attainments of the Christian life? Why is it, when I am hungering and thirsting after all the fullness of God, that I fail to exercise the faith that purifies the heart, that sanctifies? Does not the Saviour here give the cause why some come short of their exalted privilege in Christ? Is not the love of worldly honor the cause? It seems to me that it would be as impossible for a babe in Christ, or, in other words, a pardoned sinner to believe in God for sanctifying grace, or the gift of the Holy Spirit, while a love of the praise of man is predominant in the heart, as it would be to tip a mountain over, or pluck the moon out of its orbit. They cannot co-exist. Self must go under.

It is here where many of us come short. We know God's conditions of saintship, but we sometimes prefer the honor of men, and remain weak, puny dwarfs. In some instances our thirst for the honor of men is so strong that we come to have a real repugnance for the honor that comes from God only. We sometimes dislike the doctrine of sanctification because it reproves our worldly mindedness. Can we then believe for, or even desire that, holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord? What a depth of meaning there is in this derogatory reproof of the Saviour to the Pharisees and Scribes—"How can ye believe?" How can we believe? What faith can we have in Christ to sanctify us while we love the applause of men, and the things of the world more, or as much, or even half as much as we do the honor that comes from God? Tell me how can we accept Christ as a present and perfect Saviour from all sin so long as we trust in man, and love the bubbles of the world? If we want to be saved fully, will he hear our prayers while we make any reservations? There is absolutely no ground for a Scriptural, saving faith in a heart thus divided. There is no promise to such; and faith must have a promise to stand upon. With many this is the right hand and right eye sin, their easily besetting sin, by which they are overcome day after day, and week in and week out, and by which they finally backslide.

In conclusion, let us learn from hence a lesson of humility and resolve to turn our backs wholly to the honor of the world, lay hold fully upon that honor that comes from God only. If we have not been fully crucified with Christ, let us commence the task now; mortify the deeds of the body; let us endeavor to have a fellowship in Christ's humiliation; let us seek a deadness to the praise and censure of men, and in the language of the poet say—

"Take my soul and body's powers,
Take my memory, mind and will,
All my goods and all my hours,
All I know and all I feel,
All I think, or speak, or do;
Take my heart, but make it new."

A New Creature.

S. MORRETT.

"Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature; old things are passed away: behold, all things are become new." (2 Cor. 5: 17.)

These words convey the idea of a new creation, a new begetting and a new birth after all the old things are passed away.

"Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature." When? Now, or at the resurrection? I answer emphatically, not until the resurrection.

Man that was created of the dust, will be created anew at the resurrection. Man that was born of the flesh, will be born by the power of the Holy Spirit from the dead.

The first man Adam was the representative of the natural race; Jesus raised from the dead, is the representative of the spiritual, resurrected race. Man is in the first Adam (natural) until the resurrection. Then he is changed from the image of the earthy to the image of the heavenly.

Before the resurrection men can only be called children of God, by faith in Christ. Paul says, "For we walk by faith, not by sight." (2 Cor. 5: 7.) That is, they did not look at the things that were seen, but at the things not seen, things to be fulfilled in the future. He says: "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." (Heb. 11: 1.) For instance, the resurrection is the substance of our hope, the resurrection of Christ is evidence of the certain fulfilment of the believer's resurrection: so the substance of hope, and the evidence of the thing hoped for combined, is faith. So by faith we are all the children of God, in Christ. But the birth by which God's children are brought forth, has not yet taken place in our case, but it has in the case of Christ, therefore we are said to be children in him by faith. Faith here is not the cause of our being children, but it expresses in what sense we are children, viz. prospectively.

Surely since these things have been fulfilled in Christ, in his resurrection, they will also be fulfilled in all that believe in him, Jesus was begotten of God on the day of his resurrection, (Acts 13: 32. 35). By his resurrection he received a more excellent name than the angels, viz, "Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee, (Heb. 1: 1-6.)

Thus Christ being a Son of God, brought forth in his resurrection, therefore he is a representative of the children of God. That is, the children of the resurrection. Jesus said: "For they are the children of God being the children of the resurrection." (Luke 20: 36.) So then what we are said to be by faith now, will only be fulfilled at the resurrection.

Whatsoever we are by faith, we are not really, and what we are really, that we are not by faith. Faith has its fulfilment in the future. Christ was the first-born from the dead. In this birth (which was produced by the Spirit of God) the saying of David was fulfilled: "Thou are my Son, this day have I begotten thee."

Will not all God's sons be begotten in the same way? or do they become sons of God more than once? Certainly not, John says: "And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life; and this life is in his Son. (1 John 5: 11.) Every real child of God has eternal life, that is, cannot die any more, by virtue of his spiritual birth. But just in the same sense that a man is said to have eternal life now, just so is he born of God. It is now only secured for us in the birth of Christ our representative, from the dead; and in his receiving everlasting life in his birth, Jesus could not die any more after he was born from the dead. In his resurrection therefore, he received eternal life, and from the fact that the believer's eternal life is not now in him self, but only in God's Son, so the new creation, the new birth (from which alone flows eternal life) has not yet been effected in us, but in Jesus only. But because this new creation and birth is promised us, and because Jesus has been born again as the first-fruits of the spirit, therefore by faith we are born again, raised up from physical death, have put on the new (resurrected) man, have eternal life. When? Some time in the future. That which we are said to be by faith, will only be fulfilled in us in the future. If it is fulfilled in us now, then there is no faith, no hope about it. After the resurrection we will not be in Christ by faith, but we will be in him in the same sense that we are now in his image.

It is of being in Christ in this real sense that Paul speaks when he says: "Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature, old things are passed away: behold, all things are become new."

I will now notice this text and some of its connections. Paul not only declares that man will be a new creature, but all things are become new. Mind he does not say all things will appear new, but "are become new." Do all things become new every time a man is converted? certaily not. Has the earth become new? No. Peter looked for new heavens and a new earth, but not until the present earth was burned. According to Peter the fulfilment of this text is not yet. All things are not yet become new; and if not, then man is not yet in Christ in the sense spoken of. Paul says: "While we look not at the things that are seen, ("earthly, temporal things) but at the things not seen" (heavenly and eternal things.) By this it will be seen where the apostles minds and desires were. Their minds were in the world to come, beyond the resurrection. In speaking of being absent from the (mortal) body, and present with the Lord, he says: "For we walk by faith, not by sight,—so by faith (not really) they were then absent from the natural body, as Paul said to the Romans (8—9): "But ye are not in the flesh" (not in the body). They, too, were absent from the body. But evidently the Romans were only absent from the flesh by faith. Paul by faith was absent from the temporal, body while he looked at the things not seen, but the fulfilment of Paul's faith will not be until the first resurrection. Then they will in reality be absent from the natural body, and be present with the Lord. Then it will not be faith, but it will be fulfilled.

If we keep in mind that the apostles were looking only at the things not seen,—the things that are eternal,—I think we shall be able to understand when our text will be fulfilled. After speaking of the love of Christ manifested in the dying and rising for all, (2 Cor. 5: 14, 15) he says, (in the 16 v.): "Wherefore, henceforth know we no man after the flesh, yea, though we have known Christ after the flesh, yet now henceforth know we him no more. How did they know Christ after the flesh once? They knew him as he proceeded from the flesh, as he was born of the flesh; but after the spirit of God raised him from the dead, then they knew him no more as he came from the flesh, but only as he came from the spirit. So the apostles, while they were looking into the world to come at the things not seen knew no man as he proceeded from the flesh, even as they did not know Christ that way any more. They only knew man as he will proceed from the spirit at the resurrection. From this consideration, Paul speaks the language of the text: "Therefore if any man be in Christ, (not in Adam) he is a new creature, (and not only so but) old things are passed away: behold, all things are become new." When? When no man proceeds from the flesh. When that which is sown a natural body, is raised a spiritual body. When old things are passed away and all things will have become new. When man will be in Christ, in the sense that he now is in Adam. In Adam we die. In Christ we shall the made alive, and be made new creatures. When there shall be no more death, sorrow, crying, nor any more pain. Where the trumpet shall sound, where all shall be accounted worthy shall be changed from the old to the new man. Thanks be to God through our Lord Jesus Christ for this hope.

Man not Immortal.

JOHN SCARCE.

The first man Adam was made of the dust, and God breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and he became a living soul; and God said to the man after he had sinned, "Dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return." The same soul that lived, died. David said, "God will redeem my soul from the power of the grave." (Ps. 4: 15.) How could God redeem his soul from the power of the grave unless it were subject to the grave's power?

How absurd it is to sing—

"My soul shall quit this mournful vale,
And soar to worlds on high;
Shall join the disembodied saints,
And find its long sought rest;
The only bliss for which it pants,
In the Redeemer's breast."

The above has a remarkable good jingle, but alas! unfortunately it is all trash. Is it not a burning shame that man will sing such chaffy stuff?

The Christian Life.

"Complete in Jesus."

Complete in Jesus! Oh! how full
Of heavenly peace the thought;
Our souls redeemed, our pardon sealed,
Since Jesus' blood hath bought.

Complete in Jesus! Are we weak?
His power gives strength to all.
Sinful and helpless? He will spare,
And raise us when we fall.

Complete in Jesus! Have our souls
In bitter anguish cried?
'T is Jesus bears, and gives relief;
'Twas for our souls he died.

Complete in Jesus! Blissful thought!
'T is ours, whate'er befall;
Our Jesus is our Saviour, friend,
Our life, our hope, our all.

Oh! let us place our hand in his,
As on through life we go;
Like little children, trusting all
To him, come weal or woe!

Thus shall our trembling hearts be filled
With love that grows not dim,
If "Jesus only" be our peace,
And thus—"complete in him."

—Advocate of Christian Holiness.

Faith, not Works.

Some years ago, two men, a bargeman and a collier, were in a boat above the rapids of a cataract, and found themselves unable to manage it, it being carried so swiftly down the current that they must both inevitably be borne down and dashed to pieces. At last, however, one man was saved by floating a rope to him, which he grasped. The same instant that the rope came into his hand, a log floated by the other man. The thoughtless and confused bargeman, instead of seizing the rope, laid hold on the log. It was a fatal mistake; they were both in imminent peril, but the one was drawn to shore because he had a connection on the land, while the other, clinging to the loose, floating log, was borne irresistibly along, and never heard of afterwards.

Faith has a saving connection with Christ. Christ is on the shore, holding the rope, and, as we lay hold of it with the hand of our confidence, he pulls us to shore; but our good works, having no connection with Christ, are drifted along down to the gulf of [illegible] despair. Grapple our virtues [illegible] as we may, even with hooks of steel, they cannot avail us in the least degree; they are the disconnected log which has no holdfast on the [illegible] shore. —Spurgeon.

Make me

A pure heart! Who [illegible] longed for it? What lips, [illegible] by the guilt and plaint of sin [illegible] prayer, have not been hallowed also by the cry, "Wash me, and I shall be clean!"

A pure heart! What other perfection of the christian life can equal it? What can give a deeper peace, a sweeter rest, a calmer assurance, a diviner fellowship?

Pure motives, pure affections, pure passions, pure desires, pure intentions, a pure imagination, pure thoughts, and from these as from a fountain outflowing a pure, beautiful life; pure speech that never descends to vulgarity, malice or scandal; pure senses that never feed on unholy sights or sounds, nor open to the soul avenues for the ingress of corrupting suggestions; all of this is desirable—is it possible?

What could be more easy, natural, or certain than that a holy Father should purify unto himself the people of his love? If we seek earnestly to this end, may we not believe that he who said, "Blessed are the pure in heart," will bring every one of his disciples to the vision of God, and to the fulness of joy in his presence? Surely when the prayer, "Make me clean!" becomes sovereign in our hearts, God will dethrone their selfishness and blot out their stains.—Wayside.

"Christ Liveth in Me."

This, no doubt, seems a strange assertion to those unacquainted with the faith and experience of the Christian. Strange and bold as it may seem, it is confirmed by the life of every real Christian, who no longer lives the old life of sin, but the new life of holiness. In Christ, there was underived, inexaustive, intensive life, which he had the power to impart.

Christ lives in the Christian as the origin of his life. Apart from him there can be no spiritual life. In him, as believers, we live and move and have our being. Only a semblance of life, and that for a brief period, can be maintained apart from Christ. "As the branch cannot bear fruit except it abide in the vine, no more can ye except it abide in me." I have seen the pruner go forth in the spring-time to cut off the crooked and useless branches. For a time they seemed to maintain their life, the buds opened into blossoms, and leaves began to appear; but, long before the heat of summer was over, they had withered completely. They had no continuing life when severed from the tree.

Christ lives in the Christian as the result of his faith. The life I live in the flesh, says the apostle, I live by faith in the Son of God. Christ lives in us when we reflect his image. Often the child bears the likeness of a parent. So the Christian bears about the marks of the Lord Jesus. Christ lives in us as the father lives in the child who carries on the business and executes the plans of his father. Christ lives in us as the teacher lives in his pupil. The teacher has a moulding influence, and the pupil reflects the life of his master. Christ lives in us, when we do his will and execute his plans, as truly and grandly as he lived in the apostles. We can see how he lived in their preaching and in their work, in the churches they established, upon and in the great missionary enterprises upon which they embarked. He lives in us by the abiding Comforter, the Holy Spirit; for, if a man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his. If Christ live not in you, you have no life that is abiding. If he does, let the glory of your life be manifested. "Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples."

Advent Christian Times.

Wm. Sheldon, - Editor.

*₊*Give your Name, Postoffice, County and State every time you write.

CHICAGO, Tuesday, November 4, 1873.

Our Purpose.

When we accepted the position of Editor of the Times, we did it with unfeigned reluctance, as our intimate friends knew full well, and with a determination, often expressed, to retain our position but a short time, and should have left the post before now but for the remonstrances of many friends in whose judgment we repose confidence. We have never craved this position for a moment, but receiving all the votes cast for Editor but two, we consented to act for a time, and have been doing so without yet having decided to remain permanently in this position. Our present purpose is to act till the paper is relieved from embarrassment, and the publishing interest is fairly placed on the road to prosperity, which we trust will be speedily accomplished, as we have no desire to long remain Editor of the Times. Not that we have lost our interest in the work of publishing the truth—far from it—but we have a long cherished scheme of yet doing more than ever in this line outside of a weekly periodical where we shall stand in nobody's way, and yet be about our Master's business in giving publicity to the truth, by means of a series of tracts that will be adapted to the wants of error-befogged multitudes. For years we have contemplated making a special move in this direction, and would much prefer it to a newspaper life. But we are in haste to see the Times fully set free from encumberances before acting.

Any minister of the Wisconsin Conference passing near Mount Vernon Church, near Avalanche, are requested to call and preach the word.

Appointments often come too late. They must reach Chicago by Thursday night in order to get into the next Tuesday's paper, as our paper usually goes to press before the day of date.

If any friends possess new and valuable hymns that never have been used in our books, please send them to Bro. Geo. Thomson, Arena, Wis., as he is compiling a small book of hymns for social worship.

Do not let the hard times obliterate the Western Tract Fund in its infancy, and at a time when specially needed. While praying God to advance the cause of truth, remember he works by means, and just try to help answer your own prayer, and God will do what you can not do.

We notice that the editor of the Phrenological Journal has given a splendid picture of Miles Grant on his first page, with a flattering notice of his mental and moral character, as read from the Journal's stand-point of observation. If Mr. Wells can read every man as correctly, we should regard him a good reader of humanity.

Time of Christ's Resurrection.

When was Christ crucified, and when did he rise from the dead?

I understand that it is generally conceded by Adventists that our Saviour died on Thursday, and rose from the dead on the Sunday or first day of the week following.

But how can this be so, when Matthew says in chapter 28, 1st and 6th verses, "In the end of the Sabbath, [illegible] dawn toward the first day of [illegible] angel said, He is not here [illegible] as he said."

And John says, in chapter 19, verses 31 and 33, "The Jews, therefore, because it was the preparation day (F[illegible]....besought Pilate that their legs might [illegible] broken, and that they might be taken away....But when they came to Jesus they saw that he was dead already."

Now from these Scriptures we learn first, that Sabbath lasted until dawn in the morning of the first day of the week; and secondly, that at that time Jesus was already risen, and consequently that he rose on the Sabbath instead of the first day of the week, and thirdly, that if the Sabbath lasted until dawn in the first day of the week, its beginning, of course, was twenty-four hours prior to that time. Fourthly, making each day to begin at its morning dawn.

And therefore, fifthly, the day before the Sabbath being preparation day (Friday), began at dawn in the morning; and sixthly, according to the 31st and 33d verses, 19th chapter John's gospel, that was the day he died on.

I am aware that this must shorten up the time very much that Jesus was in hades, making it only two nights, one whole day, and a part of another. But what else can we do with such a plain historical record of the account?

A. J. Marsh.

1. Matthew was very precise in his utterance, though imperfectly represented in our version. His statement was: "Opsis de sabbaton"—literally, "after the Sabbath"; not after a part of it, but "after the Sabbath" entire: every minute of it had expired: "tee epithoskousee eis"—literally, "at the entering into the first day of the week." There is nothing in the original from which to derive the word "toward"—it is eis, or into. So the facts are that this occurred "after the Sabbath," and "at the entering into the first day"; or at the beginning of the first day. The Greek term opsis, does not mean "in the end of," but "after." The whole scene is laid "after" the Sabbath, and not in it. Those women rested every minute of the Sabbath, instead of breaking the latter part of it in carrying spices to the tomb. They did not start from their homes till the Sabbath had fully passed, for Luke says they "rested the Sabbath according to the commandment;" then they did not start to the tomb till after it was passed fully, after which it took them a little while to reach the spot, when they found Jesus risen.

2. Our brother's impression that the "preparation" was Friday, is entirely wrong—it sometimes came on Monday or Tuesday, and sometimes on Wednesday or Thursday. It always forced the passover, and the passover lamb was slain on the 14th of Nisan, sometimes coming on one day of the week, and sometimes on another. While in this case it was the "day before the Sabbath," John is very careful to tell us "that Sabbath was a high day," or festival Sabbath. By allowing this festival Sabbath to follow the day of the crucifixion, and the weekly Sabbath to follow that, we have just the required three days from the crucifixion to the resurrection, by counting the remaining fragment of the day on which Jesus died as a day—calling Thursday afternoon the first day. Then, too, we have the right number of nights. But if he really died on Friday, and rose on Saturday, we cannot get even a fraction of three days or three nights.

Questions on Prophecy.

1. Is there any positive proof that the two thousand three hundred days of Daniel 8: 14 end at the second Advent? Or is it only assumed? 2. Is there any evidence that the sanctuary will not be cleansed before the coming of Christ? 3. Is there any evidence but assumption that the one thousand three hundred and thirty-five days of chapter 12 commence with the rise of Catholocism? Also by what authority is it assumed that the "Holy city"—of Rev. 11, is the church? 5. "Is there any positive" evidence that any of the prophetic number, two thousand three hundred, one thousand three hundred and thirty-five, one thousand two hundred and ninety, and one thousand two hundred and sixty, days with the forty-two months, end exactly at the second Advent? Or is any application of their commencement absolutely certain, or so positive that assumption is not taken as proof? 3. Are we not compelled to assume that even those days mean years in the absence of positive proof?

M. D. Pratt.

1. We think not—they reach to the cleansing of the sanctuary, an event which though occurring in close connection with the Saviour's advent, may possibly be a little subsequent thereto.

2. Yes, for Jerusalem (which contains the sanctuary) shall be trodden down of the Gentiles till the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled," (Luke 21: 24,) and the angel told Daniel: "The people of the prince that shall come shall destroy the city and the sanctuary ....and for the overspreading of abominations he shall make it desolate, even until the consummation." (Dan. 9: 27.) The fourth Beast seen by Daniel was a Gentile power, yet Daniel says: "I beheld, even till the beast was slain, and his body destroyed, and given to the burning flame. (Dan. 7: 11.) So long will "the times of the Gentiles" last, and so long will "Jerusalem, (with its sanctuary) be trodden down of the Gentiles." The last Gentile denomination in one of its forms, will last till enveloped in "the burning flame" of the last day, and will tread down the sanctuary till then, at which epoch the Lord will come to redeem his people, and renovate their inhabitants.

3. They do not begin with the rise of Catholocism, but with a power that "maketh desolate," which was composed of civil and ecclesiastical elements combined. Catholocism preceded the rise of this power, but was subsequently an ingredient of it.

4. Yes, Daniel was to "rest" till the end of [illegible]35 days, and then "stand" in his lot. He rests in the grave, and he cannot "stand" till the resurrection brings him up; and the resurrection can not bring him up till the Lord comes. The beginning of those days can not yet be fixed upon with absolute certainty, there being so many stages in the rise of the power from which they are to be reckoned; and which stage to begin the measurment at is not infallibly certain, but approximately so at least.

5. No, for the correct rendering of the term translated days in Dan. 12, and the same term is often rendered years elsewhere in the Bible.

Questions on Dwelling in Fire.

Bro. Sheldon: In Isaiah 33: 14, we read—"Who who among us shall dwell with the devouring fire? who among us shall dwell with Everlasting burnings?" And the next verse begins: "He that walketh righteously, and speaketh uprightly—his reward is to be to dwell in devouring fire." It seems hard any way and I wish to get your views on this text.

J. L. Hersey.

Tuftonboro, N. H.

The very term itself—"fire"—conveys the idea of a consumption of that upon which it preys, and especially is that idea conveyed when the fire referred to is expressly pronounced "devouring fire;" for in order to be a "devouring" fire, it must devour. The question doubtless belongs to that class of questions which constitute the strongest form of announcing an impossibility, like Paul questioned: "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?" An impossibility is affirmed in the form of a question in both cases. We have a God-given sample of what the "everlasting burnings" or "eternal fire" will do, in the case of the Sodomites. Jesus says, "It destroyed them all;" and Peter says it turned them to "ashes:" and if such was the result in the divinely selected sample, such will be the result when it comes in contact with sinners hereafter—they, being mortal, can not "dwell" with the devouring fire. The question is prefaced by this remark: "The sinners in Zion were afraid; fearfulness hath surprised the hypocrites." Then comes the question, "Who shall dwell with the devouring fire?" Who can pass unharmed under such display of Divine wrath? Not one: God is constantly threatening the wicked with fire—but the righteous, never. And the next verse, instead of saying the righteous shall go into the lake of fire, affirms the reverse: "He that walketh righteously, and speaketh uprightly; he that despiseth the gain of oppressions, that shaketh his hands from holding of bribes, that stoppeth his ears from hearing of blood, and shutteth his eyes from seeing of evil; he shall dwell [dwell where? dwell in the devouring fire? No, but] on high—far above the fire, where his eyes shall see the King in his beauty. His defence shall be "the munitions of rocks" of which God's great city shall be built—rocks of "jasper" and precious stones" such as sapphire, chalcedony, emerald, &c. The fire is for sinners only, and they can not survive it. The saints will remain above "till the indignation be overpast."

Questions on Time.

Br. Sheldon:—If the time of our Lord's return is revealed in the Bible, (and I believe it is, and that he will come in 1873,) why not proclaim it regardless of a scoffing world? Your book (Adventism) stands as a firm rock to this day, which Orthodoxy cannot overturn. Why not come out in the Times?

N. C. Miller.

All the light we have on time we are free to proclaim in the Times. We think no true lover of Jesus would be sorry to have him come this year; though, while we still give proper weight to the arguments that seem to mark this point of time, as we did in our book referred to, we do not deem them infallible, though plausible, and deserving of respect, at least till time repudiates them, or clearer light eclipses them. We live above the influence of a "scoffing world," though not above the influence of certain facts that weigh somewhat upon our mind to diminish, in a measure, the strength of '73 argument. As for coming out in the Times, we have often done so, and intend to do so whenever duty calls. We have no light to hide.

Trip to Wisconsin.

On the 21st of Oct. we left the office to make a short visit to Wisconsin. Tarried several hours in Brodhead, which has been our home about six years. Next called at Arena a few hours. Learn that Br. Thomson is no better. Did not have time to visit him. He is now compiling a small book of hymns for social meetings, tent and camp-meetings, to take the place of the Minstrel. Br. Philo Hitchcock is soon to take charge of this church. We next went to Lone Rock by cars, from which point we went by stage and wagon to Henriette, a distance of thirty or forty miles, in a tediously cold day, and got badly chilled by so doing. On the evening of the 24th we preached to the church at this place, and met two of our Wisconsin ministers—Brn. Judson and Brown—who have made great sacrifices in preaching to the people in this new and poverty stricken part of the state—this being a timbered country, and the settlements being new.

On the 25th Br. Brown took us in his wagon through the timber settlements, about thirty miles further, to preach at the dedication of the new chapel near Avalanche, in Vernon Co. Again we were well chilled through, but preached in a school-house in the evening. The snow began to fall, and in the morning it was six inches deep, This, of course, prevented some from coming to the dedication who otherwise would have attended. It is a comfortable and convenient place of worship, and reflects credit on those who have strained every nerve to complete it. The effort had so strained their pockets that we were left to pay about five dollars more expense money than we received, besides spending about a week's time in getting to and from the place. Br. Anson Brown will preach to them a part of the time, as he has done the past year at a financial sacrifice, the people at large being poor, as in every timbered country.

Returned with Br. Brown by wagon, till we could reach a stage, and got badly chilled again. This proved a tedious trip at this season of the year; but we trust the labor was not lost.

Better Articles.

We now and then insert an article that is complained of as void of merit. We plead guilty to the charge, and would prefer to have so many articles of real merit on hand as to crowd out those of an inferior quality; but when we lack No. 1 articles, we have to use No. 2, or fill our columns too full of selections, which would call out complaints from another quarter. Would it not be better for these complainers to furnish us with some first-class articles? Give us straw, and we will make the brick. But do not blame us for the lack of merit in articles we never wrote, and do not complain of others if you can do no better yourselves, and refuse to do anything.

"Be ye holy, for I am holy."

Bro. Sheldon: Please bear with a few words from me at this time.

Is it right, is it consistent for you to insert in the Times notices of such publications as Scribner's Monthly, &c.

Are those articles which they contain suitable for Christians to read? Will the perusal of them make men better or lead them nearer to Christ? On the contrary, are they not calculated to infuse into Christians a worldly, pleasure-loving spirit? To me it seems as bad to advertise the fictions of another as to write fiction ourselves; and it does seem to me, Brother, that the notices usually found in the Times under the caption, "Book Notices," &c., are the dead flies in the ointment of the apothecary which cause it to send forth a stinking savor. But enough. May the Lord whom we serve, lead us into all truth, and enable us to cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of the Lord.

Yours in the hope of soon seeing Jesus. J. S. Thorp.

[Scribner's notice was inserted in our absence, without our knowledge. We have never yet written anything under the department of "Book Notices." We intend hereafter to guard this matter more closely. We feel about such notices much as Bro. Thorp does.—Ed. Times]

The Land of the Ashantees.

The Ashantee nation with whom England has trouble just now is a great African power. It numbers about 3,000,000 souls—of whom some 200,000 are war-loving barbarians. Every twenty-one days they hold adai, or "blood custom," at which yam and palm wine having been drunk like water, skulls are carried in procession to the sound of drums made with human skin, and most horrible massacres and debaucheries go forward. At the annual "Yam-festivals," just now coming on, they celebrate a still bloodier carnival of death, and whenever a caboocer or freeman dies, slaves are killed "to wet his grave." They eat the heart and drink the blood of a conquered enemy, and wear the teeth and finger-bones as ornaments. When the king dies, thousands of wretched slaves and attendants are slaughtered over his tomb; in a word, it is a land of murder. It was meant by nature to be a land of peace and plenty, for beyond the thick forest which lies along the coast stretches a fertile and healthy country of rich black soil, growing two or three crops yearly, and full of vegetable wonders and glories yet unnamed. The fruits and flowers of Ashantee-land are said to be perfectly marvelous. Curious animals, such as the bird called "pookoo," and the huge corpse-eating "arompe" rat, are found in the woods and clearings. Reptiles are horribly plentiful, including enormous boas; a peculiar puff adder, whose bite is certain death; scorpions as big as cray fish, and toads so large that Bosman took the first he saw for a land tortoise. Gold is the chief article exported. In that metal Ashantee-land must be fabulously rich; the chiefs wear golden breast-plate and golden or gilded warcaps. The caboceers go about with lumps of virgin gold hung upon their necks and waists, some weighing, it is said, four pounds or more; and Dowditch has described golden window-frames in the king's palace at Coomassie. After the battle of Accra, in 1826, the Ashantee King sent in as "peace-money" six thousand ounces of dust and nuggets, and the swords, muskets, and elephant-tail fans are described as being profusely rich with goldsmith's work. The Government is a despotic monarchy, the religion feticism modified by African Islamism. They believe in a Great Spirit, who, they say, created six white and six black people, and gave the first choice between a calabash and sealed paper. The blacks took the calabash—which contained gold, iron, maize, and all the wealth of nature—and the whites got the scroll, which contained instructions in the right use of all these products. Thus the whites are forever superior. As for Coomassie, the capital, accounts differ, one statement making it out a poor, struggling place of mean huts, and another, a really fine and imposing city for Africa.—Weekly Baptist.

"This Generation shall not Pass."

J. S. WIMBISH.

"Verily I say unto you, There be some standing here which shall not taste of death, till they see the Son of man coming in the Kingdom." (Matt. 16: 28.) "Verily I say unto you, This generation shall not pass till all these things be fulfilled." (Matt. 24:34.) "Verily, I say unto you, that this generation shall not pass till all these things be done." (Mark 13:30.) "Verily I say unto you, This generation shall not pass away till all be fulfilled." (Luke 21:32)

These passages of Scripture are all in the gospels which touch upon the coming of the Kingdom of the Son of man prior to the passage or death of "this generation." Able theologians have handled this subject and no doubt like myself have often been sorely puzzled over this language of the Saviour, and wished he had spoken plainer. Some profess to find no difficulty in explaining away the mystery enshrouding the light from these precious words of our Saviour. They always fall back upon the day of Pentecost, and by the strange process of reasoning they bring all the preceding passages of our Saviour's language to naught. I do not believe the darkness of the sun, the failing light of the moon, and the falling of the stars from heaven, of which the Saviour spoke, has yet taken place. And further I believe all these events will take place at the same hour in which the Son of man will descend, the dead be raised, and the heavens pass away with a great noise. These events are all connected with the final Judgment, and the end of the world, so often spoken of by our Saviour in his teachings and admonitions to his disciples and the common people. The day of Pentecost came and brought the Comforter, the Spirit of truth, promised by our Lord, but it did not bring the Lord himself from heaven. Nor can this event, or the language used in the promise or in the recital of the actual occurrence on that day when the Spirit came, be so construed or tortured into such unnatural meaning as to make it coincide with the predictions of our Saviour in reference to the final judgment. The Pentecostal feast does not satisfy my hungry mind. Therefore, to my mind, none of the solutions of this mystery have proved satisfactory. Our Saviour's language has been made to refer to the destruction of Jerusalem, and some wise theologians have come to the conclusion that our Saviour connected his second coming with that day of judgment and vengeance against Jerusalem. Jerusalem was indeed compassed with armies, and she is now trodden down by the Gentiles, but the Lord has not come nor all the times of the Gentiles yet fulfilled. I have questioned able theologians (so-called) upon the subject here spoken of by the Saviour, and pointed out the facts that the events to take place after the destruction of Jerusalem were yet future, as the sun had not yet been darkened, or the sign of the Son of man been seen in the heavens. My answer has often been that the Saviour was doubtless mistaken himself in regard to the chronological location of those periods which he spoke of in his intercourse with the disciples. The Saviour says he did not know the day or hour of his second advent, but was he mistaken in reference to the events to take place in the world's history at the time of the end? Had the holy Son of the Father committed a blunder in putting together the links of the prophetic chain? We should say not. This solution fails to satisfy the inquiring Bible student. What, then, was the true meaning of the Saviour's language in the passage quoted at the head of this article? I shall attempt to give the solution—and the only one presented to my mind as entirely free from far-fetched conclusions and erroneous constructions. Before I proceed I would remark that none of the solutions formerly given can, to my mind, be correct without striking on the main facts recorded in the context. The theory of the destruction of the holy city will not do, for the Son of man did not come into his kingdom then. The pentecostal theory will not stand the test, for only the Comforter came in Christ's name and was not preceded by the events enumerated in the context. Neither will the theory of some of our good Advent brethren correspond with the plain reading of the text. If Christ had said "that generation shall not pass," we would readily conclude he meant some future generation. But he said "this generation shall not pass away," and I take it for granted he said just what he meant, and meant just what he said. Some who were standing around him would not taste of death till they saw the Son of man coming in his kingdom. This passage proves conclusively that the Saviour was speaking of that generation which occupied the earth in his day, and which he said should not pass away until all be fulfilled. Here then comes in the seemingly inconsistency between the language of the Lord and the actual facts in the case—strengthened by history and common observation. According to history some of those who listened to Jesus did not die or pass until they saw Jerusalem compassed with armies, but this does not fulfill the Scripture. Again, according to the universal use of the words death and "pass away" any one who listened to Christ's words have long centuries been slumbering in the dust. They are all dead—they have all passed away. Yet Christ has said they shall not taste of death till all be fulfilled. "Heaven and earth shall pass away but my word shall not pass away." Here your wise theologian accuses our blessed Saviour of the weak human trait of blundering. He was mistaken, they say, for they know they are dead—yet virtually according to orthodoxy they are not dead but alive in heaven. Who was right? The Lord from heaven he knew and spoke that he knew and testified that he had seen. Yet the wise theologians will not receive the witness.

Then verily, I say, those Pharisees, who, like some Christians of to-day, believe death to be a change of seats—a transit over the Stygian river—fell asleep with the idea uppermost in their minds that they would soon be in Abraham's bosom; and consequently, as Jesus said, they have not yet tasted of death, because the first death was not bitter to their taste. Death is bitter. The second death (the death of which Jesus at that time speaks) is yet in store for that generation of vipers—to whom he preached—over whom he wept—and unto whom he cried for the space of three years. The dust of those cruel Jews, who slew their Lord and pierced him, is still resting quietly beneath the ruins of Jerusalem. When the trumpet shall sound to wake the sleeping nations under ground, the quick gathering atoms of each one of that generation of vipers will form unto a conscious being, remembering all it ever did in life, though ages be past. Then they will see the Son of God coming in clouds with power and great glory. Then will be brought to mind the painful truth that "I was one of those who slew this great King." For a few awful months, perhaps hours, those trembling hypocrites will view the glories of Christ and his Kingdom, and then, as the fearful vengeance of God is wreaked, and the unquenchable fires of his wrath are kindled among them, they will taste of death—eternal death—and pass away forever even as the smoke vanishes into thin air. This interpretation of those difficult passages of scripture will not meet with favor from orthodoxy, but I must believe the Scriptures, and exclaim, as did Paul, "let God be true and man a liar."

Philosophy assures us nothing is created and nothing is lost in nature. Matter changes form, and life and death molding and remolding it to suit the purposes of a Divine Author. So philosophy and science are in perfect harmony with God's revealed word—God created all, and philosophy says nothing of his works has he yet destroyed. What saith the Scripture? "Behold the day cometh that shall burn as an oven." Not yet come. God's mercy is great. What saith the Saviour? "Not a hair of your heads shall perish; in patience possess ye your souls." What saith philosophy? The air itself is not exempt from the laws of attraction and gravitation, but remains compassed in bounds not exceeding forty-five miles above the surface of the earth. What saith the Saviour? "No man hath ascended into heaven." How perfect the concordance. How beautiful the harmony between science and revelation. God made all things and has not yet destroyed aught. Nothing has left the earth since creation except the record of the deeds of every man from Adam to this day, and these compose the make-up of his life or soul—and by this written record shall every man be judged, rewarded or punished. Christ says, "rejoice not that the spirits are subject unto you, but rather that your names are written in heaven." God says of Israel, "I have engraven thee upon the palms of my hands, and I cannot forget thee, oh Israel." Let us be confident—the night is far spent. Let us keep up the watch. Increase the number of sentinels on the watch-towers around Zion—lest he come suddenly and find us sleeping.

The New Testament contains about 365 direct quotations from the Old Testament, besides nearly 375 indirect references and allusions. The quotations are taken from 22 books of the Old Testament, and are to be found in 17 of the books in the New. Psalms and Proverbs are each quoted 72 times, and Isaiah 58. The frequency and the character of these quotations are such as to preclude the possibility of accepting some of these books of the Bible as the revealed will of God, while rejecting the remainder.

Altitude at which Men can Live.

There has been a great deal of discussion as to the altitude at which human beings can exist, and Mr. Glaisher himself can tell as much about it as anybody. In July, 1872, he and Mr. Coxwell ascended in a balloon to the enormous elevation of 37,000 feet. Previous to the start, Mr. Glaisher's pulse stood at seventy-six beats a minute; Coxwell's at seventy-four. At 17,000 feet the pulse of the former was at eighty-four; and the latter at 100. At 19,000 feet Glaisher's hands and lips were quite blue, but not his face. At 21,000 feet he heard his heart beating, and his breathing became oppressed; at 29,000 he became senseless; notwithstanding which the æronaut, in the interest of science, went up another 8,000 feet, till he could no longer use his hands, and had to pull the strings of the valve with his teeth. Æronauts who have to make no exertions have, of course, a great advantage over members of the Alpine Club, and those who trust their legs; even at 13,000 feet these climbers feel very uncomfortable, more so in the Alps, it seems, than elsewhere. At the monastery of St. Bernard, 8,117 feet high the monks become asthmatic, are compelled frequently to descend into the Valley of the Rhone for anything but "a breath of fresh air;" and at the end of ten years' service are obliged to give up their high living, and come down to the usual level. At the same time, in South America, there are towns (such as Potosi) placed as high as the top of Mont Blanc, the inhabitants of which feel no inconvenience. The highest inhabited spot in the world is, however, the Buddhist cloister of Hanle, in Tibet, where twenty-one priests live at an altitude of 16,500 feet. The Brothers Seglagintweit when they explored the glaziers of the Ibi-Gamin in the same country, encamped at 21,000 feet, the highest altitude at which an European ever passed the night. Even at the top of Mont Blanc, Prof. Tyndall's guides found it very unpleasant to do this, though the Professor himself did not confess to feeling so bad as they. The highest mountain in the world is Mount Everest (Himalaya), 29,003 feet, and the condor has been seen "winging the blue air" 500 feet higher. The air, by the bye, is not "blue," or else, as De Saussure pointed out, "the distant mountains, which are covered with snow, would appear blue also;" its apparent color being due to the reflection of light. What light can do, and does, is marvelous; and not the least is its power of attraction to humanity.—Chambers' Journal.

A RAPID and vapory preacher may entertain the people for the hour; a smooth and flattering preacher may amuse them; a mere denunciatory preacher may produce a transient excitement—but such is the power of conscience, and such the power of God and wants of men, that, though their hearts naturally hate God's truth, they will crowd the sanctuaries where it is instructively, and fearlessly, and discreetly urged, while ignorance and error and a coward preacher put forth their voice to the listless and the few. Christ's preaching, like His character, bold and uncompromising as it was, was also in the highest degree conservative. He taught new truths, and He was the great vindicator of those that were old. All these things made Him a most impressive, powerful and attractive preacher. His instructiveness, prudence and boldness interested the people. They respected Him for His acquaintance with the truth, and honored His decision and fearlessness in proclaiming it. He was the man of the people, and advocated the cause of the people. He was the preacher to man, as man.—Tyng.

Miscellaneous.

AT HOME.

—In Chicago specie payment is being resumed by the issue of silver to circulate at par. The Treasury at Washington is also to issue silver.

—Phelps, the defaulting cashier of the New York State Treasury Department, has been committed to jail for trial in default of $15,000 bail.

—The New York Board of Aldermen, on Tuesday, 28th ult., atoned for a great many short-comings by making the handsome donation of $50,000 to the Memphis Relief Fund.

—The judgment of the Criminal Court of Cook county, in the case of Pertest, the wife-murderer, has been affirmed by the Supreme Court, and the time of his execution fixed on Friday, Dec. 12.

—The effects of the recent financial panic will be disastrously felt among the working classes in the United States; thousands of hands are being discharged by various manufactories, &c., and serious reductions of wages made.

—Gov. Dix's proclamation: "I recommend to the people of this State (New York) the observance of the 27th day of November next as a day of thanksgiving and prayer to Almighty God, in reverend acknowledgment of his unnumbered bounties."

—Mr. Shanks, city editor of the N. Y. Tribune, was sent to jail for refusing to disclose to the Grand Jury the authorship of certain articles in his paper, on which libel suits are now pending. After debate on the 28th ult., Judge Fancher adjourned a further hearing to Nov. 5.

—The Hon. Artemus Hale, of Bridgewater, who is now 90 years old, is the oldest surviving ex-member of Congress from Massachusetts. He is as hale and hearty as most men of seventy winters. A sister, aged ninety-six, and who reads without spectacles, resides with him.

—The Cooper Union, New York city, was filled at a recent meeting by the opponents of any change in the common-school system involving a diversion of the public funds to sectarian schools. Among the resolutions was one favoring the incorporation of the general principle of the school system in the Constitution of the United States, that it may become national and be placed beyond the reach of its enemies.

—The forthcoming civil service examinations in New York city will be fixed about the 13th of November, and in St. Louis on the 26th of November. Applicants for these examinations may address the heads of all government departments, including the commissioner of agriculture, excepting the Secretary of State, who does not appear in the list of those to whom applications may be sent. Applications for examination in New York will probably be too late, if they do not reach Washington as early as the 3d of November. Applications for the examinations in Cincinnati should reach Washington as early as the 8th of November, and for the examination in St. Louis as early as the 15th of November.

—The Hon. Amasa Walker has written a letter upon the resumption of specie payment, in which he commends the plan proposed by Senator Sumner in 1871, which was as follows: 1. That the Secretary of the Treasury should be instructed to prepare compound interest notes, payable in three years, bearing interest like those issued during the war, at 6 per cent., of denominations suitable for circulation. Five millions of these were to be dated the 1st of each month, and paid out for all dues of the government, except those payable in gold. 2. They were to be convertible at the end of two years into 10-40 5 per cent. bonds, at the option of the holder, and to be a legal tender. 3. Greenbacks were to be canceled as they came into the national treasury as fast as the compound notes were issued. By this process the present circulatory notes of the treasury would all be taken in and destroyed, and their place be occupied by the new issue.

ABROAD.

—The Jesuits expelled from Rome, it is said, will take up their headquarters at Malta.

—The Bishop of Orleans has charged the Cures of his diocese to pray for the restoration of the Monarchy.

—The French Assembly will not probably be opened till after the 5th of November. No time is fixed.

—Sir Samuel Baker, the African traveller, just returned to England, is very ill of inflammation of the lungs.

—Sir Henry Holland, the well-known author and physician, died on the 27th October, in London.

—The law for the reorganization of the Italian army was promulgated on the 26th ult. The strength of the army on a peace footing is fixed at 314,000 men.

—Count de Chambord, it is reported, has assured foreign powers that his policy will not be aggressive, and that he will not attempt to reinstate the Pope in his temporal possessions. It looks suspicious, however, to hear that no such assurance has been sent to Italy.

—The London Times on the morning of the 29th ult., published a note from Archbishop Manning, inclosing an extract from Mainse's Journal, in which it is stated that the Pope has written a second letter to the German Emperor, and that this letter has not been given to the public.

—General Sir Garnet Wolseley, in command of the British expedition against the Ashantees, has arrived at the scene of operations. The London Times reports, on good authority, that the General took out instructions to first offer the Ashantees peace, on condition that they lay down their arms and withdraw from the territory under British protection.

Correspondence.

Western Missouri Conference.

Second session of the Western Missouri Advent Christian Conference held with Empire Prairie Church, DeKalb Co., met pursuant to previous appointment, Oct. 4, 1873.

After being duly organized, and constitution read, invited visiting brethren to sit in council with us, and proceeded to elect officers for the ensuing year.

On motion, elected Br. H. Billmire, President; A. F. Dugger, Vice President; J. M. Bliven, Secretary; T. Griffith, Treasurer; after which a proposition was offered by our Sabbatarian brethren from Davis County to unite with us in Conference.

On motion, Brn. A. F. Dugger and C. H. Billmire were elected to draft a constitution in connection with a committee of theirs, and present them at our next quarterly conference, for consideration.

Ministers present—Brn. Longs, Williams, Leonard, H. Billmire, J. M. Bliven.

Conference opened with a small delegation and small congregation also, on account of the storm, but closed with increased interest, and a large congregation.

J. M. Bliven, Sec'y.

Neponset District.

QUARTERLY MEETING.

This meeting was held according to appointment, at Mineral; and while we did not see many of the brethren from other parts of the conference district, yet the local attendance was good, and increased from first to last.

The interest to hear, in the region about Mineral, is as good as it has been for the past six months, despite the opposition of a few hard-heads; we think the truth is gaining ground in this section, and our meetings there did much good.

Br. S. J. Mendell, the Baptist minister here for the past year and a half, having investigated our positions, now says he has discovered the truth in relation to man, his nature and destiny, and is in love with the prophecies; he also is ready to work for the dissemination of these truths; we suggested to him that he visit among our people and get acquainted.

The Treasurer would report funds on hand —twenty four cents, subject to the disposal of the conference; the first cent was received in a mission box, forwarded from Minnesota to the Secretary; the second was contributed by Miss May Newberry, a little girl eight years of age; this incipient fund arrangement is an encouraging feature, and we trust that some of our brethren who have the cause at heart will see the need of having some system for supplying tracts for free distribution, and aid in paying the expenses of those brethren called in from time to time to aid in our quarterly meetings.

In relation to our next meeting it was concluded best to hold it at Milroy, perhaps sometime in December, or the first of January, and we heartily desire to see a better representation of brethren and sisters than at any previous meeting. Come brethren, let us wake up, for it is almost morning, and, putting the shoulder to the wheel, give lift after lift until we are called from labor to rest.

Respectfully submitted.

L. F. Cole, Sec'y.

Dearborn Church Dedication.

The recently built Adventist church at Dearborn, Mich., was dedicated to the worship of God on Sunday, October 5. The services on the occasion were unusually impressive and effective. The E. D. Q. M. was being held at the same time and place, and quite a large number of brethren and sisters from abroad were present.

Eld. J. H. Whitmore, of Rochester, N. Y., preached the dedication sermon and gave the dedicatory address. Elds. J. M. Snook, R. Crandell, C. Fox and J. S. Nowlin were present, and took an active part in the exercises of the occasion.

The church itself is almost a model of neatness and plainness. It is 44x24 feet, and will seat about 200 persons. It cost about $1,500, nearly one-half of which sum was raised at the dedication. The audience generously responded to the request of the speaker, that the house should be dedicated free of debt, and within a few minutes the last dollar of indebtedness was pledged. The society here is powerful neither in numbers nor in material wealth, but it has a few large-hearted members who have been trying to show their faith by their works, and this elegant and comfortable Christian temple is one of the fruits of their endeavors to let their light shine.

May the good Lord, who has so honored and blessed this society in the past and present, still give it prosperity in the future, and when the saints who have made a covenant with God, by sacrifice, are gathered together unto him, may the members of the little church at Dearborn help to swell the numbers of that vast throng that shall come from the East, the West, the North and the South, and sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom of God—there to reap the abundant harvest of life eternal.

J. S. Nowlin.

Dearborn, Mich., Oct. 14, 1873.

From Eld. J. J. Smith, Long Island, Ala.

Eld. W. Sheldon: Please to give me the P. O. address of that Baptist minister in Arkansas who recently wrote you that his brethren had forsaken him for his new views of God's truth. I think it is probable he is an old friend of mine. If so, I want to encourage him. Glad to inform you that God is blessing his truth in Northern Alabama. Br. J. A. Cargile, myself, and others, have just closed a good meeting, at which nearly twenty persons professed a hope in Christ, four of which agreed to suffer shame for Christ with the little band recently organized by Br. Cargile. Among these, thanks to the Lord, is my son Willie. May he be kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation. Will write you more anon.

May we expect you this way again soon. Yours in the blessed hope.

[We have lost the letter of the brother referred to. Will he give Eld. Smith his address? Ed. Times.]

From Sr. Ruth M. Rowell.

Sept. 13. This day is closing up with a drizzling rain, but there are great numbers of people on this Alton Bay camp ground already, so if the rain keeps others from coming, there will nevertheless be a mass of people here on the morrow, more than could be reached by one preacher from the stand. Hence the committee have arranged to have services held at different points, and thus enable all of these people to be benefitted.

This meeting being located so near the lines of the railroad, and attended by such large numbers of people, great care had to be taken to be on the lookout for vile men, rowdys, &c. This Saturday evening I learn there are forty policemen on the ground to keep everything correct. We could see them from our elevated room in the midst of a drizzling rain, gathered in knots, consulting, patroling the streets, or coming around the corner, busy at their night's work, and I said to our "happy family,"—"We'll lie down and take our rest, but these men must work and watch through the long hours of this night."

Sept. 14. The last Sunday and closing day of this annual meeting has come, an unpleasant, misty, rainy day. The rain prevented any preaching at the stand, but the large tents were brought into requisition, and the people accommodated with preaching in them, and perhaps much, or more, good done than if the sun had shone that day in his brightness. The Lord doeth all things well. It fell to my lot to preach in the large mission tent, near the depot and landing. Though feeble in health, and deeply feeling my own weakness, yet knowing our heavenly Father can take worms and thresh mountains, I took my stand to address this portion of the great mass congregated here. The Lord helped me. At the close of the discourse, some came to me who had heard my deceased parents preach, and others who had relatives in the far West, among others a sister of our beloved Br. Bolles, of LaCrosse Valley, Wis. Truly we are now a scattered people, but we are nearing the great gathering, the blessed re-union, the grand coronation, when they shall come from the East and the West, the North and the South, and sit down together in the kingdom of God.

Sept. 15. Broke camp and dispersed; quite a number of brethren and sisters went on the same boat with me to Wolfboroug Bridge, and while detained by the connection of the railroad, Br. and Sr. Wilson, of Mechanic's Falls, Sr. Adams, of Wakefield, and others, with myself, went up to the camp ground of the Time brethren. It is a beautiful ground in a grove of pines by the side of the lake, and near the railroad depot. As we sat upon the vacant seats and looked through the trees upon the blue waters of this splendid lake almost at our feet, and listened to the rich melodies sung by some of our company, filling the air with music, I thought of the land of Beulah, its beauty and its fragrance, its music and its songs, its blessed river of life, its magnificent tree of life, and more than all—ah yes, than all beside, the King in his beauty, and the redeemed throng, who in the light of that glorious world would see eye to eye, and nothing would ever separate or mar their blessed union.

Sept. 16. Visited my deceased mother's grave, in the old graveyard of Farnsworth, and as I stood beside the marble and read the inscription, put there by loving hands, concerning her labors as a preacher of the gospel, besought God to give me grace to be the fit daughter of such a mother. I left my flowers upon her grave, and rejoined my friends, resting in the precious promise of a resurrection, when our buried dead shall live again:

> "Neither can they die any more."
> "Oh blessed day, oh glorious hope."
> "My heart leaps forward at the thought
> When in that happy, happy land,
> We will no more take the parting hand."

Visited Ordination Rock, went up the fifteen granite steps, and placed our feet upon this massive stone, and read the inscription upon the monument upon its top, erected to the memory of Rev. Samuel Hidden, who, when this country was a wilderness, and there were but few large houses, and no house for the worship of God in this town, was ordained upon the top of this rock, the townspeople standing around its base in the grandest of all earthly temples, the temple built by God, his earth beneath their feet and his sky above their head, grander than any dome ever reared by mortal man.

We left this massive rock and its monument with all of their time-honored associations, and journeyed on toward old Checorura mountain, whose bald craggy summit had been long looming up in the distance; we went on, on under the light of a golden September sun, drinking in the fresh air as we hurried on over hill and through dale with hasty strides, borne by our swift but trusty steed, until we rested under its shadow, enjoying a sumptuous feast of blackberries, such as we had not eaten or even seen for twenty years; so long, so large, so rich, and sweet; gathering them from the bushes with my own fingers it brought vividly back to me the days of my youth, and I found myself continually wishing my husband were here to enjoy it with me. I ate till I dared eat no more, then shut my eyes and left them in their richness, and onward again we sped our way toward old White Lace Mountain, stopping at length at the foot of Sugar Loaf Mountain, at an ancient moss sprinkled farm house, in one of the most beautiful of places, an apple orchard by its side, a maple grove in its rear, and just beyond the greenest of grass, in front a clear broad stream of water bubbling over and among the rocks, large and small, that lay in rich profusion all over its bed, magnificent trees upon its margin, and oh, raptures fronting the house, one of the largest of willows, sixty-four years old, measuring seventeen feet and four inches. Ah, how grand it stood, its ribbed bark looking as if carved by the hand of an artist, its majestic trunk at the proper distance from the ground, dividing off into four large trunks, like trees themselves.

How different these ancient majestic trees, with their far-reaching branches and mass of foliage, from our western shade-trees of ten or even twenty years of growth. How many times I thought of this while promenading the streets of Concord, and other large cities; how often, as I surveyed the scenery up and down the grand Merrimac with its majestic elms, and as I have ridden by the old Bearcamp river, such elms, such maples, such willows; what a wealth of beauty is wrapped up in their graceful forms and rich foliage. Surely

> "A thing of beauty is a joy forever."

Here in this ancient house we found a precious woman, and a friend of God. She gave us an excellent supper as we sat in the cool of the coming September evening by a regular old fashioned fireplace, where she boiled in a regular old tea kettle the very water our tea was made of, while she brought us a store of large, rich apples, and regaled us with maple sugar, and the nicest of maple syrup, made from her own trees. Ah, what precious moments as we took sweet counsel together, and communed with saddened hearts of other days and years.

Dear old saint of God, I may never be so honored as to enter beneath your roof again, but I expect to meet you on that "evergreen shore." As the mountains are around about Jerusalem, so the Lord is around about his people, and though our paths diverge in life, and our labors are different, yet our Master will bring us to his holy hill and make us joyful in the world to come.

There was a sick woman in this house, with whom I conversed, and for whom I prayed, when we turned our faces homeward. As we journeyed on in the hush of the evening, old Bearcamp range looming up dark and long before us, and the stars coming out one by one, I thought of other days and years, and yearned for the presence of loved ones far away.

Sept. 21. A meeting appointed in the school house in West Ossipee. The house was not large enough to contain those who came. The people, however, did what they could toward seating those upon the inside of the house, while the balance gathered around the doors and windows. After our reading a lesson of Scripture and prayer, as I arose from my knees was agreeably surprised to find Eld. W. J. Hobbs, from New York, at my side. He had been detained in a neighboring town, and came on this morning with his mother, to worship with us. I gladly relinquished the desk to him, and enjoyed the delivery of an able discourse from his lips. I followed him with a discourse in the afternoon, dwelling particularly upon the duties of mothers to their offspring. It was a good day in the Lord.

I am resting in a pleasant home on the margin of the Bearcamp river, a tributary of the Saco, and as I have sat musing upon its verdant banks, gazing upon its rippling waters, rolling on over its rocky bed, on, on, ever on to mingle with a mightier river, and eventually be absorbed among the billows of a mighty ocean, I have thought of how our little life was made up, and how we were all hastening on, on, ever on to the great ocean of eternity. Ah, how few of the great moving, rushing mass of mankind, ever hurrying on in the great rush of life, never pausing, never resting, hardly thinking, save the Epicurean thoughts, "What shall we eat, what shall we drink, or wherewithal shall we be clothed?" until stricken down by the relentless hand of death, will enjoy that coming eternity. How few of the Adamic race will, when the grand roll is called, be found worthy to walk in white with the Lamb, and enjoy the glories and bliss of that coming eternity. How many wearing out their lives chasing the bubbles of time and sense, never allow themselves time to work out that great problem of profit and loss given by Christ: "How much will it profit a man to gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" While thus absorbed in vain and sensual things, how heedless they are of the great glory, and honor, and wealth, and power, and bliss treasured up in the storehouses of eternity for all of those who will freely accept peace and pardon through Jesus, and walk worthy of the vocation wherewith they are called. Who would not willingly suffer scores of years in misery and pain if they could even eventually be admitted as sons and daughters of God, to a home in the magnificent mansions Jesus has gone to prepare for his loved ones?

The beauty of the scenery here beggars description. The graceful winding of the river, the green verdure of its banks beside the yellow sands washed by its waters, the granite rocks that beautify and adorn both its bed and margin, ever breaking its onward flow and charming our ear with its babbling music, the many trees upon its brink, with its varied green, the stately elms with the graceful sweep of their far-reaching branches, the massive willows, the grand old elms with lesser trees, standing together, of varied species, at different points their foliage tinged by autumnal frosts, the deepest crimson, the most brilliant scarlet, flaming red, pale lemon, bright orange and rich brown, with all of the indescribable tints of the closing up of this glorious autumnal month, blended in rich profusion with the many tinted greens of the deciduous trees, and all shaded in and intermingled with the dark foliage of the evergreen trees, the pine, the tamarick, the hemlock, and the fir, forming a glorious picture that rivals the works of art. The green fields of these interval farms around you, with their time-honored associations and farm houses, bespattered with moss, the fresh painted houses clustering together in this little hamlet, the large Bearcamp River House on the hill, with its ever coming and going lovers of nature in its wild grandeur and beauty, the blue everlasting mountains in the distance, the lofty, craggy peaks, and rounded summits nearer the green hills and woodland and dale nearer still, all bright and beautiful in the golden light and shimmer of this autumnal sun, fill your mind with thoughts of beauty and loveliness, of grandeur and sublimity, so full and so rapturous withal, that you almost for the time forget the busy outside world, with its commotion and strife, and sit in solitude sweet on these old granite rocks, to dream these hours away and enjoy these beautiful and magnificent works of God.

From C. Angle, Prairieville, Mich., Sept. 10.

Br. Sheldon: I saw in the paper your offer of a few of your new tracts, gratis, to go to the South. I am living way up here in Michigan, and only have what little my brethren send to me. I have bought quite a number of Immaterialism, and sent them to different places. If you could, please send me two or three of your new tracts, and they shall be read.

[We intend to fill the orders hitherto made, though our offer referred only to the South; but hereafter let no orders be sent for free tracts till a Tract Fund is raised. [Ed. Times.]

From G. P. Mattoon, Greenbush, Mich.

We have the Christian, Crisis, Times, and other papers to read; having passed through many tribulations we are in the land of Beulah, just over against the land of Canaan, waiting for Jesus to come and lead us over. We go out and try to encourage others in the way, as we have opportunity; and though we may not be heard through the Times, yet we love to read the letters of the brethren and sisters scattered abroad, having a like precious faith, looking for and hastening unto the coming of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

From Br. S. B. Lamphere, Watervliet.

Br. Sheldon: My heart rejoices to know that the debt of the Society will soon be wiped out, and I hope that there may be $1000 more raised, to place the press in a position that it may do more than ever towards publishing tracts, that they may be sent free to those who are not able to buy. I know the tracts which I have read have done me a great deal of good. We have no preaching here except the Times. I wish that there might be a church raised here. If any of the preaching brethren should chance to pass through here, I would be glad to have them stop and deliver a few discourses. It is a small town, located on the Chicago and Michigan Lake Shore Railroad, about forty miles north from New Buffalo.

I rejoice in the truth, because the truth has made me free. I board with a man that is a Deist. We have hard arguments, but truth is mighty and will prevail. He says there were two creations—says Adam was not the first man, but fails to prove the assertion. "The first man Adam was made a living soul; the last Adam a quickening spirit." (1 Cor. 15:45.)

From Eld. J. J. Smith, Ala.

"In North Alabama the Lord is blessing his truth as proclaimed by the writer. On a recent tour I met the people in many places anxious to hear about Jesus' coming. One aged and afflicted sister sent for me to visit her, because, as she said, she learned that I was preaching it, and she believed Jesus was coming soon, and wanted to see the man that preached it. We had a happy season of prayer and praise with the family. To God be all the glory. Amen.

From Sr. Ada Stewart, Bloomington, Franklin Co., Neb.

Br. Sheldon: We are living in the far West, where we enjoy little religious society. There are no Adventists here, except ourselves. I have never been baptized, but wish to be the first opportunity. I have given away tracts and lent my papers and books. I think the people would be willing to hear if any brother or sister could come here and preach. We would welcome them to our home, and do all we could for them. I wish to do all I can, for I feel we have a short time to work in.

Yours, in hope of eternal life.

From A. D. Hindman, Centralia, Marion Co., Ill.

I have felt a desire for some time to be remembered and numbered among those scattered ones of the Advent faith, seeking for life eternal, and immortality to be obtained at Christ's next coming, which time I believe, according to the prophecy and teaching of the Bible, to be near at hand, even at the doors. I am quite young in the faith, coming in at a late hour of the day into so just and noble a cause, but by the help of God I hope to come through victorious. This most precious light upon the Scriptures was plainly shown to me by the good teaching of Wm. McCulloch, in August, one year ago, at West Saratoga, Union Co., Ill. I am now living in a thickly settled neighborhood, and I am the only one of like precious faith, except my little family, which received the true light upon the Scriptures at the same time I did. The people here are very anxious to hear some one preach of the soon coming Messiah. They never heard of the Advent doctrine until I came here. The Times is my only way to give them any of the true explanations of the holy word. I believe that much good could be done here if we could get a preacher. Will some good brother come? I will try, and I think I can procure a house, and a goodly number of hearers. I am poor in this world's goods, but I intend to be a full scholar in the Lord's school. Pray God that we may be remembered among the blessed in the heavenly land. "Even so, come Lord Jesus;" come quickly. Amen.

From R. A. Miller, Iowa.

I now send you my little mite towards paying the $4,000. It looks like a very little, but my money comes in by the littles, and I will send you as fast as I can possibly spare any, until the first of January. I will pledge another dollar, any how, and hope what I now send will not be too late to do you some good. May the Lord bless you and the Advent cause. I would like so much to live where I could go to meeting with those of like faith, although I can enjoy true worship with all true Christians. I am bound for that celestial home prepared for all God's children. Then we will sing our sorrows o'er, and praise our blessed Lord and Saviour for evermore. Yours in Christ.

From Br. L. H. Little, Rose Hill, Johnson Co., Mo.

Though I have been a reader of Advent papers for twenty-eight years, it was never my favored lot to hear an Advent sermon by an Advent man till I heard Br. Oate, one year ago. I have for years believed all the doctrines taught in our much loved paper.

On the 6th of September myself and family attended the Conference in Bates Co., near Hutson, and there met with the first Advent church we ever had the pleasure of meeting with. O, how it caused our hearts to know we was with those who believe God's word, and are looking for the soon coming of the Life giver. It fell to our lot to speak twice to this dear people, in our very imperfect manner. God was with us. We formed the acquaintance of Br. and Sr. Fry, Br. Rich and others, whose memory we shall hold most dear.

Last Sabbath we listened to a big man of the United Brethren church. He took the parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus, and stated that the "soul went up through the shingle at death," and that the soul would never die, thus impeaching the word of God.

He coupled the Advent people and the Universalists as being alike, and warned the people to beware of them. O how I wished to speak a few moments and vindicate my God, but I had no liberty given.

Brethren and sisters, I love the truth. This blessed hope of soon being on the new earth, clothed with immortality, and dwelling with the pure in heart forever, gives us great joy. I am alone here, the nearest Adventist is six miles away. But I expect soon to meet with all the dear ones who love the appearing of Christ, nevermore to part; not in a sky-kingdom, but on the beautiful earth which God promised to create. By the help of God, dear brethren and sisters, I will meet you in the better land. Your brother in Christ.

From Vicilla L. Salisbury, Pa.

I have been thinking for some time past that I would write a letter to you, but knowing my inability, and feeling my weakness (for I am as yet but a babe in the knowledge of the truth), I have put it off from time to time; but to-night being alone with my three little children, I feel that it will be like talking to an old friend to write to the dear brethren and sisters. My husband and I are all the Adventists, as we are called, living near here. My husband came here nine years ago. He was the first one that I had ever heard talk of the second coming of Christ. About two years after I became convinced that it was according to what I found in the Bible, and I also embraced the doctrine. I had been convicted for some time before I made up my mind to be baptized, but when I learned these new truths I became anxious to be buried in Christ in baptism. Accordingly my husband took me to South Creek, Bradford Co., where there were a few members living, and where they held meetings sometimes, and I was immersed by Eld. J. W. Taylor. That was six years ago last June. I have heard several preachers of our faith since then, and they are all very dear to me. Brn. Sawyer and Wiles come over here sometimes from East Troy. Br. Wilson, from Warrenville, is with us now. He is an excellent man, and understands the Bible, and can quote Scripture as readily as any one that I ever saw. He came last Friday, and he has preached every evening and on Sunday. Yesterday he showed his chart on Daniel's prophecies, which was something new to the most of his hearers. They seemed to be astonished to see such a thing, and some left before the meeting closed; others laughed at it; however, we had a good meeting, for there were a few who were willing to receive instruction. I want to grow in grace and the knowledge of the truth. Pray for me, that I may come off victorious, and meet you all in the kingdom of God. I want to meet you all "Beyond the river, where the surges cease to roll."

Fault Finding.

S. B MABEY.

We are living in a time of considerable fault-finding the world over. Men find fault because other men make more money, take more comfort, and enjoy life better than they do. Men find fault with editors because they are not all good Democrats; another class because they are not all Republicans. And so, in all classes of business, there is strife and finding of fault. Another class believe that specie payment is the only salvation of the country, and they are not in favor of any class of men that do not boldly advocate the same, and come to their plan.

And, consequently, the world at present is cut up into hundreds of parties (for various reasons), and divisions, and subdivisions, all multiplied; each find fault that all people do not see as they see, and act as they act. Come to churchmen, and we find about the same state of affairs. Men have assumed false premises by being taught in the school of the Epicureans, or Stoics, or Pharisees, or modern philosophers, and have come out with flaming colors and fiery indignation against any who may choose to differ with them, and denounce them as heretics. The leaders have said you shall and you shan't so often people have got sick of it, and hence the 666 different divisions in the professed Church of God.

People have not found as much trouble because they have honestly differed in opinion, as because of the manner they have been treated by the supposed and so called infallible ones.

As people become enlightened they learn to throw away the doctrines of superstition, and adopt—they know not what. Some find the truth of God a rock on which they can stand secure, while others drift on down the current of infidelity and ungodliness.

In the Church men find fault with A, B, C, and indorse this man and that man, and reject others, because they do not come up to their standard; in some instances this may be proper, provided such have a Bible standard, and have taken a Bible course. But more frequently are men called to restore such as stumble, in meekness and humility, than to stand back as the self-righteous Pharisee, and thank God they are not as other men are. What if men have done wrong, have faults and failings? You will not benefit them by keeping away from them and continually talking about them to others. Very often such ones are in more danger of eternal judgment to condemnation than the other.

Sometimes people ought to be rebuked, but never when absent. Let the scriptural rule first be taken, then if they will not hear thee, take it before the church.

People often find fault with ministers. Some talk too long; some too short; some write their sermons; some can not; some don't visit the church, seldom see the sick, and poor, and needy; and so the wail of anguish goes up; oh, that we had a "new man," a "smart man," a "man for the place." Just as if a man could know everything about the condition of the members of the church from week to week especially in a large field of labor.

Perhaps such ones have not once thought of the cause of their trouble; perhaps they do not visit the Elder; perhaps the place is so large that it would be impossible for a man to visit all places, when it is the duty of the church to appoint men or women to attend to this business from among them. Church men say, he "don't preach the right kind of gospel." But let us inquire of those,—do you pray for the minister at home, at the meeting, for the prosperity of the cause of Christ at all times? Or do you attend meeting simply to hear something smart? If so, you ought not to have a preacher, and it is a great mercy if you do.

Men say Oh, if we only had Elder Paul, or Apollos, some great man of talent, "we could awaken an interest," "and get up a revival." Yes, you could and it might end in being your work after all. God chooses whom he pleases to do his work. And no one has any business to find fault about it. If you really need a minister ask him to send one.

One great trouble in these times lies in people calling men to preach, instead of letting God attend to his own business, and send who he pleases. Men raise up an interest, and what does it amount to,—very often in six weeks the converts need converting as much as ever? Not but what great good is accomplished through men of ability when God has his way about it, and his time to work, and when people are ready to receive the blessing. Then the precious promise comes to us from the Lord: "I will pour water upon him that is thirsty, and floods upon the dry ground. I will pour my spirit upon thy seed, and my blessing upon thy offspring." Very often men pull, and lift, and tug away to start a revival of religion, when if they would cease struggling, and trust confidingly in the Lord to do the work, grant the blessing instead of human agency, their troubles many times would vanish.

Again there may be times when people have cause to complain of ministers. Perhaps he chews tobacco, or is slack in dress, slouchy in appearance, or he may preach the people to death, (spiritually speaking,) ride hobby horses, labor for the fleece more than the flock,—lazy—wastes his time and squander the Lord's money for things simply to gratify self. In such cases they may be rebuked in charity, to their profit, and the good of the cause of God, and be entreated to do better. There is one consolation, that while it may be that the truth is seemingly unpopular (as Br. H. L. H. says in model church) persecution makes hypocrites scarce.

In conclusion let me say to the church amid all our trials and temptations from without, let us hope fervent charity for all God's poor, afflicted people, and cultivate the spirit of forbearance and forgiveness, ever realizing that the command of the apostles, is, to "let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus." (Eph. 2:5.)

Our Young Folks.

The Brooklet.

"Brooklet, dear brooklet,
  Oh, whither away?
Can you not tarry
  A moment to play?
Under this oak-tree
  'Tis shady and cool;
I'd like it much better
  Than going to school!"
But the breeze from the brooklet
  Just wafted a sigh,
That said, "I would like to,—
  I can not! Good-by."

"Brooklet, dear brooklet,
  Why hurrying still?
I'm sure they don't need you
  At all at the mill!
The miller's asleep,
  His corn is all ground:
The mill is not going.
  I don't hear a sound!"
But the breeze from the brooklet
  Just wafted a sigh,
That said, "I would like to,—
  I can not. Good-by!"

"Brooklet, dear brooklet,"
  The little girl cried,
"Just tell me why not,
  As I run by your side."
"The mill-wheel is still
  Because it needs me;
Without me the fields
  Brown and withered will be."
And the breeze from the brooklet
  Then wafted a sigh,
That said, "I would like to,—
  I can not. Good-by."

"Brooklet, dear brooklet,
  Oh, what shall I do?
I've no one to play with
  Unless I have you!"
"I think, little girl,
  I'd go straight to school,
And learn every lesson
  And mind every rule"
Then the breeze from the brooklet
  Just wafted a sigh,
That said "I would like to,—
  I can not. Good-by!"

—Our Young Folks, August.

Nellie's Truth.

"It don't seem to be any use for me to try to be good so long as we are poor," Nellie Carter said to her mother, with a very sad face. "If we were rich, now, it would make a difference."

"How, Nellie?" asked her mother, kissing the quivering lip.

"Because none of the girls will walk with me or play with me. I wear such poor, patched dresses and old, faded bonnets, and my aprons are shrunk up in the wash. I know they are the best we can afford, mother, but all the other girls dress beautifully. Why does Aunt Grace send me to a school where I am the only shabby one?"

"Because, dear, it is the one where you will be best prepared for a teacher. You must think of that, Nellie, when you get despondent; that you are at the school to study for the position that is to give you daily bread when I am gone. Your aunt means kindly, and you must try to profit by her kindness."

"I do try, mother. I study as hard as I can, and I try to be faithful in little things, as my Sunday-school teacher told me—to be obedient, truthful, and punctual. But the girls will not associate with me. I have been there a whole year, and I have not made one friend."

"Are you striving to be good to make friends only, Nellie?"

"I hope not mamma. I hope I try to be one of Christ's children, that he may love me; but—but it is hard, among forty scholars, not to win one friend in a whole year.

"Patience, darling. If all the world turns coldly from you, you have still a greater love to win, a higher happiness for which to strive."

"I will remember that. Good-by til afternoon. It is time for me to go."

When Nellie entered the large schoolroom, she found the teacher, surrounded by a group of excited scholars, looking at a large, expensive book upon the recitation table, over which an ink-bottle had been upset. Evidently the ink had been soaking in for a long time, for the large, unsightly stains were thoroughly dry. Nellie's entrance was greeted with cries of "Here she comes! Here is Nellie Carter!"

Miss Haynes, the teacher, spoke at once:

"Miss Carter, you arranged the desk yesterday and locked the door."

"Yes, ma'am. I brought you the key as I went home."

"Then you can tell me how this happened," and she pointed to the book and overturned ink-bottle.

"It was not so when I left," Nellie said, very firmly, though her face was pale as she realized how much appearances were against her.

"You never told me an untruth before," said Miss Haynes.

"I tell you the truth now," was the earnest reply. "When I left the room, the table was in perfect order, the ink-bottle in its place, and the book lying where it does now, near it."

"But no one has been in the room since, until I opened the door this morning to find this mischief done."

There was a moment of painful silence, and then Miss Haynes said:

"I hope you will see that it is better to tell me the truth, Miss Carter. You have been an exemplary scholar, but I must punish this fault severely, not only for the mischief done, but for the falsehood that tries to screen it.

Nellie felt as if the whole world was reeling around her. She had never been punished in school, and she felt as if she could never bear the disgrace. But appearances were terribly against her, and there was no pity in her teacher's face. All the scholars were looking at her, and she hid her face in her hands, saying:

"I did not do it, and I don't know how it was done."

Before she looked up, a girl about her own age stepped forward, saying:

"Girls! All who believe she speaks truly, will please say Aye!"

"Aye!" cried a chorus of voices.

"All who believes she speaks falsely, and has committed this piece of carelessness, will please say, No!"

Not a voice responded.

"Miss Carter," said Miss Haynes, "I must yield to the public opinon, and also believe in your innocence. I most sincerely congratulate you upon the conduct that has won for you such a place in the respect of your companions. Take your seats, young ladies."

And flushed, happy, but tearful Nellie took her place as the school subsided into perfect quiet. For several minutes not a sound was heard, as earnest, studious faces were bent over books, till upon the silence there stole a faint, scratching noise, another, then a pitiful, weak mew, and from a closet in the corner crept a tiny kitten, which, with all eyes fixed upon it, came across the floor and jumped upon the table. Then there arose one long shout of laughter, hearing which kitty looked around her and scampered back to her hiding-place, followed by the unrestrained merriment of forty musical voices; for Miss Kitty, having been originally of snowy whiteness, bore upon her soft fur the undeniable proofs of Nellie's innocence. Her little nose was stained inky black, her tail bore the marks of a close acquaintanceship with the contents of the ink bottle, and great splashes of the same fluid were on her back and sides.

Nobody knew exactly how she got in, but she was very glad to get out, as she proved by the rapidity with which she ran toward an opened door.

But Nellie, telling the story to her mother, said: "To think I complained that I had not one friend only this morning, and they all spoke for me before we saw the cat. I will never murmur again, mother, and never let myself think it is useless to try to be good."—By Annie Frost in Methodist.

Books and Tracts.

List of Books, Tracts, etc., kept on sale at the Advent Christian Times office.

RESURRECTION OF THE DEAD IN Christ, (German.)

NATURE AND DESTINY OF MAN; (German.)

RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. (German.)

DESTRUCTION OF THE WICKED (German.)

SOUL OF MAN. (German.)

THE KINGDOM OF CHRIST ON Earth (German.)

IS MAN IMMORTAL? (German.)

☞ The above seven German tracts are published by L. Reimer, 1006 Chestnut st., Philadelphia, Pa., and can be ordered either of this office or of him.

IMMATERIALISM, by Wm. Sheldon. Post-paid, 8c.

THE PENALTY OF SIN, by O. R. Fassett. Post-Paid, 6c.

*AN ADDRESS TO M. E. CON-*ference of Minnesota, by Eld. L. C. Collins. Should have a very wide circulation. Post-paid 7c.

THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL answer to the questions: Is the popular conception of the soul that of Holy Scripture? By Chas. L. Ives, M. D., Professor of the theory and practice of Medicine in Yale College, 1873, 139 Pages. For sale at this Office. Price 35 cents

END OF THE KING OF THE NORTH, and the Impending Time of Trouble, and the near Coming of Christ. By L. T. Cunningham. Price, 12 cents.

THE JUDGMENT IMPENDING Prophecy and Chronology converging to one grand culmination. By L. T. Cunningham. Price, 12 cts.

THE DESTINY OF MAN, by William Erwin. An excellent treatise by a member of the M. E. denomination that gives the Bible view in a radical style. 348 pp. nicely bound in cloth and gilt, $1.50 post paid.

MODERN SPIRITISM, its origin, character and tendencies, by C. C. Marston 36 pp. in paper $6.00 per hundred; $1.00 per dozen; 12 cts per dozen

*COMPLETE WORKS OF FLA-*vius Josephus; translated by William Whiston. 979 pp. in cloth post paid $3.00

THE COMING EARTHQUAKE, By D. T. Taylor. 25 Cents.

*CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—Unabridg-*ed, $5, by express. Condensed, sufficiently full for ordinary purposes, by mail, $1 75.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE: with engravings, maps, and tables. $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

*BIBLE DICTIONARY: by Smith & Bar-*num. The best abridgment of Smith's larger work. Leather $6. cloth $5. By express.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. $22 by express.

*ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORD-*ance. With Greek and English index. $6 by express.

*ENGLISH-GREEK LEXICON. By Lid-*dell & Scott. A standard work. $7 50. by express.

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 18mo. 25c.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock, $2 50, Post-paid.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3:1. By H. L. Hastings. Paper, 50c. Postage, 8c.

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY of God: and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By P. A. Smith. 15c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man of the earth earthy: the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 7c.

*PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC meet-*ings. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 50c. a hundred.

*THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; with a re-*view of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabbath By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of Scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added History, Statistics and Tables. Cloth, $1; leather 1 50.

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. By Wellcome and Good. 460 pp. $1 25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATTHEW, 24 and 25, 20c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM. 20c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM. 25c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic; Which? 10c. $6 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a dozen, The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one adress, post-paid, for $4 00.

LAST DAY TOKENS: by S. S. Brewer. 25 cts.

FUTURITY; by Wm. Sheldon. 20 cts.

THE INDEX BOOK MARK; 25c a dozen.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. Nothing so good on this topic. Cloth $1. Paper, 50c. 3 copies for $1, post paid.

GOOD TIDINGS; a general view of Advent doctrine. By an Association of Authors. 420 pages. Cloth 65c, Paper 40c. Post paid.

*THE NATURE AND DURATION OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT: By Henry Con-*stable, Prebendary of Cork, 35c. Post paid.

THE FAITH OF ST. PAUL; showing it to have been neither Pharisaic nor Sadducaean, but Hebrew. By L. C. Collins. 15c.

*THE STATE OF THE DEAD; a Discus-*sion between N. Field, M. D. and T. P. Connelly, Esq. pp. 200. 50c. Post Paid.

THE JUBILEE HARP. $1. $9 a d [illegible].

HADES AND SHEOL; By L. C. Collins. The best published exposition of the parable of Dives and Lazarus. 15c.

*THE ADVENT MINSTREL; a choice collec-*tion of spiritual songs. Flexible cloth, 20c. $2.16 a dozen. Paper, 15c. $1.56 a dozen.

*HYMNS OF THE HARP; Cloth, 75c, Leath-*er $1.

HYMNS OF THE MORNING; A new and rich collection. Cloth 50c. Leather, 80c.

PAULS EARNEST EXPECTATION and hope (Phil. 1: 21 [illegible].) By [illegible] Fassett. 5c.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT; containing the original Greek text of the New Testament with an interlineary word for word English translation and a new emphatic version, [illegible] pp. Cloth $4; leather back, $5. Postage, 16c.

He coupled the Advent people and the Universalists as being alike, and warned the people to beware of them. O how I wished to speak a few moments and vindicate my God, but I had no liberty given.

Brethren and sisters, I love the truth. This blessed hope of soon being on the new earth, clothed with immortality, and dwelling with the pure in heart forever, gives us great joy. I am alone here, the nearest Adventist is six miles away. But I expect soon to meet with all the dear ones who love the appearing of Christ, nevermore to part; not in a sky-kingdom, but on the beautiful earth which God promised to create. By the help of God, dear brethren and sisters, I will meet you in the better land. Your brother in Christ.

From Vicilla L. Salisbury, Pa.

I have been thinking for some time past that I would write a letter to you, but knowing my inability, and feeling my weakness (for I am as yet but a babe in the knowledge of the truth), I have put it off from time to time; but to-night being alone with my three little children, I feel that it will be like talking to an old friend to write to the dear brethren and sisters. My husband and I are all the Adventists, as we are called, living near here. My husband came here nine years ago. He was the first one that I had ever heard talk of the second coming of Christ. About two years after I became convinced that it was according to what I found in the Bible, and I also embraced the doctrine. I had been convicted for some time before I made up my mind to be baptized, but when I learned these new truths I became anxious to be buried in Christ in baptism. Accordingly my husband took me to South Creek, Bradford Co., where there were a few members living, and where they held meetings sometimes, and I was immersed by Eld. J. W. Taylor. That was six years ago last June. I have heard several preachers of our faith since then, and they are all very dear to me. Brn. Sawyer and Wiles come over here sometimes from East Troy. Br. Wilson, from Warrenville, is with us now. He is an excellent man, and understands the Bible, and can quote Scripture as readily as any one that I ever saw. He came last Friday, and he has preached every evening and on Sunday. Yesterday he showed his chart on Daniel's prophecies, which was something new to the most of his hearers. They seemed to be astonished to see such a thing, and some left before the meeting closed; others laughed at it; however, we had a good meeting, for there were a few who were willing to receive instruction. I want to grow in grace and the knowledge of the truth. Pray for me, that I may come off victorious, and meet you all in the kingdom of God. I want to meet you all "Beyond the river, where the surges cease to roll."

Fault Finding.

S. B MABRY.

We are living in a time of considerable fault-finding the world over. Men find fault because other men make more money, take more comfort, and enjoy life better than they do. Men find fault with editors because they are not all good Democrats; another class because they are not all Republicans. And so, in all classes of business, there is strife and finding of fault. Another class believe that specie payment is the only salvation of the country, and they are not in favor of any class of men that do not boldly advocate the same, and come to their plan.

And, consequently, the world at present is cut up into hundreds of parties (for various reasons), and divisions, and subdivisions, all multiplied; each find fault that all people do not see as they see, and act as they act. Come to churchmen, and we find about the same state of affairs. Men have assumed false premises by being taught in the school of the Epicureans, or Stoics, or Pharisees, or modern philosophers, and have come out with flaming colors and fiery indignation against any who may choose to differ with them, and denounce them as heretics. The leaders have said you shall and you shan't so often people have got sick of it, and hence the 666 different divisions in the professed Church of God.

People have not found as much trouble because they have honestly differed in opinion, as because of the manner they have been treated by the supposed and so-called infallible ones.

As people become enlightened they learn to throw away the doctrines of superstition, and adopt—they know not what. Some find the truth of God a rock on which they can stand secure, while others drift on down the current of infidelity and ungodliness.

In the Church men find fault with A, B, C, and indorse this man and that man, and reject others, because they do not come up to their standard; in some instances this may be proper, provided such have a Bible standard, and have taken a Bible course. But more frequently are men called to restore such as stumble, in meekness and humility, than to stand back as the self-righteous Pharisee, and thank God they are not as other men are. What if men have done wrong, have faults and failings? You will not benefit them by keeping away from them and continually talking about them to others. Very often such ones are in more danger of eternal judgment to condemnation than the other.

Sometimes people ought to be rebuked, but never when absent. Let the scriptural rule first be taken, then if they will not hear thee, take it before the church.

People often find fault with ministers. Some talk too long; some too short; some write their sermons; some can not; some don't visit the church, seldom see the sick, and poor, and needy; and so the wail of anguish goes up; oh, that we had a "new man," a "smart man," a "man for the place." Just as if a man could know everything about the condition of the members of the church from week to week especially in a large field of labor.

Perhaps such ones have not once thought of the cause of their trouble; perhaps they do not visit the Elder; perhaps the place is so large that it would be impossible for a man to visit all places, when it is the duty of the church to appoint men or women to attend to this business from among them. Church men say, he "don't preach the right kind of gospel." But let us inquire of those,—do you pray for the minister at home, at the meeting, for the prosperity of the cause of Christ at all times? Or do you attend meeting simply to hear something smart? If so, you ought not to have a preacher, and it is a great mercy if you do.

Men say Oh, if we only had Elder Paul, or Apollos, some great man of talent, "we could awaken an interest," "and get up a revival." Yes, you could and it might end in being your work after all. God chooses whom he pleases to do his work. And no one has any business to find fault about it. If you really need a minister ask him to send one.

One great trouble in these times lies in people calling men to preach, instead of letting God attend to his own business, and send who he pleases. Men raise up an interest, and what does it amount to,—very often in six weeks the converts need converting as much as ever? Not but what great good is accomplished through men of ability when God has his way about it, and his time to work, and when people are ready to receive the blessing. Then the precious promise comes to us from the Lord: "I will pour water upon him that is thirsty, and floods upon the dry ground. I will pour my spirit upon thy seed, and my blessing upon thy offspring." Very often men pull, and lift, and tug away to start a revival of religion, when if they would cease struggling, and trust confidingly in the Lord to do the work, grant the blessing instead of human agency, their troubles many times would vanish.

Again there may be times when people have cause to complain of ministers. Perhaps he chews tobacco, or is slack in dress, slouchy in appearance, or he may preach the people to death, (spiritually speaking,) ride hobby horses, labor for the fleece more than the flock,—lazy—wastes his time and squander the Lord's money for things simply to gratify self. In such cases they may be rebuked in charity, to their profit, and the good of the cause of God, and be entreated to do better. There is one consolation, that while it may be that the truth is seemingly unpopular (as Br. H. L. H. says in model church) persecution makes hypocrites scarce.

In conclusion let me say to the church amid all our trials and temptations from without, let us hope fervent charity for all God's poor, afflicted people, and cultivate the spirit of forbearance and forgiveness, ever realizing that the command of the apostles, is, to "let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus." (Eph. 2: 5.)

Our Young Folks.

The Brooklet.

"Brooklet, dear brooklet,
  Oh, whither away?
Can you not tarry
  A moment to play?
Under this oak-tree
  'Tis shady and cool;
I'd like it much better
  Than going to school!"
But the breeze from the brooklet
  Just wafted a sigh,
That said, "I would like to,—
  I can not! Good-by."

"Brooklet, dear brooklet,
  Why hurrying still?
I'm sure they don't need you
  At all at the mill!
The miller's asleep,
  His corn is all ground:
The mill is not going.
  I don't hear a sound!"
But the breeze from the brooklet
  Just wafted a sigh,
That said, "I would like to,—
  I can not. Good-by!"

"Brooklet, dear brooklet,"
  The little girl cried,
"Just tell me why not,
  As I run by your side."
"The mill-wheel is still
  Because it needs me;
Without me the fields
  Brown and withered will be."
And the breeze from the brooklet
  Then wafted a sigh,
That said, "I would like to,—
  I can not. Good-by."

"Brooklet, dear brooklet,
  Oh, what shall I do?
I've no one to play with
  Unless I have you!"
"I think, little girl,
  I'd go straight to school,
And learn every lesson
  And mind every rule"
Then the breeze from the brooklet
  Just wafted a sigh,
That said "I would like to,—
  I can not. Good-by!"

—Our Young Folks, August.

Nellie's Truth.

"It don't seem to be any use for me to try to be good so long as we are poor," Nellie Carter said to her mother, with a very sad face. "If we were rich, now, it would make a difference."

"How, Nellie?" asked her mother, kissing the quivering lip.

"Because none of the girls will walk with me or play with me. I wear such poor, patched dresses and old, faded bonnets, and my aprons are shrunk up in the wash. I know they are the best we can afford, mother, but all the other girls dress beautifully. Why does Aunt Grace send me to a school where I am the only shabby one?"

"Because, dear, it is the one where you will be best prepared for a teacher. You must think of that, Nellie, when you get despondent; that you are at the school to study for the position that is to give you daily bread when I am gone. Your aunt means kindly, and you must try to profit by her kindness."

"I do try, mother. I study as hard as I can, and I try to be faithful in little things, as my Sunday-school teacher told me—to be obedient, truthful, and punctual. But the girls will not associate with me. I have been there a whole year, and I have not made one friend."

"Are you striving to be good to make friends only, Nellie?"

"I hope not mamma. I hope I try to be one of Christ's children, that he may love me; but—but it is hard, among forty scholars, not to win one friend in a whole year.

"Patience, darling. If all the world turns coldly from you, you have still a greater love to win, a higher happiness for which to strive."

"I will remember that. Good-by til afternoon. It is time for me to go."

When Nellie entered the large schoolroom, she found the teacher, surrounded by a group of excited scholars, looking at a large, expensive book upon the recitation table, over which an ink-bottle had been upset. Evidently the ink had been soaking in for a long time, for the large, unsightly stains were thoroughly dry. Nellie's entrance was greeted with cries of "Here she comes! Here is Nellie Carter!"

Miss Haynes, the teacher, spoke at once:

"Miss Carter, you arranged the desk yesterday and locked the door."

"Yes, ma'am. I brought you the key as I went home."

"Then you can tell me how this happened," and she pointed to the book and overturned ink-bottle.

"It was not so when I left," Nellie said, very firmly, though her face was pale as she realized how much appearances were against her.

"You never told me an untruth before," said Miss Haynes.

"I tell you the truth now," was the earnest reply. "When I left the room, the table was in perfect order, the ink-bottle in its place, and the book lying where it does now, near it."

"But no one has been in the room since, until I opened the door this morning to find this mischief done."

There was a moment of painful silence, and then Miss Haynes said:

"I hope you will see that it is better to tell me the truth, Miss Carter. You have been an exemplary scholar, but I must punish this fault severely, not only for the mischief done, but for the falsehood that tries to screen it.

Nellie felt as if the whole world was reeling around her. She had never been punished in school, and she felt as if she could never bear the disgrace. But appearances were terribly against her, and there was no pity in her teacher's face. All the scholars were looking at her, and she hid her face in her hands, saying:

"I did not do it, and I don't know how it was done."

Before she looked up, a girl about her own age stepped forward, saying:

"Girls! All who believe she speaks truly, will please say Aye!"

"Aye!" cried a chorus of voices.

"All who believes she speaks falsely, and has committed this piece of carelessness, will please say, No!"

Not a voice responded.

"Miss Carter," said Miss Haynes, "I must yield to the public opinon, and also believe in your innocence. I most sincerely congratulate you upon the conduct that has won for you such a place in the respect of your companions. Take your seats, young ladies."

And flushed, happy, but tearful Nellie took her place as the school subsided into perfect quiet. For several minutes not a sound was heard, as earnest, studious faces were bent over books, till upon the silence there stole a faint, scratching noise, another, then a pitiful, weak mew, and from a closet in the corner crept a tiny kitten, which, with all eyes fixed upon it, came across the floor and jumped upon the table. Then there arose one long shout of laughter, hearing which kitty looked around her and scampered back to her hiding-place, followed by the unrestrained merriment of forty musical voices; for Miss Kitty, having been originally of snowy whiteness, bore upon her soft fur the undeniable proofs of Nellie's innocence. Her little nose was stained inky black, her tail bore the marks of a close acquaintanceship with the contents of the ink bottle, and great splashes of the same fluid were on her back and sides.

Nobody knew exactly how she got in, but she was very glad to get out, as she proved by the rapidity with which she ran toward an opened door.

But Nellie, telling the story to her mother, said: "To think I complained that I had not one friend only this morning, and they all spoke for me before we saw the cat. I will never murmur again, mother, and never let myself think it is useless to try to be good."—By Annie Frost in Methodist.

Books and Tracts.

List of Books, Tracts, etc., kept on sale at the Advent Christian Times office.

RESURRECTION OF THE DEAD IN Christ, (German.)

NATURE AND DESTINY OF MAN; (German.)

RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. (German.)

DESTRUCTION OF THE WICKED (German.)

SOUL OF MAN. (German.)

THE KINGDOM OF CHRIST ON Earth (German.)

IS MAN IMMORTAL? (German.)

☞ The above seven German tracts are published by L. Heimer, 1006 Chestnut st., Philadelphia, Pa., and can be ordered either of this office or of him.

IMMATERIALISM, by Wm. Sheldon. Post-paid, 5c.

THE PENALTY OF SIN, by O. R. Fassett. Post-Paid, 6c.

*AN ADDRESS TO M. E. CON*ference of Minnesota, by Eld. L. C. Collins. Should have a very wide circulation. Post-paid 7c.

THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL answer to the questions: Is the popular conception of the soul that of Holy Scripture? By Chas. L. Ives, M. D., Professor of the theory and practice of Medicine in Yale College, 1873, 119 Pages. For sale at this Office. Price 25 cents

END OF THE KING OF THE NORTH, and the Impending Time of Trouble, and the near Coming of Christ. By L. T. Cunningham. Price, 12 cents.

THE JUDGMENT IMPENDING Prophecy and Chronology converging to one grand culmination. By L. T. Cunningham. Price, 12 [illegible]

THE DESTINY OF MAN, by William Erwin. An excellent treatise by a member of the M. E. denomination that gives the Bible view in a radical style. 312 pp. nicely bound in cloth and gilt, $1.50 post paid.

MODERN SPIRITISM, its origin, character and tendencies, by C. C. Marston 36 pp. in paper $6.00 per hundred; $1.00 per dozen; 12 cts per dozen

*COMPLETE WOKKS OF FLA*vius Josephus; translated by William Whiston. 679 pp. in cloth post paid $3.00

THE COMING EARTHQUAKE, By D. T. Taylor. 25 Cents.

*CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—Unabridg*ed, $5, by express. Condensed, sufficiently full for ordinary purposes, by mail, $1 75.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE: with engravings, maps, and tables. $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

*BIBLE DICTIONARY: by Smith & Bar*num. The best abridgment of Smith's larger work. Leather $6. cloth $5. By express.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. $12 by express.

*ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORD*ance. With Greek and English index. $5 by express.

*ENGLISH-GREEK LEXICON. By Lid*dell & Scott. A standard work. $7 50. by express.

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 18mo. 25c.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock. $2 50, Post-paid.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3: 1. By H. L. Hastings. Paper, 50c. Postage, 5c.

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY of God: and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By P. A. Smith. 10c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble, 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man of the earth earthy: the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 7c.

*PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC meet*ings. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 50c. a hundred.

*THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; with a re*view of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabbath By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of Scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added History, Statistics and Tables. Cloth, $1; [illegible]

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. By Wellcome and Gund. 460 pp. $1 25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATTHEW, 24 and 25, 25c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM. 20c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM. 25c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic; Which? 10c. $8 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a dozen, The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one adress, post-paid, for $4 00.

LAST DAY TOKENS: by S. S. Brewer. 25 cts.

FUTURITY; by Wm. Sheldon. 20 cts.

THE INDEX BOOK MARK; 25c a dozen.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. Nothing so good on this topic. Cloth $1. Paper, 50c. 3 copies for $1, post paid.

GOOD TIDINGS; a general view of Advent doctrine. By an Association of Authors. 420 pages. Cloth 80c, Paper 40c. Post paid.

*THE NATURE AND DURATION OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT: By Henry Con*stable, Prebendary of Cork, 25c. Post paid.

THE FAITH OF ST. PAUL; showing it to have been neither Pharisaic nor Sadducean, but Hebrew. By L. C. Collins. 15c.

*THE STATE OF THE DEAD: a Discus*sion between N. Field, M. D. and T. P. Connelly, Esq., pp. 300. 50c. Post Paid.

THE JUBILEE HARP. $1. $9 a d [illegible]

HADES AND SHEOL; By L. C. Collins. The best published exposition of the parable of Dives and Lazarus. 15c.

*THE ADVENT MINSTREL; a choice collec*tion of spiritual songs. Flexible cloth, [illegible] $2.10 a dozen. Paper, 15c. $1.50 a dozen.

HYMNS OF THE HARP; Cloth, 75c, Leather $1.

HYMNS OF THE MORNING; A new and rich collection. Cloth 50c. Leather, 80c.

PAULS EARNEST EXPECTATION and hope; (Phil. 1: 21: 23.) By O. R. Fassett. 5c.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT: containing the original Greek text of the New Testament with an interlineary word for word English translation and a new emphatic version, [illegible] pp. Cloth $4; leather back, $5. Postage, 16c.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, November 4, 1873.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES
IS PUBLISHED BY THE
Western Advent Christian Publishing Society.
Business Office: McCormick Block, corner of Randolph and Dearborn Sts., Room 27.
[Printing Presses located at Norwood Park.]

TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.
Sent Three Months for Fifty cents.

The officers of the Society are as follows.
President—DARIUS MATHEWSON,
Vice President—L. C. COLLINS.
Secretary—FRANK BULL.
Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND.
PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
GEO. HOWARD, E. McCULLOCH,
J. M. SNOOK.

A. W. TUCKER, TREASURER & BUSINESS AGENT.

Don't Fail
To give your name and address full and complete every time you write.

Remember
That all Drafts, Money Orders, etc., payable to the Business Agent, A. W. Tucker.

☞ Address articles intended for publication in THE TIMES to Wm. Sheldon, and all business communications to

A. W. TUCKER,
27, McCormick Block,
Chicago, Ill.

☞ Write Appointments, Notices, Communications for THE TIMES, and business matters, each on separate pieces of paper.

☞ Do not fail to comply with the above suggestions.

APPOINTMENTS, NOTICES, etc., must reach us by Thursday night to be in time for the next issue. Please remember this.

Business Department.

Book and Job Work.

We are now prepared to do all kinds of BOOK and JOB PRINTING with despatch, and in a satisfactory manner. Books, Pamphlets, Tracts, Leaflets, Circulars, Envelopes, Letter-Heads, Note-Heads, Bill-Heads Cards of all kinds, etc., etc. Our friends and the business public will do well to get our figures before ordering work elsewhere. Estimates cheerfully given.

Letters Received.

☞ ALL letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgement is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

L A Richardson
E E Goff
W T Adee
E Kennedy
T R Way
A J Young
H Liederbach
W M Palmer
L Gaylord
G H Stanton
A K Lewis
E A Marsh
G A Brown
O D Gibson
J F Wilcox
W McCulloch
I C Wellcome
J W Baker
R A Douglas
W L Himes
H M Dubey
C Smith
N D R Cole
J Ridley
S G Mabie
P Voe
N H Harbour
P M Berry
J F Oller
J H Gallop
E B Barber
W C Edwards
L Sturdtevant
B W Snay
L N Bowles
M A Tibbets
H Lewis
W M Rhoad
H Harvey
A Trowbridge
G Matthews
M F Holman
J N Porter
D H Watkins
J Brooks
C C Ramsay
J Lowry
G W Stetson
G T Adams
C W Sargent
J Bedine
J Searce
O H Hammond
C D Berry
C C Marston
F Barr
R E Ewing
A N Seymour
J Anderson
P Francis
J N A Billingsley
A Cavins
J W Kirk
J C Snow
J M Dalton
H Cushman
D Weaver

Books and Tracts Sent by Mail.

D O Amos
J J Friend
G F D Rice
T B Thomasson
C Fox
G H Little
S Abbott
A K Lewis
T J Morgan
R Smith by exp
E Angell
J H Gallop
J F Oller
B W Snay
S Spooner
G H Stanbow
J Lyons
F Burr by exp
D Cheatham
S P Miller
E P Young
M Davis
F S Morgan
D T Call
U P Chow
M Wisegarver
F H Kenny
G H Stanton 2
J J Goldsmith
H H Humphrey

The $4000 Fund.

To Free the Society from Debt.

CASH.

Previously Reported	$671 80

PLEDGES PAID.

Previously Reported	$145 00
J. C. Shaw	25 00
Cynthia Shaw	5 00
J. M. Dalton	1 00
H. Cushman	5 00
J. Sober	5 00
M. S. Richardson	2 00
E. Kennedy	2 00
J. H. Gallop	2 00
E S Barber	5 00
H. Harvey	5 00
D. H. Watkins	10 00

WESTERN TRACT FUND.

Previously Reported	$34 00
T. R. Way	1 00
H. Liederbach	2 00
E. S. Barber	15 00
G. Mathews	1 00

Marriages.

NEWCOMB—BALL. In Traer, Tama Co., Iowa, at the residence of Eld. M. A. Newcomb, Oct. 26, by Eld. S. A. Marsh, Mr. Arthur G. Newcomb and Miss Josephine Ball, both of Traer.

SPOOR—ELLIS. At the residence of the bride's parents, near Winnebago, Oct. 23, 1873, by C. C. Marston, Mr. Labra C. Spoor to Miss Hattie A. Ellis, all of Winnebago Co., Ill. No cards.

Appointments.

ILLINOIS.

Genoa, Oct. 27, and every other Sabbath until further notice. E. H. Burington.

Lynnville, 10:30 a. m., first and second Sabbath's in each month.

Phelps S. H. second Lord's day of Oct. and Nov., at 10.30 a. m.
Lynnville, at 7 p. m.
Rochelle, first and third Sabbaths, as brethren may arrange.
New Rutland, fourth Sabbath, morning and evening.
After November three-fourths of my time will be to use as the way may open.
Such are my arrangements until further notice.
ALICE E. RATHBUN.

Preaching brethren coming to Chicago wishing to preach in Advent Christian Chapel, will correspond with H. P. WRIGHT,
208 Walnut Street.

Advent Christian Mission, Cairo, Ill.—On and after Sunday, Aug. 31, services will be held in the school-room on the corner of Twelfth street and Washington avenue, opposite the Bulletin office. Morning discourse 11 o'clock a. m. Bible class for adults 4 p. m. Evening preaching at the ringing of the bells in the city. Brethren passing are cordially invited to call. H. JOHNSON,
T. S. THOMASSON.

To the friends of the Advent cause in Southern Illinois.—There will be a meeting of days, commencing at the Mt. Joy Advent Church, Johnson County, Sunday, Nov. 2, and continue over the second Sunday. Eld. Wm. McCulloch has consented to be with us on that occasion, and will probably remain for a number of weeks. Come, brethren, from all parts of this section of the State and work for the Lord. F. A. CHILDS.

Toulon, Winn S. H., Nov. 9.
Mineral, Nov. 16.
L. F. COLE.

DISCUSSION.—There will be a public discussion at Ancona, Livingston Co., beginning the second Friday in Dec. 1873, at 2 p. m., holding four days of two sessions each, on the following proposition: "Resolved, That the wicked dead will be raised to life from the state of death in the last day." C. C. Marston, of Elida, Ill., affirms; John Billings, of New Rutland, Ill., denies.

Antioch, Age-to-come chapel, Nov. 8.
Ackerson's, Nov. 9, 11 a m.
White Rock, 3 p. m., same day.
Elida in the evening. Also at Elida, Nov. 16 and 23, morning and evening.
Providence, Bureau Co., Temperance Hall, Nov. 30-31.
New Rutland, second and third Sabbaths in December. C. C. MARSTON.

I shall hold a debate in Greenwood Township, at Fairview, M. E. Church, with Eld. Moses Tetchnell, who is an old presiding elder in that church, and one of their ablest men. The discussion will commence Nov. 11, 10 a. m. The place is about equal distance from the following places: 10 miles from Pana west, from Taylorville south, from Palmer east. Those who may be at Palmer on Monday, the 10th, will no doubt find conveyance to the place. Subject: Immortality of the soul and destruction of the wicked.
O. D. GIBSON.

MICHIGAN.

To the churches in Branch County, Michigan, I would say that my appointments for the year 1873 will be as follows:
East Gilead, Jan. 5, 10 a. m., and every two weeks after.
California, Jan. 12, 10:30 a m and every two weeks after.
Algansee, every Sunday 2:30 p m and evening. Prayer meeting every Wednesday evening.
Moscow, as Br. Buell may arrange, Nov. 10, eve.
Clinton, as Br. Fabrick " " 11,
Canton, as Br. Clark " " 12, 13,
Dearborn, Friday evening and over Sunday, Nov. 14, 16. J. R. PRESTON.

Pt. Sanilac, Advent chapel, every Sunday morning, at 11 o'clock.
Lexington, Everett's Hall, every Sunday evening 7½ o'clock. GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.
Lexington Lake Shore Advent Chapel, 3 miles north of village, Sabbath, Jan. 26, at 3 p. m., and every two weeks after.
Lexington Ridge, White S. H., Feb. 2, at 3 p. m. and every two weeks after.
GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.

Woodbridge, Johnson S. H., 10:30 a. m.
Bell S. H., 2:30 p. m., Sunday, July 20, and every two weeks thereafter.
Brodock S. H., Tuesday eve., July 22, and once in two weeks.
WM. BRANCH.

There will be preaching in the Louis S. H., Almer, Sept. 7, 3 p. m., and every two weeks.
In the Delling S. H., Almer, Sept. 7, 10½ a. m., and every two weeks.
In the Graham S. H., Fairgrove, Sept. 14, 10½ a. m. Centre S. H., 5 p. m., and in the Hinron S. H. 8 p. m. and every two weeks.
E. H. DURAND.

Porter Centre, Mich., Sept. 21, 10½ a. m., and 3 p. m., and every four weeks.
JAS. FERRISS, Pastor.

The Lord permitting, we shall dedicate our church on Sunday, Nov. 16. All our brethren are invited to attend, and especially the ministerial portion. By leaving the cars at Battle Creek, on the M. C. R.R., or Bellevue, on the Peninsular Railway, teams will be found going to Assyria Center, and most especially if you come on Saturday. Yours in hope.
ELD. C. D. BERRY.
Assyria, Oct. 24, 1873.

INDIANA.

Meeting every Sunday at the Volga Church, commencing at half-past 10 o'clock, preaching alternately by T. V. Porter and the pastor,
LEMUEL RECORD.

Lavalle, Oct. 5, and every four weeks until further notice. Fairfield, Sept. 12, and once in two weeks. Baraboo, Sept. 12, and once in four weeks. Webster's Prairie, Sept. 28, and once in four weeks. Fisher Valley, Sept. 21, and once in four weeks. E. P. GRAVES.

WISCONSIN.

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.
Call upon Brs. Bracket or Reese, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.
A. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

Springville, May 4, and every two weeks until further notice.
Dudley S. H., May 11, and every four weeks until further notice.
Chaseburg, May 17, and every four weeks until further notice. JOB BROWN.

Sparta, Nov. 9, at 10.30 a. m. and 7. p. m.
May the divine counsel direct, and the ever blessed Spirit be signally present in these christian gatherings of the saints. P. W. HOUSE.

Montpelier, Sunday, July 13, at 10:30 a. m., and 7:30 p. m., and every four weeks following.
Bridgewater, Sumner S. H., Monday eve., July 14, and once in two weeks thereafter.
WM. BRANCH

Preaching at the Cain S. H., Decatur Co., first Sunday in each month, at 11 a. m.
Dubie S. H., 3 p. m., first Sunday in each month. J. F. ADAIR, Pastor.

Preaching in Thompson's Hall, Delmar, Clinton Co., Jan. 5, and every two weeks until further notice. C. W. PITCHER.

Manchester, the first and third Sabbaths of each month, at 11 a. m. and 3:30 p. m.
J. RIDLEY, Pastor.

MINNESOTA.

Riageway, Feb. 8 and 9, and once in four weeks.
P. MITSON.

The Lord willing, I will preach at Monticello, Wright Co., Minn., every Sunday at 10½ a. m.
Baily S. H., at Baily Station, near Elk River, Oct. 12, at 3 p. m., and every two weeks after until further notice.
Otsego Village S. H., Sunday Oct. 5, at 3½ p. m. and once in two weeks after, until further notice.
Lilly Pond, Sunday eve., Oct. 5, at 7 p. m., and once in two weeks after, until further notice.
Preach at Big Lake Station, Sunday eve., at 7 o'clock.
S. C. WELLCOME.

P. S. Our Covenant Meeting is held the last Saturday, before the first Sunday in each month, at 2 p. m., at the Monticello Chapel.

Owatonna, Fitzsimmons' S. H., Sunday, Nov. 9, and through the week.
Bailey S. H., Nov. 15.
Prairie Creek, Stone S. H., Sunday, Nov. 23.
Cottage Grove, Atkinson Corners, Sunday, Nov. 30. MRS. H. M. DUBEY.

NEW YORK.

Saratoga Springs; meetings every Sunday in the Lower Town Hall, corner of Broadway and Lake Avenue, at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday School and Bible class directly after morning service.
Prayer meeting every Thursday eve., at the residence of the pastors, 213 Broadway, nearly opposite Town Hall.
Saratoga Springs, N. Y., prayer meeting every Thursday evening, at the residence of the pastors, Van Dam street, first house east of Broadway.
WM. A. and M. L. DURAND, Pastors.

Elmira, N. Y., near Br. John S. Smith's Nov. 14. JOHN T. ONGLEY.

OHIO.

A meeting of days will be held at Rockbridge, O., commencing on the second Saturday in Nov. Br. Frank Burr will be our minister.
WM. H. HULA.

Christian Advent Church, Archibald, Fulton Co. Preaching every Sunday at 10 o'clock, a. m. and 7 o'clock p.m. Prayer meeting every Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock, Reynolds' S. H. Traveling brethren having a gospel sermon to preach, please give us a call and preach the word.
P. VOE, Elder.

IOWA.

Warsaw, third Saturday in each month, in the evening.
Chester S. H., Sunday following, 11 a. m.
Corydon, 2 p. m. J. F. ADAIR.

Clinton, Iowa, July 1873. Gospel meetings held every Sunday. Prayer meetings on Thursday evening. S. B. MABEY, Pastor.

Broken Kettle S. H., the first and third Sunday of each month, until further notice.
HATTIE A. PLANK.

Preaching at Crook's School-house, Wayne county, Sunday, Aug. 24, at 3 p. m., and every three weeks until further notice.
A. A. DAVIS.

The first session of the A. C. Q. Conference of Iowa, Manchester District, for the present Conference year is to be held at the Odell, School House, located about 2½ miles N. E from Greeley, Delaware Co, to commence Oct. 31, at 7½ o'clock p. m. Come one, come all. M. J. JAMES, Sec.

VISIT TO IOWA.—To the brethren in Iowa who requested me to visit them and hold meetings, I would say that my arrangements are to spend the month of February and perhaps longer in your State. Those desiring me to stop with them will please write to me at Elida, Winnebago Co., Ill. C. C. MARSTON.

The second quarterly meeting of the Iowa Christian Conference will be held at Boyles's Grove, Butler Co., commencing Nov. 5. A cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of Jesus to come and participate in the meeting. Brethren from Floyd, Clarksville and other places are invited. Come one, come all.
J. W. BURROUGHS, Sec'y.

To the Christian and Advent Christian Conferences of Iowa, Greeting: Brethren! At the annual meeting of the Christian conference held at New Hartford, Iowa, in June last, a proposition was presented to the conference and accepted, and a delegation was appointed to the A. C. Conference for the purpose of harmonizing all believers in the coming kingdom, and also to effect an organization of a general Union State Conference. The above named proposition was presented at the annual A. C. Conference, and the following minutes will show with what result:

The committee of the Christian and A. C. Conferences of Iowa, in convention assembled, do agree to carry out the spirit of the proposition of the Christian Conference, with the amendment of the A. C. Conference, and to carry forward this work we chose C. C. Ramsay, J. Ridley and E. W. Hmon to notify the brethren in the south part of the State of our intention and invite them to meet us in convention at Belle Plain for the purpose of organizing a general Union State Conference of the Christian and Advent Christian Conferences of Iowa, and to locate the bounds of the sub-conferences, the time of the meeting to be decided by the above committee.
J. RIDLEY.

Pursuant to the above, the committee make the following call:

There will be a meeting of the delegates of the Christian and Advent Christian Conferences of the State of Iowa for the purpose of organizing a general Union State Conference, and for the transaction of such business as may come before it, to be holden at Belle Plain, Benton Co., Iowa, commencing Jan 8, 1874, and hold over the following Lord's Day. It is the earnest desire of many that this meeting be represented by every conference in the State. Let there be a general rally, and come with hearts full of love and unity, and then we shall be prepared to labor for the good of the cause, and shall not be ashamed of our work when it is done. C. C. RAMSAY,
Per order of Committee.

PENNSYLVANIA.

In Quincy Hall, 127 Leacoc Street, Allegheny, Wednesday evening, Nov. 26, and over Sunday, the 30th, as the brethren may arrange.
G. W. STETSON.

There will be preaching at Sutton's Corners, (first station below Meadville, on Atlantic and G. W. R. R.) every evening from Monday, Nov. 3d, to Friday, the 7th, at such place and hour as the brethren and friends residing there may arrange and give notice of. G. W. STETSON.

Muncy, Eve., Nov. 6.
Canton, Bradford Co., Eve., Nov. 7.
Seguro S. H. Tioga Co., Eve., Nov. 8, and Sunday at 10:30 a. m., Nov. 9.
Chase Mills, Eve., Nov. 9.
Wellsboro, as brethren may appoint, Nov. 11 and 12.
Button S. H., as brethren may appoint, Nov. 13.
South Creek, Bradford Co., Nov. 16.
East Troy, " " Nov. 18.
Williamsport, Lycoming Co., Nov. 19, 20.
Waterford, Erie Co., Eve., Nov. 22, and over Sunday, as friends may appoint, Nov. 23.
Millers Station, Crawford Co., Nov. 24.
Rootville, Crawford Co., Nov. 26.
JOHN T. ONGLEY.

MISSOURI.

There will be a special meeting at the McKinley S. H., eight miles east of Unionville, Putnam Co., Mo., to commence Nov. 14, at candle lighting, and continue over Sunday. The object is to organize a quarterly conference for the southern part of the annual conference known as the S. Iowa and N. Mo. A. C. conference. There are a small number of churches that have not as yet been known in the annual conference. Will Br. Snow be with us? Brethren, let us make a grand rally. N. C. MILLER.

The first Quarterly Meeting of the Western M. O. Conference will be held with the Greenland Church for 1873, commencing on Friday, December 5, and will hold over Sunday. We shall look for a full delegation from all of the churches for there will be much important business.
Visiting brethren will find a cordial welcome. Try and come out largely. Our cause is one of immense interest. Don't delay.
J. M. BLIVEN, Sec'y.

KANSAS.

I will be at Jacksonville, Oct. 25 and 26 to hold meetings as the Lord may direct; also at Sherman City, and Bero, Cherokee Co., going from there South into the Cherokee Nation. May the Lord prosper the work and prepare a people for his coming. D. O. AMOS, Fort Scott, Kas.

CANADA.

The Advent church at Montreal, holds regular meetings every Sabbath, at Temperance hall, 6 Bleury St.
JOSEPH LUTRELL, Sec'y. 367, St. Joseph St.

Advertisements.

WHY NOT club for Washers and Wringers as well as papers. Colby Bros. & Co., Reading Bush, will send circulars for any one to get up a Club Order for their superior machines. Wholesale prices to all and a Washer free to the one who gets a club for one dozen—a Wringer for two dozen, and both, worth $12.50 for a club of three dozen. Farmers' Clubs and Granges supplied at wholesale price. Send your address, and say how many circulars you will distribute. You can thus save one-third their cost by getting machines direct from the manufacturer. WHY NOT? 496-41.

HADES
OR
The Intermediate State of Man,
BY HENRY CONSTABLE, A. M.
Author of The Duration and Nature of Future Punishment. This work consists of twenty-four chapters, 187 pages, at $1.00 per copy, and can be had by addressing A. W. TUCKER, 27 McCormick Block, Chicago, Ill.

"DOMESTIC" PAPER FASHIONS.
Agents Wanted.
SEND FOR CATALOGUE.
DOMESTIC SEWING MACHINE CO., N. Y.
498-13t.

SUBSCRIBE FOR
The Millenarian,
A
New Monthly Periodical.
THE MILLENARIAN advocates the Personal Coming of Messiah, the Restitution of all things spoken by the Prophets, the Resurrection of the holy dead at the commencement of the Millennium, the overthrow of all anti-christian systems, the literal fulfillment of prophecy, a life of purity, and trust as necessary to an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom of Jesus our Lord.
Terms, $1.00 per year.
Address, H. V. REED, Norwood Park, Cook Co., Illinois.
498

$20 SAVED!
To meet the urgent demand of the times the FLORENCE SEWING MACHINE CO. have determined to REDUCE PRICES,
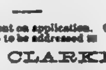
and will hereafter sell their $65 Machine for $45, and other styles in proportion.
THE FLORENCE
is the ONLY Sewing Machine that feeds the work backward and forward, or to right and left, as the purchaser may prefer. It has been greatly IMPROVED AND SIMPLIFIED, and is far better than any other machine in the market.
It is NOW the CHEAPEST.
Florence, Mass., Nov. 1, '73. Agents Wanted.
496-4t.

THE RAINBOW,
A Magazine of Christian Literature,
With special reference to the revealed future of the Church and the World.
Published Monthly, at $2.50 Per Year.
EDITED BY WM. LEASK, D. D.
Address, KELLAWAY & BROWN,
75 Newgate St.,
LONDON, E. C., ENGLAND.

To every New subscriber paying for THE TIMES one year in advance, also to every Old subscriber paying ALL ARREARS and one year in advance, we will send a copy of one of the following valuable works:
DEBATE ON
"THE STATE OF THE DEAD,"
Field vs. Connelly, 300 pp.
BIBLE DOCTRINE of the SOUL,
By Prof. Ives, 110 pp.
NATURE AND DURATION OF
"FUTURE PUNISHMENT,"
By H. Constable.
We have a large number of these good works which we want placed in the hands of the reading public, thereby doing good to them, and largely increasing our list of subscribers. We desire that every reader of the TIMES to at once enter earnestly into this good work.
Anyone sending Four New Subscribers With eight dollars, will receive their choice of the above works in addition to the one to each subscriber.
Begin the work at once. Sample copies of the paper sent on application. Address,
A. W. TUCKER.

THE
American Bee Journal.



Established by the late Samuel Wagner in 1861, at Washington, D. C., is now published at Chicago, Ill., and edited by
W. F. CLARKE,
President of the North American Bee-Keepers' Society.
The American Bee Journal.
is the organ of no man, party, patent hive, or selfish interest. Its one aim will be to advance Apiculture.
We expect to give good value to all who subscribe, and the larger our hosts of readers the better value we shall be able to give them.
Lend us a hearty Vigorous Co-operation, and we promise on our part to SPARE NO PAINS to make this the
BEST SCIENTIFIC AND PRACTICAL JOURNAL OF APICULTURE IN THE WORLD.
SINGLE COPIES, TWO DOLLARS A YEAR IN ADVANCE.
CLUB RATES:
$1 75 per year, in clubs of two..........or $3 50
1 67 " " " three..........5 00
1 60 " " " six..........9 60
1 40 " " " ten..........14 00
1 25 " " " twenty..........25 00
Specimen Copies sent on application. Communications and remittances to be addressed to
W. F. CLARKE,
AMERICAN BEE JOURNAL,
Room 27, McCormick Block, Chicago, Ill.

Chicago & North-Western Railway.
THE ROUTE DIRECT
From CHICAGO to OMAHA,
From CHICAGO to MILWAUKEE,
From CHICAGO to SHEBOYGAN,
From CHICAGO to ST. PAUL.
From CHICAGO to MADISON,
From CHICAGO to GREEN BAY,
From CHICAGO to MARQUETTE,
From CHICAGO to SIOUX CITY,
From GHICAGO to YANKTON, DAK.
From CHICAGO to GENEVA LAKE,
From CHICAGO to FREEPORT,
From CHICAGO to DUBUQUE,
IS VIA THE
Chicago and North-Western
RAILWAY.
In Going North, North-West or West
You cannot go amiss if you buy your Tickets Via this Route.
See that Your Tickets Read via
Chicago & N-W. Railway.
This is the Pioneer Route to and from
CALIFORNIA and the PACIFIC SLOPE.
Full information in regard to this Route will be cheerfully furnished by all Ticket Agents in the EAST, WEST, NORTH or SOUTH.
Running Through Five States,
This Great Railway Line, made up of nearly Two Thousand Miles of the best Railroad there is in the North-West, offers inducements to the traveling public second to none in the country, and superior to any offered by its competitors.
Steel Rail, Shortest and Quickest Route, Westinghouse Safety Air Brakes, Miller's Safety Platform, Pullman Palace Cars.
Speed, Comfort and Safety, are combined, and render this the Great Route for the People.
IT REACHES
North, North-West and West,
And Traverses the Garden Spot of the World.
ILLINOIS, MICHIGAN, IOWA, WISCONSIN, AND MINNESOTA,
ARE ALL TRIBUTARY TO THIS LINE.
Chicago Ticket Offices:
Corner LaSalle and Randolph Street.
Corner Canal and Madison Streets.
Kinzie Street Depot, cor West Kinzie and Canal Streets.
Wells Street Depot, cor. Wells and North Water Streets.
W. H. STENNETT, MARVIN HUGHITT,
Gen'l Passenger Agent. Gen'l Superintendent.

AGENTS. [illegible] 25,000 [illegible] RECEIPT BOOK [illegible] CHROMO [illegible]

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. XI.—NO. 14. CHICAGO, NOVEMBER 11, 1873. WHOLE NO. 497

Advent Christian Times.
Published Every Tuesday by the
Western Advent Christian Publishing Society.
87, McCormick Block, Chicago.

Poetry.

Christ Will Return to Earth.

It is expedient for you that I go away, for if I go not away the Comforter will not come unto you but if I depart I will send him unto you. (John 16 : 7.)

I go to prepare a place for you. I will come again. (John 14.)

Jesus, Saviour, Lord and Master,
Friend in need, we have in thee:
By thy blood thou hast redeemed us.
Thou didst die to set us free.
We were once in nature's darkness,
Lost and ruined, doomed to die;
But thy grace and mercy sought us,
Rescued, pardoned, brought us nigh.

For a little thou hast left us,
Heavenly blessings to provide;
But thou hast sent the Comforter
Ever with us to abide,
Whilst thou'rt absent 'tis thy promise
That he shall with us remain.
May he keep us mindful of thee
Until thou return again.

May he take from thy rich treasures
Things of thine and to us shew:
Things that will our spirits strengthen,
And sustain us here below.
May we still, while here we tarry,
Keep thee, dearest Lord, in view,
Knowing that thy love will guard us
On the way, our journey through.

May we walk, while here as strangers,
And as pilgrims traveling home,
Seeking neither rest nor treasure
In this world, where thou hadst none;
Give us grace, thy steps to follow,
In our ways remembering thee;
Bearing one another's burdens
Until thy dear face we see.

Lord, we know thou art preparing
(Oh, the vastness of thy love!)
Places for us in the mansions,
In our Father's house above.
Soon to us thou wilt return,
Then will all our troubles cease.
In the air we hope to meet thee,
And for ever rest in peace.

Hasten thou thy second advent,
Come, dear Lord, without delay;
Chase away the midnight darkness,
With the bright, unclouded day,
Sound "the last" the "seventh" trumpet,
Take thy kingdom, come and reign.
Come, for thou alone art worthy,
Thou the Lamb that once wast slain.

The Hope of Mighty Influence.

We will now see the importance of Christ's second coming in the estimation of the Holy Spirit by glancing at the use He makes of the sublime truth in the appeals and exhortations of the New Testament. If the question is concerning the duty of an open confession of the Saviour in the face of scoffing and persecuting enemies, it is written, "Whosoever shall be ashamed of me and my words, of him shall the Son of Man be ashamed, when he shall come in his own glory, and in his Father's, and of the holy angels." If Christians are urged to patience amid the provocations and trials of a world that lieth in the Wicked One, it is written "Be patient, therefore, brethren unto the coming of the Lord. Behold, the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and latter rain. Be ye also patient; stablish your hearts, for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh." If they are entreated not to exact rigidly that which lawfully belongs to them, but to yield even their rights to others, it is written "Let your moderation be know to all men. The Lord is at hand." If they are reminded of the necessity of diligence and fidelity in employing the gifts and means of usefulness conferred upon them, it is written, "The kingdom of heaven is as a man traveling into a far country, who called his own servants, and delivered unto them his goods. * * * After a long time the lord of those servants cometh, and reckoneth with them." If they are encouraged to perseverance under the burden of their toils and troubles, it is written, "Ye have need of patience, that, after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise. For yet a little while, and He that shall come will come, and will not tarry. If they are admonished to struggle against the flesh which was in them, although they were not in the flesh but in the Spirit, it is written, "When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory. Mortify, therefore, your members which are upon the earth; fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection, evil concupiscence, and covetousness, which is idolatry." If they are animated to holy conversation and godliness, it is written, "Looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat. Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness. Therefore, beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent that ye may be found of him in peace, without spot, and blameless." If they are taught the blessedness of personal holiness, it is written, "The very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." If they are aroused to cling to the grace they had received, it is written, "That which ye have already, hold fast till I come;" "Behold I come quickly: hold that fast which thou hast, that no man take thy crown." If they are implored to continue in fellowship with the Saviour, it is written, "And now, little children, abide in him; that when he shall appear, we may have confidence, and not be ashamed before him at his coming." If ministers of the gospel are warned to be faithful in their high vocation, it is written, "I give thee charge in the sight of God, who quickeneth all things, and before Christ Jesus, who before Pontius Pilate witnessed a good confession; that thou keep his commandment without spot, unrebukable, until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ;"—"I charge thee, therefore, before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom; preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long-suffering and doctrine;"—The elders which are among you I exhort, who am also an elder, with a witness of the sufferings of Christ, and also a partaker of the glory that shall be revealed: feed the flock of God which is among you, taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but willingly: not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind; neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being ensamples to the flock. And when the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away."

If it were necessary it could be easily shown that other appeals and exhortations of the New Testament are based upon the great doctrine of our Lord's second coming. Look where you will through the discourses of the Saviour or through the inspired epistles, and you will find it held forth as an encouragement to duty, a stimulus to activity, a spur to watchfulness, an incentive to holiness, a check to worldliness, a corrective to indolence, a support to the sorrowing, a consolation to the bereaved; and it becomes us to inquire with deep concern whether God's people have not lost one of the most powerful motives to Christian life, by losing a vivid and realising faith in the personal return of Jesus Christ as possible at any time. At all events it is a fact which history clearly brings to light, that in proportion as the Church has walked in close and loving fellowship with her Lord she has waited and watched for his advent, "more than they that watch for the morning," and in proportion as she has become corrupt in doctrine, formal in her service, and worldly in her ambition, this precious truth has been obscured or lost to her view.

It is a truth which sustains the most direct and important relations both to other truths of God's Word, and to the practical walk and ways of the believer. We might infer this from the prominence given to it in the New Testament, and the inference is confirmed by the personal experience of thousands of Christians to whom the unspeakable value of the doctrine concerning our Lord's coming has been revealed by the Holy Ghost. It needs his revelation to discover its radiant beauty and divine power, but when once seen, like a rare jewel in a cluster of precious stones, it sheds its heavenly light upon every page of its Sacred Scriptures. There are many, very many, who can testify that it has been to them as a kind of second conversion, imparting a new meaning to the Bible, and a new joy to their souls. It has led them in view of the possible nearness of Christ's advent to examine well the ground on which they stand, and to rest upon his finished work alone for salvation in the present and happy assurance of acceptance in the Beloved. It has turned them away with a calm and quiet indifference from the foolish aspirations and self-seeking aims that were once a source of perpetual disquietude and disappointment. It has given them a lofty independence of the judgment of men, so that they can say with the apostle, "With me it is a very small thing that I should be judged of you or of man's judgment, [rather as the margin has it, of man's day:] yea I judge not mine own self. ....Therefore judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come, who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will make manifest the counsels of the hearts: and then shall every man have praise of God." It has removed entirely to the background of their contemplation the vicissitudes of time and the terrors of death. It has struck an effectual blow at the stupendous evil of a narrow and bigoted sectarianism, and linked their hearts in endeared communion to all of every name who rejoice in like precious faith. It has done more to separate them from the world, in tender pity for its blindness and misery, than all other causes combined. Above all it has kept them in delightful fellowship with God, while their gaze has been steadily fixed upon that which is presented by the Holy Spirit as the proper object of hope, not only to the church at large but to the individual Christian.

That object, as previously stated and fully proved, is not death, but Christ himself, according as it is written, "God our Saviour, and the Lord Jesus Christ our hope." To this it is commonly replied, that if we are prepared for death, we are also prepared for the coming of Christ, and hence it is supposed that there is no practical difference between expecting death and expecting the Saviour. But, in the first place, there is seldom an allusion to the death of the believer in the New Testament; in the second place, it is always dangerous to substitute any thing in place of the "words which the Holy Ghost teacheth;" and in the third place, it is strange indeed that a Christian can perceive no difference between waiting for death and waiting for Christ. Death is the direct result of sin, and all its associations are frightful and forbidding. The wasting sickness, or the sharp and sudden pang that stops the beating heart, the the last look cast on the faces of those we love, the clammy coldness and strange stillness that follow, the loss of the bright sun, the blue sky, and busy activities, and sweet courtesies of life, the burial in a damp cheerless grave, the humiliating acknowledgement to "corruption, Thou art my father: to the worm, Thou art my mother and my sister," the moulding into dust through a process of loathsome putrefaction—oh, this is not the thing which our heavenly Father has placed before his dear children as the object of their contemplation and hope. We cannot wonder that the painters represent death as of hideous mein, or that the poet should say:

> "Thou art terrible: the tear,
> The groan, the knell, the pall, the bier,
> And all we know, or dream, or fear
> Of agony, are thine."

It is in vain to reply that the believer who does not hope for the coming of Christ regards death only as the gloomy passage to the portals of the celestial city, for after all, he expects to know the horrible significance of dying and decaying, and hence loses in his daily experience the joyous and animating hope of being "changed in a moment, in the twinkling of the eye," and of being caught up in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air. I do not deny that he will be abundantly sustained by the grace of a faithful Saviour, if called to die, but it is nothing that he should fail to receive through his life the mighty influence of "that blessed hope, in keeping his heart turned to Jesus like the magnetic needle to the polar star?—REV. J. H. BROOKES, D. D. in the "Old School Presbyterian."

A Sinking Fund.

OR, A SHOT IN THE LOCKER.

BR. SHELDON:—Will you allow me to suggest to the friends of the A. C. TIMES and its cause that as the contributions and pledges have come in sufficiently to meet the debt, and yet not half the friends who have this work have pledged; would it not be a good thing to pledge and pay in $4,000 more, as a fund in the treasury, to work with in keeping out of debt, and in publishing tracts, books, and extra papers? This can be done, and those who do it, get a blessing in doing it, while they are bestowing a great blessing upon others.

I. C. WELLCOME.

Our Reward.

D. O. AMOS.

"If ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." How are we to become Christ's? It is a fact we must become Christ's if we inherit the promise given to Abraham. Paul's word is sufficient in leading us to Christ: "We are all children of God by faith in Christ." Then again: "Be patient, continue instante in prayer," and "Pray without ceasing; in every thing give thanks, for this is the will of God." Again, "By patient continuance in well doing seek for glory, honor, immortality, eternal life." Is not the Word of God sufficient to bring us to Christ? Laying aside men's theory and prejudice, for we must believe him if we inherit the promise. When shall we who are Christians receive that inheritance? For Abraham and all the prophets have died, and not received the promise; and we al[illegible] that a dead man cannot recei[illegible]y thing, and the promise must be i[illegible]he future, beyond the resurrectio[illegible]or "David is not ascended into the heavens;" and if David has not ascended to the heavens, and died without receiving the promise, none have received it yet; but we hope for some thing to come, not past, and so the promised inheritance is in the future beyond the resurrection. "For if the inheritance be of the law it is no more of promise, but God gave it to Abraham by promise"; and if we are Christ's then are we heir according to promise; and the blessed promise will be fulfilled when we are changed, and our bodies are made like unto his own glorious body at his appearing and his kingdom, and not before. May we all be firm in the blessed hope.

The Body a Temple.

What an incentive to holiness, to purity of life and conduct, lies in the fact that the body of a saint is the temple of God—a truer, nobler temple than that which Solomon dedicated by his prayer, Jesus consecrated by his presence! In popish cathedral, where the light streamed through painted windows, and the organ pealed along lofty aisles, and candles gleamed on golden cups and silver crosses, and incense floated in the fragrant clouds, we have seen the blinded worshiper uncover his head, drop reverently on his knees, and raise his awe-struck eye on the imposing spectacle: we have seen him kiss the marble floor, and knew that he would sooner be smitten dead upon the floor than be guilty of defiling it. How does this devotee rebuke us! We wonder at his superstition; how may he wonder at our profanity! Can we look on the lowly veneration he expresses for an edifice which has been erected by some dead man's genius, which holds but some image of a deified virgin, or bones of a canonized saint, and which Time shall one day cast to the ground and bury in the dust—can we, I say, look on that, and if sensible to rebuke, not feel reproved by the spectacle? In how much more respect, in how much holier veneration should we hold this body! The temple dedicated to the Son of God, it is consecrated by the presence of the Spirit—a living temple, over whose porch the eye of piety reads what the finger of inspiration has written: "If any defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are."—Dr. Guthrie.

Practical Bearing of Prophecy.

PART OF AN ADDRESS DELIVERED BY S. A. BLACKWOOD, ESQ., IN LONDON.

Without entering into the details of Prophecy, as previous speakers have fully done so, I remark that it is a noticeable sign that, within the last 30 or 40 years, there has been a considerable revival of the expectation of the coming of the Lord; men have written and prayed and preached about it as never before. And although since the book of prophecy is, to a certain extent, written in cipher, and every expositor does not use the same key, there may be some differences in the details of interpretation, yet thus the whole truth becomes elucidated. And as the day of Christ approaches, we shall find men more and more drawn together in agreement as to its meaning; and even now I believe that in the increased interests already manifested in its study, we may hear, if not the midnight cry itself, yet the distant whisper of it, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh: go ye forth to meet him." The signs of the times are very striking and even startling. Not merely one here and another there; but it is the fact that a great many signs are happening concurrently. It is not one falling leaf that makes the autumn; but when you see the ground strewn with them, you know that of a truth that season is come. It is not one swallow that makes the summer; but when you see great numbers of swallows you know that summer is at hand. And oh! what a summer of millennial joy and brightness will soon visit this earth—an everlasting spring, the beginning of the creation of God, who will make all things new!

There is much occasion for fervent prayer among the people of God. Many things are calculated to make us look up and to believe that our redemption draweth nigh. And if so, if the day is so much the more approaching, what is the attitude that the Lord would have used us in? Now, if we look at the 21st chapter of Luke, 34th verse, we may perhaps wonder that such words should be addressed to Christians. They are spoken in regard to eating and drinking too much. "Take heed to yourselves lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares." The Lord knew the heart of man, and knew what was in him; we may be sure that this caution was not given without the knowledge that it was needful. Dear hearers, believers in the Lord Jesus Christ, is there no need of this warning—are you not aware of a constant tendency to be overcome by self indulgence in some of its forms? And whenever this assumes a mastery, even for a little time, your spiritual sensibilities are deadened. You cannot then be looking out for the Lord's coming.

If there is a Christian here who is living [in self-indulgence, be assured that Christ will come upon you unawares, although not so upon the watching people of God.

Whether you take the chronological, or political, or religious signs, they are multiplying around us. The Lord has given us plenty of indications of his rapidly approaching return. But if by reason of surfeiting and drunkenness, or the cares of this life, our hearts are overcharged and our eyes dim, then we cannot understand these signs. What a solemn p[illegible] of a man not knowing [illegible] time in the case of Lot! And it is expressly intimated that there will be some regarding whom, as it was in the days of Lot, so shall it be in their day. But there was another, who has been mentioned by our Lord as a type of a very different character, in reference to the time of his coming. "As it was in the days of Noe," &c. These two men are singled out as types of Christians who shall be living in the world when the day of judgment sets in.

But how different was the attitude of each of these men. Noah, all ready and not taken by surprise, knew it apparently for 120 years beforehand; and as the day came nearer he got fresh warnings from God. He was walking as it were on the hills of promise; his eyes were open and he knew what was coming. Seven days before the flood he entered the ark peacefully. But not so Lot. He had got down, if not into immortality, at any rate into an immortal atmosphere. He was saved as it were by the skin of his teeth, losing everything, while Noah saved his family and possessions in the ark. I believe that these are just pictures which God gives of two main classes of those who are the people of God:—First, the wise understanding, watching, waiting, praying, ready Christians; secondly, those who are not ready, but are startled by the event at the last moment; saved it is true eventually: but only so as by fire, and not having an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour.

And what does the Lord say to us here? "Take heed to yourselves." May every Christian hear this—"Take heed to yourselves," brother and sister in Christ, "for as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of all the earth." For as it was in the days of Noah so shall it be again. The people were warned, for Noah was a preacher of righteousness, and was not likely to have left the ungodly in darkness. He must have told them that God was going to sweep the earth with the besom of destruction. He would say, "Repent and break off your sins by righteousness;" but they gave no heed to him. Christ himself says, "they knew not:" although it had been preached to them again and again, not only by Noah, but by one long before; for Enoch had declared against the sins of those days and said, "Behold the Lord cometh to execute judgment." But they took no heed; they knew not till the day came upon them.

My dear friends, ought not we to live like Enoch and Noah, delivering a warning testimony in the midst of the surrounding world of ungodliness, and bearing witness that the Lord is coming?

Oh, dear friends, what a solemn responsibility rests upon us who profess to believe in the speedy advent of Christ! Won't people say–Do you really believe it? And what shall we reply? Yes, we do! But let us beware lest our lives contradict the supposition. We may be diligent students of the Bible and the prophetic Scriptures, and it is well to be so; but let there be self-examination as to what the belief is doing for our lives. Are we like servants waiting for our Lord? What effect is it having upon our business transactions, money dealings, dress, eating and drinking? Upon our everyday life, or arrangements for this world? "Take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts are overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares."

I am not on this occasion going into the important question as to whether the church of Christ shall be removed before or after the great tribulation, or whether the time of that event is likely to be within ten or twenty years; but I want to put the searching question, whether we, as believers in the approaching return of the Lord Jesus, are living as becomes our belief? St. John says, (1 John 2:28), "Abide in him, that when he shall appear we may have confidence and not be ashamed before him at his coming." Is it then possible for a Christian to be ashamed before the Lord at his coming? for one who has had his sins washed away in the blood of Jesus, and is clothed in his spotless righteousness? It would seem so from this verse. If that verse means anything, it means this;—that if we are not abiding in Christ practically, as to communion and fellowship, we can not look for his return with confidence. If you are allowing yourselves things in which your conscience condemns you, you cannot say, "Even so, come Lord Jesus, come quickly." Unless you are cleansing yourself from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of the Lord, walking in the light even as he is in the light, working where he would have you work, watching and taking heed to yourselves, you cannot sincerely cry, "Come, Lord Jesus." You may indeed, repeat these words, and say, "Thy kingdom come," but you cannot say it from your innermost heart, and with a clear conscience.

Now the Lord says, "Watch, work, pray, abide,"—these four directions. But oh, how full and comprehensive these words are; and they all hang beautifully together. I cannot be watching and yet be idle; or working without praying; or praying without abiding in Christ; and this altogether makes up a life ready for his appearing, and then we can look forward with joy. We do not want to suffer loss when he comes—to have our works burned up. Depend upon it, it will be so, unless they are wrought in God. There may be in some cases an immense amount of work, and actively put forth: and yet done more to please man than God; and to quiet an uneasy conscience rather than to glorify him. Let each inquire of themselves, "What am I living for?" When the Lord shall make manifest the hidden things, how will he look at my work? The life saved, but the labor lost! Oh, dear friends, may God give us grace to work as in his sight, to work for his glory, and then we shall hail with delight the words "I come quickly."

I have often thought of that interesting illustration, or type, in the second book of Samuel 19: 11. David, after the suppression of Absalom's rebellion, was about to return from his brief exile, to re-establish his kingdom at Jerusalem; but first he sends this message to Zadok and Abiathar, the priests, "Speak unto the elders of Judah, saying, Why are ye the last to bring the king back to his house? Ye are my brethren, my bones and my flesh. Wherefore, then, are ye the last to bring back the king?" Now, in like manner, the Lord says, as it were, "The whole creation groaneth and travaileth together in pain, yearning for the manifestation of the sons of God; and you that are my mystical body, my flesh and bones, are you the last in beseeching me to come back?" David waited for them to come, and he stopped to send this word, and bowed the heart of the men of Judah even as the heart of one [illegible], so that they sent this word unto th[illegible]g, "Return thou and all thy servants." So the king returned. But he waited for the desire of his people.

It seems to me as if that were the one thing the Lord is waiting for now. Loyal Christendom should be united as one man to ask the King to return. Is it so? No; on the contrary very many, even true Christians, are opposed to the Scriptural doctrine of the speedy personal coming of Christ. But let us pray that the Lord may direct the hearts of all his people to long for his coming: and when he hears the cry, as of one voice, "Return!" he will return, and his people will go to meet him. "Even so, come Lord Jesus, come quickly."

Now that we are about to close, how shall we separate? With hearts taught of God to work, and watch, and pray, and abide in him, that we may have confidence before him at his coming? Or are we going back to live the old life, the spasmodic, fitful life, instead of the steadfast, immovable life of always abounding in the work of the Lord, which God wishes us to live?

To those of you who have come only from curiosity I would earnestly urge the invitation, "Come to Jesus." He has enabled many of us to find in himself the forgiveness of our sins, and he can make you his children by adoption and grace; and he can do so now. He is willing. His blood has power to wash away your [illegible], and transgressions. Look to him! Look to him as the Saviour, and then you can ask him to return as the King. If you will not flee to him for salvation, what will you say when he does come! You will ask the rocks to fall on you and hide you from him that sitteth on the throne and from the Lamb. Trust him, and you shall know that you have eternal life, and you shall have a watching, waiting, abiding life in Christ, that you may have confidence, and not be ashamed before him at his coming.—Signs of our Times.

The 1873 Time.

N. H. BARBOUR.

For about fourteen years I have been looking for the Lord to come in 1873. And to me the arguments have seemed unanswerable. The first month and the seventh month were the only two periods in the year to which I could look. These are passed; hence my hope, or rather expectation, of seeing the Lord this year is at an end.

The advice of one brother is, "Give up this subject and preach the age to come." Another, (Free Methodist,) says, "Come with us and preach salvation." And yet another, "Give up the investigation of the prophetic periods and preach His coming near." Thus each is doing his part to give force to the proverb, "The days are prolonged, and every vision faileth," and to discourage future investigation. But notwithstanding all this I am still enforcing the 1873 arguments with more faith and a greater zeal than ever, though I do not expect the Lord until the seventh month of 1874. This may seem a paradox, but I have a reason for my position which is more than satisfactory, for it adds immensely to the strength of all the arguments.

If I can show that God claims, when it so pleases Him, to call it 1335 days until it is 1336, or 1335 when it is only 1334 and a fraction, I shall have shown that though the periods pointing to the end are revealed and therefore "belong to us and our children;" yet God may have reserved a fraction of time in His own power, to be made known in His way, without invalidating the reliability of the periods revealed to His holy prophets, or our correct understanding of those periods.

What God does once, he may do again. In other words, a precedent of His own is a safe position on which to base a future calculation, and there are just two periods of time in which He has used this liberty.

"David was thirty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned forty years." "Zedekiah was one and twenty years old when he began to reign; and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem."

One of these statements is made three and the other five times in God's word, as if to enforce the idea that there is no mistake. And yet the facts are that Zedekiah reigned only ten years three months and nine days. (See Jer. 52:1–12,) while David reigned forty years and six months. (See 2 Sam. 5:5.)

Now, suppose instead of a statement, these had been prophetic periods. "David shall reign forty years, at the end of which a special event will transpire." The people wait anxiously; the forty years end, and the promised event does not come. The vision has failed, and God is slack concerning His promises, would be the natural conclusion. Again, they wait in fear of a threatened judgment. "Zedekiah shall reign eleven years in Jerusalem, and then the city shall be taken captive. (See Jer. 1:3.) Ten years pass, and while they feel confident of another year, God cuts it short, "And it came to pass in the fourth month and the ninth day of the month of the eleventh year of Zedekiah the city was taken." Shall the clay say to the potter what doest thou?

God has given just these two precedents, from which some men reason that all definite time in the Bible is loosely stated, and inaccurate. I do not so reason, but believe they were given for a special purpose. If the time had overrun one whole year the statement would have been as false in spirit, as though it had come short that much.

These two periods teach us that when God pleases to shorten or lengthen a given time He may so do, within certain limits, without invalidating the spirit of the word.

The 1260 days of Papal dominion fell short almost a year.

From the best authority we can find the abomination was not "set up," viz: The provinces of Italy, or civil powers, did not declare in favor of the Catholic party until near the close of 538. (I have always taught that the "woman" (Rev. 17) who had the name "Abominations" on her forehead, and was drunken with the blood of the saints, was "the abomination that maketh desolate;" and that she was "set up" when she took her seat on the beast, that the "seat" was Rome, the seat of the dragon, and that she took her seat when the civil power, or province of Italy changed their allegiance from the Arian to the Catholic party. The Goths were expelled from the main part of Italy in the month of March, but the provinces which Gibbon tells us had afterwards embraced the faith of the Emperor, could not have organized and changed their allegiance without consuming time.

From the Autum, of 538 to the 15th of Feb. 1798, when the Roman republic was declared, was only 1259 years and a fraction. Thus this period of oppression on his church was cut shor almost a year.

The 1335 days began when the ab omination was "set up" near the end of 538: hence they end near the clos of 1873. But the time to which we can look for our High Priest to leav the holy place in 1873 is passed.

From near the close of 1873 to the seventh month of 1874 is only a fraction of a year. This fraction, I am sat isfied, from all the jots and tittles God will appropriate.

No negative is ever advanced unti there has been an affirmative. And Pe ter declares, "that God is not slack con cerning His promise, as some men coun slackness, but is long suffering to u ward, not willing that any should per ish; but the day of the Lord will com as a thief in the night." Now Go has given a precedent for us to ca it 1335 days until it is a large fractio over that: and we know he is long su fering, and there is to be a proverb the land, "that the days are prolonge and every vision faileth," and som men will say that God is slack co cerning his promises in relation to th event, so that faith will be almost ex tinguished when the Son of ma cometh, and certain servants will sa "my Lord delays his coming;" an bringing it about in this way giv that class of servants such a good o portunity to smight such fellow se vants, and thus try the faith of tho who endure to the end; in view of a these things I believe God will "spa the tree this year also, and after th thou shalt cut it down."

"Till He Come."

NOTES OF AN ADDRESS BY ADOL SAPHIR.

I wish to speak to you this eveni on the prospect of the return of o blessed Saviour, Jesus Christ. Wh the Lord's Supper is celebrated, we r member Jesus in the past, how he di for us on the cross; we think of Je

Practical Bearing of Prophecy.

PART OF AN ADDRESS DELIVERED BY S. A. BLACKWOOD, ESQ., IN LONDON.

Without entering into the details of Prophecy, as previous speakers have fully done so, I remark that it is a noticeable sign that, within the last 30 or 40 years, there has been a considerable revival of the expectation of the coming of the Lord; men have written and prayed and preached about it as never before. And although since the book of prophecy is, to a certain extent, written in cipher, and every expositor does not use the same key, there may be some differences in the details of interpretation, yet thus the whole truth becomes elucidated. And as the day of Christ approaches, we shall find men more and more drawn together in agreement as to its meaning; and even now I believe that in the increased interests already manifested in its study, we may hear, if not the midnight cry itself, yet the distant whisper of it, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh: go ye forth to meet him." The signs of the times are very striking and even startling. Not merely one here and another there; but it is the fact that a great many signs are happening concurrently. It is not one falling leaf that makes the autumn; but when you see the ground strewn with them, you know that of a truth that season is come. It is not one swallow that makes the summer; but when you see great numbers of swallows you know that summer is at hand. And oh! what a summer of millennial joy and brightness will soon visit this earth—an everlasting spring, the beginning of the creation of God, who will make all things new!

There is much occasion for fervent prayer among the people of God. Many things are calculated to make us look up and to believe that our redemption draweth nigh. And if so, if the day is so much the more approaching, what is the attitude that the Lord would have used us in? Now, if we look at the 21st chapter of Luke, 34th verse, we may perhaps wonder that such words should be addressed to Christians. They are spoken in regard to eating and drinking too much. "Take heed to yourselves lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares." The Lord knew the heart of man, and knew what was in him; we may be sure that this caution was not given without the knowledge that it was needful. Dear hearers, believers in the Lord Jesus Christ, is there no need of this warning—are you not aware of a constant tendency to be overcome by self indulgence in some of its forms? And whenever this assumes a mastery, even for a little time, your spiritual sensibilities are deadened. You cannot then be looking out for the Lord's coming.

If there is a Christian here who is living in self-indulgence, be assured that Christ will come upon you unawares, although not so upon the watching people of God.

Whether you take the chronological, or political, or religious signs, they are multiplying around us. The Lord has given us plenty of indications of his rapidly approaching return. But if by reason of surfeiting and drunkenness, or the cares of this life, our hearts are overcharged and our eyes dim, then we cannot understand these signs. What a solemn p[illegible]e of a man not knowing [illegible] time in the case of Lot! And it is expressly intimated that there will be some regarding whom, as it was in the days of Lot, so shall it be in their day. But there was another, who has been mentioned by our Lord as a type of a very different character, in reference to the time of his coming. "As it was in the days of Noe," &c. These two men are singled out as types of Christians who shall be living in the world when the day of judgment sets in.

But how different was the attitude of each of these men. Noah, all ready and not taken by surprise, knew it apparently for 120 years beforehand; and as the day came nearer he got fresh warnings from God. He was walking as it were on the hills of promise; his eyes were open and he knew what was coming. Seven days before the flood he entered the ark peacefully. But not so Lot. He had got down, if not into immortality, at any rate into an immortal atmosphere. He was saved as it were by the skin of his teeth, losing everything, while Noah saved his family and possessions in the ark. I believe that these are just pictures which God gives of two main classes of those who are the people of God:—First, the wise understanding, watching, waiting, praying, ready Christians; secondly, those who are not ready, but are startled by the event at the last moment; saved it is true eventually: but only so as by fire, and not having an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour.

And what does the Lord say to us here? "Take heed to yourselves." May every Christian hear this—"Take heed to yourselves," brother and sister in Christ, "for as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of all the earth." For as it was in the days of Noah so shall it be again. The people were warned, for Noah was a preacher of righteousness, and was not likely to have left the ungodly in darkness. He must have told them that God was going to sweep the earth with the besom of destruction. He would say, "Repent and break off your sins by righteousness;" but they gave no heed to him. Christ himself says, "they knew not:" although it had been preached to them again and again, not only by Noah, but by one long before; for Enoch had declared against the sins of those days and said, "Behold the Lord cometh to execute judgment." But they took no heed; they knew not till the day came upon them.

My dear friends, ought not we to live like Enoch and Noah, delivering a warning testimony in the midst of the surrounding world of ungodliness, and bearing witness that the Lord is coming?

Oh, dear friends, what a solemn responsibility rests upon us who profess to believe in the speedy advent of Christ! Won't people say–Do you really believe it? And what shall we reply? Yes, we do! But let us beware lest our lives contradict the supposition. We may be diligent students of the Bible and the prophetic Scriptures, and it is well to be so; but let there be self-examination as to what the belief is doing for our lives. Are we like servants waiting for our Lord? What effect is it having upon our business transactions, money dealings, dress, eating and drinking? Upon our everyday life, or arrangements for this world? "Take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts are overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares."

I am not on this occasion going into the important question as to whether the church of Christ shall be removed before or after the great tribulation, or whether the time of that event is likely to be within ten or twenty years; but I want to put the searching question, whether we, as believers in the approaching return of the Lord Jesus, are living as becomes our belief? St. John says, (1 John 2:28), "Abide in him, that when he shall appear we may have confidence and not be ashamed before him at his coming." Is it then possible for a Christian to be ashamed before the Lord at his coming? for one who has had his sins washed away in the blood of Jesus, and is clothed in his spotless righteousness? It would seem so from this verse. If that verse means anything, it means this:—that if we are not abiding in Christ practically, as to communion and fellowship, we can not look for his return with confidence. If you are allowing yourselves things in which your conscience condemns you, you cannot say, "Even so, come Lord Jesus, come quickly." Unless you are cleansing yourself from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of the Lord, walking in the light even as he is in the light, working where he would have you work, watching and taking heed to yourselves, you cannot sincerely cry, "Come, Lord Jesus." You may indeed, repeat these words, and say, "Thy kingdom come," but you cannot say it from your innermost heart, and with a clear conscience.

Now the Lord says, "Watch, work, pray, abide,"—these four directions. But oh, how full and comprehensive these words are; and they all hang beautifully together. I cannot be watching and yet be idle; or working without praying; or praying without abiding in Christ; and this altogether makes up a life ready for his appearing, and then we can look forward with joy. We do not want to suffer loss when he comes—to have our works burned up. Depend upon it, it will be so, unless they are wrought in God. There may be in some cases an immense amount of work, and actively put forth: and yet done more to please man than God; and to quiet an uneasy conscience rather than to glorify him. Let each inquire of themselves, "What am I living for?" When the Lord shall make manifest the hidden things, how will he look at my work? The life saved, but the labor lost! Oh, dear friends, may God give us grace to work as in his sight, to work for his glory, and then we shall hail with delight the words "I come quickly."

I have often thought of that interesting illustration, or type, in the second book of Samuel 19: 11. David, after the suppression of Absalom's rebellion, was about to return from his brief exile, to re-establish his kingdom at Jerusalem; but first he sends this message to Zadok and Abiathar, the priests, "Speak unto the elders of Judah, saying, Why are ye the last to bring the king back to his house? Ye are my brethren, my bones and my flesh. Wherefore, then, are ye the last to bring back the king?" Now, in like manner, the Lord says, as it were, "The whole creation groaneth and travaileth together in pain, yearning for the manifestation of the sons of God; and you that are my mystical body, my flesh and bones, are you the last in beseeching me to come back?" David waited for them to come, and he stopped to send this word, and bowed the heart of the men of Judah even as the heart of one m[illegible] so that they sent this word unto th[illegible]g, "Return thou and all thy servants." So the king returned. But he waited for the desire of his people.

It seems to me as if that were the one thing the Lord is waiting for now. Loyal Christendom should be united as one man to ask the King to return. Is it so? No; on the contrary very many, even true Christians, are opposed to the Scriptural doctrine of the speedy personal coming of Christ. But let us pray that the Lord may direct the hearts of all his people to long for his coming: and when he hears the cry, as of one voice, "Return!" he will return, and his people will go to meet him. "Even so, come Lord Jesus, come quickly."

Now that we are about to close, how shall we separate? With hearts taught of God to work, and watch, and pray, and abide in him, that we may have confidence before him at his coming? Or are we going back to live the old life, the spasmodic, fitful life, instead of the steadfast, immovable life of always abounding in the work of the Lord, which God wishes us to live?

To those of you who have come only from curiosity I would earnestly urge the invitation, "Come to Jesus." He has enabled many of us to find in himself the forgiveness of our sins, and he can make you his children by adoption and grace; and he can do so now. He is willing. His blood has power to wash away your s[illegible], and transgressions. Look to him! Look to him as the Saviour, and then you can ask him to return as the King. If you will not flee to him for salvation, what will you say when he does come! You will ask the rocks to fall on you and hide you from him that sitteth on the throne and from the Lamb. Trust him, and you shall know that you have eternal life, and you shall have a watching, waiting, abiding life in Christ, that you may have confidence, and not be ashamed before him at his coming.—Signs of our Times.

The 1873 Time.

N. H. BARBOUR.

For about fourteen years I have been looking for the Lord to come in 1873. And to me the arguments have seemed unanswerable. The first month and the seventh month were the only two periods in the year to which I could look. These are passed; hence my hope, or rather expectation, of seeing the Lord this year is at an end.

The advice of one brother is, "Give up this subject and preach the age to come." Another, (Free Methodist,) says, "Come with us and preach salvation." And yet another, "Give up the investigation of the prophetic periods and preach His coming near." Thus each is doing his part to give force to the proverb, "The days are prolonged, and every vision faileth," and to discourage future investigation. But notwithstanding all this I am still enforcing the 1873 arguments with more faith and a greater zeal than ever, though I do not expect the Lord until the seventh month of 1874. This may seem a paradox, but I have a reason for my position which is more than satisfactory, for it adds immensely to the strength of all the arguments.

If I can show that God claims, when it so pleases Him, to call it 1335 days until it is 1336, or 1335 when it is only 1334 and a fraction, I shall have shown that though the periods pointing to the end are revealed and therefore "belong to us and our children;" yet God may have reserved a fraction of time in His own power, to be made known in His way, without invalidating the reliability of the periods revealed to His holy prophets, or our correct understanding of those periods.

What God does once, he may do again. In other words, a precedent of His own is a safe position on which to base a future calculation, and there are just two periods of time in which He has used this liberty.

"David was thirty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned forty years." "Zedekiah was one and twenty years old when he began to reign; and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem."

One of these statements is made three and the other five times in God's word, as if to enforce the idea that there is no mistake. And yet the facts are that Zedekiah reigned only ten years three months and nine days. (See Jer. 52:1–12,) while David reigned forty years and six months. (See 2 Sam. 5:5.)

Now, suppose instead of a statement, these had been prophetic periods. "David shall reign forty years, at the end of which a special event will transpire." The people wait anxiously; the forty years end, and the promised event does not come. The vision has failed, and God is slack concerning His promises, would be the natural conclusion. Again, they wait in fear of a threatened judgment. "Zedekiah shall reign eleven years in Jerusalem, and then the city shall be taken captive. (See Jer. 1:3.) Ten years pass, and while they feel confident of another year, God cuts it short, "And it came to pass in the fourth month and the ninth day of the month of the eleventh year of Zedekiah the city was taken." Shall the clay say to the potter what doest thou?

God has given just these two precedents, from which some men reason that all definite time in the Bible is loosely stated, and inaccurate. I do not so reason, but believe they were given for a special purpose. If the time had overrun one whole year the statement would have been as false in spirit, as though it had come short that much.

These two periods teach us that when God pleases to shorten or lengthen a given time He may so do, within certain limits, without invalidating the spirit of the word.

The 1260 days of Papal dominion fell short almost a year.

From the best authority we can find the abomination was not "set up," viz: The provinces of Italy, or civil powers, did not declare in favor of the Catholic party until near the close of 538. (I have always taught that the "woman" (Rev. 17) who had the name "Abominations" on her forehead, and was drunken with the blood of the saints, was "the abomination that maketh desolate;" and that she was "set up" when she took her seat on the beast, that the "seat" was Rome, the seat of the dragon, and that she took her seat when the civil power, or province of Italy changed their allegiance from the Arian to the Catholic party. The Goths were expelled from the main part of Italy in the month of March, but the provinces which Gibbon tells us had afterwards embraced the faith of the Emperor, could not have organized and changed their allegiance without consuming time.

From the Autum, of 538 to the 15th of Feb. 1798, when the Roman republic was declared, was only 1259 year and a fraction. Thus this period of oppression on his church was cut shor almost a year.

The 1335 days began when the abomination was "set up" near the end of 538: hence they end near the clos of 1873. But the time to which we can look for our High Priest to leav the holy place in 1873 is passed

From near the close of 1873 to the seventh month of 1874 is only a fraction of a year. This fraction, I am satisfied, from all the jots and titles God will appropriate.

No negative is ever advanced unti there has been an affirmative. And Peter declares, "that God is not slack concerning His promise, as some men coun slackness, but is long suffering to u ward, not willing that any should perish; but the day of the Lord will com as a thief in the night." Now Go has given a precedent for us to ca it 1335 days until it is a large fractio over that: and we know he is long su fering, and there is to be a proverb i the land, "that the days are prolonge and every vision faileth," and som men will say that God is slack co cerning his promises in relation to th event, so that faith will be almost extinguished when the Son of ma cometh, and certain servants will sa "my Lord delays his coming;" an bringing it about in this way give that class of servants such a good o portunity to smight such fellow se vants, and thus try the faith of tho who endure to the end; in view of a these things I believe God will "spa the tree this year also, and after th thou shalt cut it down."

"Till He Come."

NOTES OF AN ADDRESS BY ADOL [illegible]

I wish to speak to you this evenin on the prospect of the return of o blessed Saviour, Jesus Christ. Wh the Lord's Supper is celebrated, we r member Jesus in the past, how he di for us on the cross; we think of Jes in the present, how he lives and intercedes for us; and we look forward to the future, when he shall come again and receive us to himself. These three facts are before us when we thus show the death of the Lord.

Jesus himself dwelt on his future coming when on that last night he gave his disciples the bread and the wine. All three evangelists record it, that he said, "I will not drink henceforth of this fruit of the vine until that day when I drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom;" and the apostle Paul likewise says, "As oft as ye eat this bread and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he come."

To be in sympathy with Jesus, we also must look forward to his second coming. It was wonderful strength which enabled Jesus, in the prospect of his great agony in Gethsemane, and his death on the cross, to rejoice with his disciples, looking past and beyond all the sorrow to the time when he should return in brightness and joy to receive his people to himself.

On the eve of the crucifixion, he was full of peace, comforting and encouraging them, and he gave unto them this supper as an emblem of his faithfulness and unchanging love. Jesus will come again. As surely as he lived and died upon the cross, and as surely as he is seated now on the right hand of the Father, so surely he will return, and all his saints with him, and give the crown of righteousness to all who love him. This is the great hope of the Christian.

1. It is a solemn hope. Even the beloved disciple John fell at his feet as one dead, when he beheld the Lord Christ in his heavenly glory. This hope of the Lord's return solemnizes us; it makes our whole life grave and earnest; every day brings us nearer to the appearing of our great God and Saviour, with his angels, when, as the Lord of glory, he shall be made manifest, and we shall see him eye to eye.

He who expects the Lord Jesus can not lead a trifling life. It is an awful thing to live, a solemn thing to belong to the ten virgins who have gone forth to meet the Bridegroom; it is a solemn thing to be a Christian going forth to meet the Lord Jesus, expecting when he appears to see him, and to be with him.

2. It is a joyous hope. God is our joy. The highest joy has an element of awe in it; even the angels, who rejoice before God continually, are filled with awe and reverence, veil their faces, and cry, "Holy, holy, holy!" and while the prospect of seeing Jesus, our heavenly Bridegroom, is solemn, it is also joyous.

Now at the table, Christ has removed all that is sorrowful and alarming; a festival has been prepared for you; you have no reason to mourn, or to be afraid; your sin is forgiven, your guilt is cancelled, your burden is removed; the love of God is resting upon you, the kingdom of heaven is opened to you; Jesus by his own blood has prevailed, and we, with him, have entered into the holy of holies. In all trials we have his sympathy, in all difficulties his strength, in all perplexities his guidance. Let all our hearts be praise.

Have you heard the voice of Jesus? with joy think also of Christ's return—saying, "Come unto me;" and are you living in the sound of that "come"? If so, you will surely hear that same blessed voice say, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world"; for his body was broken, and his blood shed, that when he comes, all who trust in him may be with him forever.

3. It is a purifying hope. All exhortations to Christians have reference to the second coming of the Lord. As expecting to be with and like Jesus, to be joined to him in an everlasting union, a Christian cannot lead a sinful, trifling life; you must put away the tinsel and the emptiness of the world, and adorn yourself with all that is precious in the sight of God. To you, who are his disciples, he says, "Learn of me, for I am meek and lowly of heart." If you cherish this hope it will shape the course of your life, mould your character, and exert an elevating influence on your whole being.

4. It is a vital hope. We have it living within us; we have already the earnest, the foretaste of the inheritance. It is a lively hope, because Christ, even now, lives within us, the hope of glory.

Jesus is no stranger to us; when we see him, we shall be like him; but even now, to some extent, we see him, and are like him. Then will be the marriage of the Lamb, but already are we united to him by the Holy Ghost. All that is promised in this hope we now possess in essence and germ, though miniature, for he who died for us now lives in us. He gives himself to us to be the root of all our life, the source of all our joy; and when we sit at this table, our hope is his return, the coming of Jesus, when our union with him, begun on earth, will be perfected in glory.

5. It is a lively hope, the nature of which we understand, because it is ours by the Holy Spirit given to us. May the Lord give us to realize it! Put all your trust in Jesus; let none be afraid, for Christ is here, Christ crucified, who is risen, and gone into heaven, where he ever liveth to make intercession for us.

Christ is ours, and sin is taken away; rest then in Jesus, with fullness of peace, and the assurance of faith; then will his return be in you a solemn hope, a joyous hope, a purifying hope. And let each one, as he rests on Jesus, again give himself to Jesus to be his, body, soul, and spirit, for time and eternity, with all that he is and has, his thoughts, desires, imaginations, actions; move and live in Jesus. Say again, "I am thine, dwell thou in me;" then will it be also a vital hope. For only when we live to Christ will he give us rest, putting his yoke and burden upon us. We shall then find rest in the rest of Jesus, and then, when Jesus comes, they who are ready shall go in to the marriage. Amen!—British Herald.

Sonship and Fellowship.

"The fellowship of his Son Jesus Christ our Lord." (1 Cor. 1:9.)

God's faithfulness is our resting-place. His true and unchanging love is our security. From first to last it is with a "faithful" God that we have to do. The eternal God is our refuge, and underneath us are the everlasting arms. There is none like the God of Jeshurun,—the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness nor shadow of turning.

It is this faithful God who calls us; saves us; blesses us; keeps us. It is he who begins the good work in us, and will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ. He will keep what we have commited to him.

This calling of His is often referred to. That which he calls us out of is noted: "Who hath called you out of darkness." (1 Peter 2:9). That to which he calls is also noted: "Called unto liberty" (Gal. 5:13); "called to glory" (2 Peter 1:3); "called you unto his kingdom and glory" (1 Thess. 2:12). That by which he calls us is also noted. "Called by grace" (Gal. 1:15); "called by our gospel" (2 Thess 2:14). But in the passage before us it is simply said that we are called into the fellowship of his Son. What does this mean?

Fellowship does not merely mean friendship, or converse, or sympathy; it means "partnership," sharing what belongs to others,—"all that I have is thine." Thus the word is used, Luke 5:10, "which were partners with Simon." There is not merely partaking of something as a gift, but sharing, as common property, what another possesses. It is business partnership; family partnership; filial partnership; conjugal partnership; the partnership of adoption or heritage. Our text embraces all these, when it speaks of our being called to the fellowship of his Son Jesus Christ; just as elsewhere it is said that we "are made partakers of Christ" (Heb. 3:14). So that intercourse with Christ is only part of the boundless privilege which fellowship implies.

Let us consider this fellowship or partnership with Christ in the following aspects,—

I. Partnership with Him in what He was. He was crucified, he died, was buried, rose again. In all these we have part. Not that we helped him to do his work and to bear his cross; not that we were joint sin-bearers, assisting him to save us. In all this alone he, was suffering the wrath alone. But still we are said to be crucified with him, to have died with him, to be buried with him, to have risen with him. One cross, one death, one grave, one resurrection. Such is our fellowship with him, that God looks on us as one with him in all these things; treats us as having passed through what he did, as if we had actually paid the eternal penalty, and were entitled to the eternal righteousness. In believing we enter on this partnership, and into all the benefits of his death and resurrection. As one with him, all these are ours.

II. Partnership with Him in what He is. He has not only risen, but he has ascended; he has been seated on the throne of the Majesty in the heavens. We share his present dignity; for we are said to be seated with him in heavenly places, and are treated by God as such. His ascension is ours, his dignity and glory are ours. We are still no doubt here on earth; but we are called to feel and act, and live as those who are already at the right hand of God. Simple forgivness is not all our portion. We are raised higher than this; raised into high favor with God, and made to share in the fulness which belongs to Christ as the risen and ascended and glorified Son of man. Besides all this, we share his name, and are called sons of God. We share the father's love,—"that the love where with which thou shast loved me may be in them." We share his offices; we are prophets, priests, and kings; heirs of God and joint-heirs with Christ Jesus.

III. Partnership with Him in what He shall be. Much of his glory is yet in reserve; for now we see not yet all things put under him. The day of glory and dominion; the day of the crown, and the throne, and the royal robe is coming; and in all these we are to have fellowship with him; as one with him; members of his body, sharing the glory of the head; as the bride of Christ, sharing the glory of the Bridegroom; one with him in all his honor throughout eternity.

Thus, then, there is complete fellowship with Christ. It is to this that we are called by a faithful God; and is it not a high and glorious calling? Fellowship in his cross, his grave, his resurrection, his throne, his glory! All this faith secures to us; and of this the Holy Spirit bears witness to us. Believing, we are reconciled, saved, accepted, blessed with all spiritual blessing in Christ Jesus.

Let us walk worthy of it; as men who really believe it; happy, holy, unworldly, zealous, generous, loving. Let us carry the consciousness of our calling into every thing,—great or small; into business, daily life, recreations, reading, education, every thing; maintaining our true position before men; manifesting our proper character; letting the world know our prospects, and doing nothing inconsistent with what we profess to be now, and with what we shall be when the Lord comes.—Bonar on the Acts and Epistles.

Temperance in Hindoostan.

C. C. M.

Chunder Sen, the Hindoo Deist, a philanthropist, statesmen and scholar, in his tour through England gave that Christian people some plain talk after the following fashion:

I represent a nation remarkable for sobriety, temperance, and abstemiousness. If you desire to see homely and conclusive illustrations of the golden principles of temperance, go to India. Go from village to village, and from town to town, and you will see with your own eyes what wonders have been achieved in that nation by the power of temperance, and temperance alone. But alas! If you wish to see the effects that have resulted from the interference of a Christian nation and a Christian government with those principles and practices of temperance you must to India. There you will see how hundreds upon hundreds, aye, thousands upon thousands of enlightened energetic young men and young women are dying, month after month and year after year, as the necessary and inevitable consequence of that iniquitous system of liquor traffic which the British Government, to its shame, has introduced into India.

The Christian Life.

A Prayer.

A prayer is in my thoughts to-night
I hardly dare to say;
"Lord, put my wishes all to flight,
Nor let me have my way!"

I dare not say it Lord, for fear
My heart I may mistake;
So many earthly things are dear,
Perhaps for earth's own sake.

Nor can I think that thou art glad
In life despoiled of bloom,
Since, for all joy the worlds have had,
Thyself hast opened room.

And yet the poison-plant, so fair,
So like the wholesome grows;
To pluck my flowers I will not dare,
But trust his hand who knows.

And this, indeed, is life's best thing,
To take sweet gifts from thee;
If thou some dark, sealed bud shoulds't bring,
It must hold light for me.

In sadness I withheld my prayer,
Hid under trembling fear;
In praise it blossoms unaware,
Because the sun is near.

My heart thou wilt not crush or chill,
"Lead into thine own way!
Through all my wishes breath thy will!
This prayer to-night I say."

—Lucy Larcom.

The New Commandment.

S. K. GIBSON.

"This is my commandment, that ye love one another, as I have loved you."

This is my commandment, says Christ. Unlike the old, Christ brings in a new commandment, much better than the old one, for it is "established upon better promises." "An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth," is not our rule of action under the New Covenant. The old was imperfect and at fault, and could not "take away sins," or "give life." "It was added because of transgressions till the seed should come to whom the promise was made," a school-master to bring us to Christ. He gives us a New Covenant. The old has vanished away. The Lord now says, "I will put my laws into their mind, and write them in their hearts; and I will be to them a God, and they shall be to me a people." Now under this New Covenant, Christ gives this commandment, "That ye love one another, as I have loved you," and then adds, "Greater love hath no man than this that a man lay down his life for his friends;" and ye are my friends if ye do "whatsoever I command you. What has he commanded? "To love one another as I have loved you."

This is the greatest love, or the most perfect that we are capable of exercising. James calls it the royal law, and well he may; for can any one fill this law except he love God with all the heart? "God is love, and he that dwelleth in love, dwelleth in God, and God in him." And herein is love made perfect. To love God with all the heart, only fits us for loving our fellow men. We cannot do the will of God without acting upon this principle. How can we do good to our fellow men without we love them? Love is the opposite of hatred. Love bears no ill will, but good; hatred does. And if we love God, we will love to do his will; we will seek to know what his will is; we will love to labor for him, love to do good to all men as we have opportunity. We will love our enemies, and do them good, and not evil. Love bears no ill will, even to our enemies. Says Christ, "I say unto you love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you; that ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven: for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust." Our lesson here is, to do good to all, just as our common Father does; and in this we find no selfishness; this is the perfect law of love. Hear John: "If we love not our brother whom we have seen, how can we love God whom we have not seen." He that hateth his brother is a murderer; and ye know that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him."

How can sectarianism, and party walls and selfish interests stand by the side of these scriptures. What! can we love God and hate our brother for whom Christ died? If he does not see as we see, and believe just as we believe, we need not smite him: Christ died for him as well as for us; and if we have more light than he, then we should love the more, and smite the less. We should pray and work the harder for his salvation.

There are so many, to-day, who profess to love God, yet seem not to love many of his people. They may love those who belong to their church, but, apparently, only those. We must subscribe to their creed in order to be worthy of a place of worship with them. We cannot pray and sing together and talk of God's love, and of the hope of eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord; simply because we do not all see just alike! We may all believe in God, and in Christ, and in the merits of his blood, in his power to save, in his willingness to forgive sins; we may all believe in prayer in song, in praise, and in true devotion; but cannot bow the knee together! O shame on such selfishness! Cruel sectarianism. Would you shut the kingdom of heaven against your brother, and your sister, and call for heaven's vengeance upon them? Is it love for God our common Father that doeth all this? It cannot be, for "God is love, and he that dwelleth in God dwelleth in love."

Brother and sister "of the common salvation," let me entreat of you, get out of this at once, lest God smite thee with a withering, blighting curse: "God is not mocked, for whatsoever we sow that shall we also reap." There is one God and Father of all; and there is one Saviour and but one; we are all brought nigh and made one by the blood of the same Jesus, if we are his at all; and adopted into the same family, and by the same spirit we cry "Abba Father."

We are owned of God, because we love him and keep his commandments; and love one another as he has loved us. "Every one that loveth is begotten of God, and knoweth God. He that loveth not knoweth not God." "If we say we have fellowship with Him, and walk in darkness, we lie and do not the truth, but if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." "He that saith he is in the light and hateth his brother, is in darkness even until now." "He that loveth not his brother abideth in death." How positive these scriptures are upon this point; and can we hope for eternal life without obeying Jesus and his law? We through the law and power of love become the sons of God; and "we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is." Amen.

Advent Christian Times.

WM. SHELDON, - EDITOR.

All matter for publication in THE TIMES, whether articles, letters, obituaries, or appointments, should be directed to

WM. SHELDON,
wick Block, Chicago, Ill.

*₊*Give your Name, Postoffice, County and State every time you write.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, November 11, 1873.

WE hope to attend the quarterly meeting in the Southern Wis., district, Nov. 14, at Belleville.

"GETTING READY."—Who wrote this article? It comes to us with no name. Names must be given to the Editor in all cases, even if not given to the public.

BOTH the Editor and the foreman were absent at the proof-reading of a part of the last week's paper, and by some accident a portion of the editorial went into the paper with several serious mistakes, greatly injuring the sense of the articles.

ELD. J. W. ELLIOT of Missouri writes us that truth is prospering in his region. He recently organized a church of eighteen members, all heads of families, and they are letting their light shine. We are requested to visit that field, but cannot say how that will be at present.

A RECENT mail brought us a donation of $1 00 from Eld. P. W. Hough and wife, for Eld. Geo. Thomson, Arena, Wis., which we have forwarded to him. If others can more easily send to us than direct to him, they may do so; but by all means let Br. Thomson be remembered in your donations.

IF you wish to make a present of a book to a clergyman, on the question of Life and Death, get Constable's work on the "Nature and Duration of Future Punishment." It is a masterly work, and will commend itself to men of learning and of intellect. Price, $1.00; postage 16 cents. For sale at this office.

WE are happy to learn that Br. I. C. Wellcome's forthcoming work, (a History of the Advent movement,) is being liberally subscribed for, as we believe the ability, and extensive acquaintance of Eld. Wellcome with our history as a people, will enable him to do the subject justice. It is not too late to add to his subscription list by addressing him at Yarmouth, Me. He thinks of presenting a likeness of several of the old pioneers in the movement, which will please many readers.

CORRECTION.—In TIMES for Oct. 28th, article "Theological death," for "Me to die again," read "For me to die is gain." For "Wait for this Son," read "Wait for His Son." Article "Beast and his Mark," for "the horned beast," read "the two horned beast."

In TIMES for Nov. 4th, article "Questions on Prophecy," for "Gentle denominations," read Gentile dominations. For "renovate their inhabitants," read, "renovate their inheritance." The 5th paragraph in same article should read, "The correct rendering of the term translated days in Dan. 12, is years," etc.

In article on "Christ's Resurrection," instead of, "It always forced the passover," read "always preceded the passover."

A CORRESPONDENT of the Church Advocate says:

"The question often arises, 'If Christians in heaven know all that is transpiring upon earth, suppose a sainted mother sees a son or daughter here going in the ways of ruin, how can she be happy?' This is a mystery which God has not yet explained to us."

It is doubtless easier to pronounce the difficulty a "mystery" than to furnish a solution. If it were really true that heaven is peopled with disembodied Christians, it would not be true that they were in a worse dilemma than the sinners mentioned by Paul,—"without natural affections." But the truth is, dead Christians are really dead, and will remain void of life and knowledge till the resurrection.

Is David's Tabernacle to be Re-built?

Many honest but mistaken friends, misled by incorrect expositors, have arrived at the conclusion that David's tabernacle must be rebuilt, "as in the days of old," after the Lord returns from heaven; and that after this epoch, men are to "seek after the Lord," and find pardon. This view has been unfairly deduced from the language of James, recorded in Acts 15: 13-17. The starting point of this error lies in the wrong application of James' quotation of prophecy to Christ: "After this I will return," &c., thus making James tell what should transpire in the building of David's tabernacle and the call of the Gentiles, after Christ's return from heaven. This is a perverted starting point, for no reference is made to Christ's return from heaven, but simply to the Lord's return to them in spirit after he had deserted them for their sins: he promised to return to them after their dispersion, in the same sense in which he had deserted them, and in no other sense; and after thus returning to them, he would gather them from their captivity, rebuild the Davidic tabernacle of worship, that the residue of men might seek after the Lord, and also that in due time the door might be thrown open to the Gentiles—not a second time, but the first and only time recognized in the divine plan. Certainly the prophets from whom James quoted would not overleap one thousand eight hundred years of mercy to the Gentiles unnoticed, to mention a later call, even if there were to be a second call; and James, just at the commencement of the first great call, would not pass it in silence to depict a future call. Only a wrong theory demands any such conclusion. Let us calmly look at the language of James, in the light of the facts that called it forth, and at the prophecy quoted by him, remembering for what purpose he quoted it.

Reference is here made to the call of the Gentiles, but not to their call subsequent to the judgment and "reward" of "EVERY MAN" (Matt. 16:27; Rev. 22: 11), for a call after "every man" has had his "reward" assigned him, would make that assignment useless, or make the call a mere mockery.

Let it be understood that "the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father, with his angels; and then he shall REWARD every man according to his work," and it will readily be seen that every attempt to locate a call of mercy after the coming of the divine Judge, is a repudiation of the judgment; for this judgment involves "every man," and assigns "reward" to "every man." No matter whether the work is accomplished in a shorter or longer time, it begins when the Lord comes, and mercy ends where judgment begins.

Besides this, the origin of James' statement about the predicted call of the Gentiles, was as follows: There had been a reformation among the Gentiles, and converts had been gathered, and this was something new to the Jewish disciples; so a meeting was held to consider the question, and after "much disputing, Peter rose up and said unto them, Ye know how that a good while ago God made choice among us, that the Gentiles by my mouth should hear the word of the gospel, and believe" (v. 7). Then Paul and Barnabas arose and related "what miracles and wonders God had wrought among the Gentiles by them." (v. 12). Then James stood up to confirm the position taken by Simon Peter, Paul, and Barnabas, and begins his speech by referring to what Peter had just said: "Simeon [or Simon Peter] hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for his name. And to this agree the words of the prophets [that is, the words of the prophets agree with Peters' statement about the call of the Gentiles which commenced under him, and was still going on; and then quotes a sample of what the prophets have said relating to this same call of the Gentiles]; as it is written, After this [scattering of Israel] I will return [having departed from them at their dispersion], and will build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down; and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up; that the residue of men might seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles, upon whom my name is called.... Wherefore [or, for which reason] my sentence is, that we trouble not them which from among the Gentiles are turned to God." (Acts 15: 14-19).

James quotes this prophecy for the simple purpose of establishing the fact that the call of the Gentiles, then under discussion, and then taking place, was predicted, and that the prediction and Simon Peter's statement were in agreement. In order to do this, he commenced with the prediction of God's return to abandoned Israel, to build again the tabernacle of David, which had been thrown down by Nebuchadnezzar. This tabernacle was set up at the return from Babylonian captivity. The priesthood could then officiate till the antitypical priesthood should be inaugurated, when the Gentiles should call on the Lord. And this last feature of the prophecy was then being fulfilled—and that, too, after the tabernacle of David had been "set up," for no reference is here made to the kingly tabernacle of David (the ouhell), but to the tabernacle of worship (the sookkoh), the same tabernacle referred to by Jeremiah at Jerusalem's overthrow: "He hath violently taken away his tabernacle"—the tabernacle of worship—called "the tabernacle of David," because David pitched the tabernacle for the ark in Jerusalem. "And they brought in the ark of the Lord, and set it in the midst of the tabernacle which David had pitched for it" (2 Sam. 6:17); and it remained till the completion of the temple which David planned for it, which was completed by Solomon, and then it was transferred to the temple, being still recognized as the tabernacle of David till overthrown by king Nebuchadnezzar.

Let it be remembered (1) that this tabernacle of worship was "set up" again after the return from Babylon, thus fulfilling that part of the prophecy; and (2) this tabernacle of worship called "the tabernacle [sookkoh] of David," is not identical with David's kingly palace, for when that is brought to view, another word is used to distinguish it from the sookkoh which is never applied to a kingly palace. The kingly tabernacle which contained David's throne is thus mentioned: "And in mercy shall the throne be established; and he shall sit upon it in truth in the tabernacle [ouhell] of David." This tabernacle contained the throne of David, but the tabernacle referred to in the prophecy quoted by James never contained David's throne; hence to have this tabernacle of worship "set up," does not involve the restoration of David's throne, as some incorrectly suppose. It was "set up" as already shown; and subsequent to this came the call of the Gentiles referred to by James when quoting this prophecy. James was not arguing about events in a future age, when he cited this prophecy to support the position which he was advocating; but he was simply talking about the reformation then going on among the Gentiles, as related by Peter, Barnabas, and Paul; and James simply insists that this prediction was in agreement therewith. "To this agree," etc. Something not to be fulfilled for near two thousand years to come could not "agree" with something then transpiring—for only the fulfilment can "agree" with the prediction, and anything that does "agree" with the prediction is the fulfillment; besides, it would be entirely unreasonable to suppose that the prophet would blindly pass over the great gospel call to the Gentiles in our age, and so clearly see their call in another age. It may be well to read the prophecy referred to by James, with its connection, and notice several points in the prediction.

"Behold the eyes of the Lord God are upon the sinful kingdom, and I will destroy it from off the face of the earth; saving that I will not utterly destroy the house of Jacob, saith the Lord. For, lo, I will command, and I will sift the house of Israel among all nations, like as corn is sifted in a sieve, yet shall not the least grain fall upon the earth........ In that day [after the dispersion of Israel] will I raise up the tabernacle of David that is fallen, and close up the breaches thereof; and I will raise up his ruins, and I will build it as in the days of old; that they may possess the remnant of Edom, and of all the heathen, which are called by my name [margin—"upon whom my name is called"], saith the Lord that doeth this. Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that the plowman shall overtake the reaper, and the treader of grapes him that soweth seed; and the mountains shall drop sweet wine, and all the hills shall melt. And I will bring again the captivity of my people Israel, and they shall build the waste cities, and inhabit them; and they shall plant vineyards and drink the wine thereof; they shall also make gardens, and eat the fruit of them and I will plant them upon their land, and they shall no more be pulled up out of their land which I have given them, saith the Lord thy God." (Amos 9:8–15.)

1. This scattering took place, and the "kingdom" was obliterated to be "no more till he come whose right it is;" but the house of Jacob was left in existence; they have not since been scattered as a "kingdom" but as a colony, simply.

2. "In that day" of the dispersion of the "kingdom," and not in the day of a subsequent dispersion of a colony, the "tabernacle of David"—"the sookkoh of David"—which never contained David's throne, but was simply a tabernacle of worship, was to be raised up; and it was raised up at the right time to fulfill the prophecy; and then through this typical arrangement men could seek the Lord, till this arrangement was superseded by the antitype. Israel's captivity was to end, and they were to return to their land, rebuild their cities, and enjoy temporal prosperity, and "no more be pulled up out of the land;" that is during their dispensation, for their claim went no further; and language equally as strong is often applied to the obsolete appendages of that ceremonial age, as a "perpetual covenant," which was succeeded by the new covenant. And truly they were "no more pulled up out of their land" during the Mosaic age. To put an unlimited construction on this language would be a repudiation of the burning day, for they could not live through the conflagration of the earth; and it would also cheat the saints out of the "new earth," for that is not due till after "the elements shall melt with fervent heat."

3. After this restoration of the tabernacle worship, "all the heathen" were to have a chance to call upon the Lord and be saved. The class called "heathen" in the Old Testament are styled Gentiles in the New Testament. And when the Gentiles began to call upon the Lord, James affirmed that it was in agreement with this prediction, or that the prophecy, so far as this prediction was concerned, was then being realized. The advantage often taken of James' wording—"After this I will return"—to make it appear that it must be fulfilled after the return of Christ from heaven, is simply a rank perversion, for this is not the language of James, but his version of the prophet's language; and the prophet had nothing to say about Christ's return, or Christ's building again the tabernacle of worship, but reference is made to what the Lord Jehovah would do—"I will sift the house of Israel....In that day will I [the same I] raise up the tabernacle of David." Christ is not the personage to return, or to do this work. James recognized the fact that the Lord had "departed" from Israel, as he did anciently from king Saul, and that in the same sense he returned to bless them with the restoration of the tabernacle of worship fulfilled before his day, and saw then fulfilling the promise to the Gentiles.

Apparitions.

While ordinarily the advocates of error are deficient in proof, they sometimes adduce too much proof, regardless of the old adage: "That which proves too much, proves nothing." This is often the case in alleged apparitions of disembodied men. As a sample, we clip the following from the Day's Doings:

A PHANTOM TRAIN.

A writer in the Albany Evening Times relates a conversation with a superstitious night watchman on the Central Railroad. Said the watchman:

"I believe in spirits and ghosts. I know such things exist. If you will come up in April I will convince you." He then told of the phantom train that every year comes up the road with the body of Abraham Lincoln. Regularly in the month of April, about midnight, the air on the track becomes very keen and cutting. On either side it is warm and still. Every watchman when he feels this air, steps off the track and sits down to watch. Soon after, the pilot engine, with long black streamers, and a band, with black instruments, playing dirges, and grinning skeletons sitting all about, will pass up noiselessly, and the very air grows black. If it is moonlight, clouds always come over the moon, and the music seems to linger, as if frozen with horror. A few moments after, and the phantom train glides by. Flags and streamers hang about. The track ahead seems covered with black carpet, and the wheels are draped with the same. The coffin of the murdered Lincoln is seen lying on the center of a car, and all about it, in the air, and on the train behind, are vast numbers of blue coated men, some with coffins on their backs, others leaning upon them. It seems then that all the vast armies of men who died during the war, are escorting the phantom train of the President. The wind, if blowing, dies away at once, and over all the air a solemn hush, almost stifling, prevails. If a train were passing, its noise would be drowned in the silence, and the phantom train would rise over it. Clocks and watches always stop, and when looked at are found to be from five to eight minutes behind. Everywhere on the road, about the 20th of April, the time of watches and trains is found suddenly behind. This, said the leading watchman, was from the passage of the phantom train.

This proves the existence of spirit cars, flags, coffins and coats, if it proves anything. And if these are seen only by the eyes of imagination, so with the deceased ones.

"The Disembodied State."

After about six months' delay, over which the author has had no control, this little work is this week ready for circulation. Our Southern friends will receive their first installment immediately. Others will be sent at a later date from time to time. Also those who have ordered from other quarters will be supplied.

As some may wish to know how much has been sent in to help send this work South, we answer, not a penny. We bear the burden and share the satisfaction all alone in this matter, and there will be no getting rich by this enterprise, except in faith that the seed own will spring up. All Southern or- lers for these tracts free must be sent o Brodhead, Wis., and not to Chicago.

The work was put into the Agent's ands months ago, with a payment of wenty dollars at the time, to be re- unded in tracts to send South, with the nderstanding the work should be rinted in a few days; but a scarcity f funds, and help, with other causes, as kept it lingering along till now, uch to our shame, having so often romised the work at a much earlier ate. To those who have received uch promises, these words of expla- ation are due.

Those sent South, free, are sent at ne Editor's expense, and not at the xpense of the Society. Those that re sold at the office are the property f the Society, and not of the Editor.

Saints Translated Secretly.

The position sometimes taken that e saints are to be secretly translated, aving the world ignorant of the event ll a long time after the transaction, is t a tenable position, from the fact e living saints are not to be transla- d till the dead saints are resurrected "the dead in Christ shall rise first" -and they are not to be resurrected ll the sounding of the trump of God, hich will be as audible as the voice God, or the trump of God, on ount Sinai, of which Paul says: Whose voice then shook the earth; t now he hath promised, saying, et once more I will shake not the rth only, but also heaven," (Heb. 12:) and at the 19th verse of the same apter, this voice is called "the sound a trumpet." So the same trumpet at then literally "shook the earth" is sound again in connection with the surrection, and will then shake both aven and earth: and such an event this would give the greatest pub- ity to the resurrection and translation the saints, instead of making the nslation a secret.

In spite of all attempts to obviate jection, these facts are evident, (1) t the living saints are not to be caught before the resurrection saints, but ogether with them;" (2) the resurrec- n will not occur till the trump shall und; and (3) when the trump shall und, it will as literally shake the th as it previously shook Sinai, and s notification will forestall all se- cy. "One shall be taken and the er left"—taken to meet the Lord, ng with the risen saints. May we be ready for this event so soon to be nessed.

Being Saved Physically.

The contemplation of a personal en- nce into the Paradise of God, instead entering as a phantom, is comfort- ; and the thought of meeting our nds themselves there, instead of ir ghosts which we have never seen, which we would be frightened to —the thought of seeing as we are , and knowing as we are known— g resurrected personalities, and ting resurrected personalities—is n to the thought which Jesus gave rance to after he emerged from the dark shades of death: "It is I my ; handle me and see" This same ght exhilirated the mind of Job, e looked down the stream of time, the ushering in of the latter day, n he expected to see his Redeemer, ling him to exclaim: "Whom I l see for myself, and mine eyes shall old." Paul could groan for "the mption of the body"—an event due till the resurrection—and could about its being "fashioned like un- hrist's glorious body." The salva- proposed in the Bible, does not template a disembodied future, but ture for the body itself, after its re- e from death: "Thy dead men shall ; together with my dead body shall arise." There is a future for the himself, and not for his shade.

Looking for Jesus.

It is no new thing to be looking for Jesus, though in this age of fables it has become unpopular. It was the delight of early Christians to be "waiting for God's Son from heaven, whom he raised from the dead," or to be "looking for that blessed hope, and and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ." Now this event is extensively lost sight of, or made to symbolize the capture of Jerusalem by the Romans. As well might we spiritualize Jesus himself, and reduce him to a mere symbol, as to spiritualize his coming. Rev. J. H. Brookes, D. D., thus refers to this theme:

> Everywhere in the New Testament does the Holy Spirit hold forth that blessed hope to the longing contemplation of Christians, but they have suffered their attention to be called away by thinking of the capture of an ancient city, and by looking down into the gloomy grave. Three times in the last chapter of the Bible does our Lord repeat the inspiring assurance, "Behold I come quickly," and then the Spirit and the bride uttered the joyful response "come;" but now, alas, the bride has ceased to expect him. Suppose a dear friend whose absence has left an "aching void" in your heart should write to inform you that he would come again to satisfy your desires with his presence, but should not state in his letter when he would return. You would begin to expect him as soon as the letter was received, and you would look for him day after day, and week after week, and month after month until his arrival. If you believed he spoke the truth, and if you really longed to see him again, surely you would not dismiss his cheering promise from your mind, but you would continue to wait, and watch, while you would realize in your own experience the meaning of the proverb, "hope deferred maketh the hear sick." Even so, if our conversation is in heaven, nothing will satisfy us but the personal presence of Jesus, whom, not having seen, we love, and we will daily, and with ever increasing yearning, look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ."

"Hard Times."

That sounds natural. Ministers must be deprived of the necessaries of life, because of hard times. The publishing interest must be crippled because of hard times. But hard times cannot abrogate or diminish that filthy practice of eating and burning tobacco, at a cost that might fill the Lord's treasury to overflowing.

"Tobacco is an Indian weed—
It scen s your clothes—
And makes a chimney of your nose."

Yet this filthy self-indulgence, in spite of hard times, stands first in its claims to money, and if it does not need it all, God's claims may come in as a secondary consideration. Do not let hard times suppress or subordinate religious interests.

Ancient Baptism.

That sprinkling was not the accepted mode of baptism is evident from the apocryphal book of Paul and Thecla, written in the second century, in which it is asserted that in the absence of an opportunity to be baptized by a minister, Thecla "threw herself into the water," while her enemies supposed that the fish would devour her. The point is this: If this had not been the mode practiced, it would have been used as an argument against the genuineness of the book; but this objection was never brought against it, and many accepted it as genuine. If the book had really introduced a new mode of baptism, it would have led to a discussion of that topic before the book could have been received by any.

Patience.

Patience is one of the cardinal principles of true Christianity—one of the fruits of the Spirit; and without this important principle we are constantly being overcome, instead of proving ourselves overcomers. Bishop Horne has well said:

"Patience is the guardian of faith, the preserver of peace, the cherisher of love, the teacher of humility. Patience governs the flesh, strengthens the spirits, sweetens the temper, stifles anger, extinguishes envy, subdues pride; she bridles the tongue, refrains the hand, tramples upon temptation, endures persecution, consummates martyrdom. Patience produces unity in the church, loyalty in the State, harmony in the families and societies; she comforts the poor, and moderates the rich; she makes us humble in prosperity, cheerful in adversity, unmoved by calumny and reproach; she teaches us to forgive those who have injured us; she delights the faithful, and invites the unbelieving; she adorns the woman, and approves the man; is loved in a child, praised in a young man, admired in an old man; she is beautiful in either sex, and every age."

The Time Question.

Dear Brother Sheldon: I enclose herein, "Questions," and would deem it a favor if you would reply, through the Times, at your earliest convenience.

In your work "Adventism," you state in substance, that there are two stages in the coming of the Lord, the first, in which he comes for his saints; the second, when he comes with them. Also, that the 1335 years of Dan. 12, terminate at the first stage, and the 2300 days of Dan. 8, terminate at the latter stage; and that the weight of evidence is in favor of the 1335 years terminating in A. D. 1873 and the 2300 years in A. D. 1875.

Have you changed your views in regard to the termination of these periods? If so, from what reasons.

1. Are there any grounds for doubting that the Papacy is the abomination of desolation of Dan. 12 : 11? If so, what are they?

2. What event occurred in the history of the Papacy in A. D. 538, which Adventists claim as the setting up of the abomination of desolation?

3. Did any event occur in the history of the Papacy later than A. D. 538, that would be considered as the setting up of that power?

Theodore S. Thomasson.

We still believe there are two stages in the coming of Christ—that he first comes into the atmospheric heaven and gathers the living and resurrected saints to meet him in the air, and that after the indignation passes, he will come to earth with all his saints; and we also still deem it probable that the 1335 days end at the first stage, and the 2300 at the second. While for certain reasons, which we may present in due time, we do not regard the '73 argument as strong as we once did, we are far from saying there is no strength to it. We step out only so far as our faith leads us. Time will soon test this point, and we think the strongest points in the argument are already tested, so far as '73 is concerned, but not so with the chain that reaches to '75.

With reference to the three questions asked, we remark:

1. While many claim grounds for doubting that "abomination that maketh desolate" is a consolidation of the ecclesiastical and civil elements of Papacy, we see no force to the claim.

2. In 538 the Arian Ostrogoths, who had previously held Rome, were subordinated, at least in part, giving the Roman Bishop (now called Pope) a chance to exercise his power; but it is possible that the culmination of this work was some months later, as the Ostragoths made a formidable opposition subsequently, and the execution of the bishop's authority might have been correspondingly deferred. So when we reach 1798, the culmination of the crippling of the Papacy and the inaugurating of the principle of toleration, was later than the proclamation of it.

3. We see no event later than the one already alluded to that looks as much like the setting up work as from 538 to 540. It was not an instantaneous work, but progressive. In setting up a tower, the frame may be erected to-day, and the completion of the work may be to-morrow. If we are to count a given number of days from the setting up of the tower, the question might arise whether to begin the count with the erection of the frame, or with the completion of the whole. So in 1798 the taking down began, but it was not momentary. The historic facts bearing on this point we have not time at present to give in detail, While on one hand we dislike dogmatism in this matter, on the other hand we repudiate the tendency to apathy and extreme indefiniteness.

Our Quarterly Meetings.

J. RIDLEY.

I desire to say a few words through the Times to you, dear brethren, and sisters, about our "quarterly meetings."

I fear that in to many cases they are not what they ought to be. The object in having such meetings is to help forward the cause of the Redeemer by getting the brethren and sisters together from the different churches, and with the cooperation of the preachers, to hold a meeting of days, and thus by our united efforts (1) arouse the people, in the place where the meeting may be held, to a realization of the importance of being ready to meet the Lord; (2) by hearing the reports of our brethren, we be strengthened and encouraged ourselves to be diligent in the Master's service; and (3) to consult with each other as to the course to pursue in order that we may accomplish the most good in the future.

Now if when a quarterly meeting is called, the ministers from the surrounding country, and from the Q. M. District especially, will all be there, and if the officers of the different churches, together with a full number of delegates, will be there, and then if all of the remaining members of the churches that possibly can will go and take as many of their friends as they can persuade to go with them, and lastly if ministers, officers, delegates and members will all be there at the very commencement of the meeting to labor for the salvation of the perishing, the meeting will be productive of good. And although there may be much sacrifice and labor attending such meetings, yet it "will pay," and the Lord will be pleased with it, and the more we have of them the stronger we shall become.

But on the other hand, if there is only one or two ministers present, and the church officers have let the cares of this world keep them at home, and the churches are not represented by delegates, and the members have not interest enough to get there at all, or not before the last day of the meeting, there will be but little or no good accomplished. The Lord does not delight in such meetings. They will not "pay" and the less we have of them the better.

Shall we give up our quarterly meetings altogether, or shall we rally and make them a power for good? God forbid that we should have a name to live while we are dead.

Our last quarterly meeting called to meet near Greeley was, it seemed to me, almost a failure, and we (the few that were there) adjourned to meet with the church at Manchester Nov. 28.

Now brethren, one and all, ministers and lay members let us awake to the importance of sustaining these meetings. Let us show the world that we are alive. But a little time remains for us to work; let us improve it. Do not wait until the meeting is half through before you get there, (thousands of meetings have been killed on that account) but come in time to be at the first meeting.

It takes more power to start a heavy load than it does to keep it going after it is started. Come and help start it. Amen.

Miscellaneous.

AT HOME.

—The Epizootic has reappeared at Fenton.

—General Longstreet is organizing a fillibustering expedition to Cuba.

—General John E. Smith is on his way to Washington with seventeen chiefs and braves of the Arrapahoe and Cheyenne tribes.

—The New York Herald estimates that there are now 40 000 people in that city compulsorily idle—people who would be glad to work and earn food, clothing, coals, and shelter.

—The public debt statement for October shows an increase of $3,0[illegible],000, with the following balances in the Treasury: Coin, $83,313,381; Currency, $4,812,155; Coin certificates, $27,369,890; Legal tender deposits, $8,875,000; outstanding legal tenders, $360,959,2[illegible]6.

—The St Louis rumor is repeated that a scheme is on foot to conquer and annex the Northern States of Mexico to the United States by forming into an army the laborers on Tom Scott's Texas Pacific Railway, after they are discharged from the completion of that work.

—The army estimates for the fiscal year of 1874-75 amount to $36,320,000. This is an increase of $13,646,000 over the estimates submitted last year. Of this increase $1,440,000 is for arming coast fortifications. The estimates of the Bureau of Engineers are $30,450,000 against $16,639,000 last year.

—From every manufacturing town throughout the Eastern and Middle States comes the announcement either of a temporary suspension of operations, or, as is more frequently the case, a reduction of wages and employes. There is scarcely a single exception to the general rule.

—The third trial of Stokes for the murder, nearly two years ago, of Fisk, resulted in a verdict of manslaughter in the third degree, and a sentence of four years hard labor at Sing-Sing. Much disappointment is occasioned by this verdict. Stokes and his friends expected acquittal. The friends of law and order are disappointed that the penalty was so light.

—It appears that the Mennonites are not the only accessions this country is to receive from Russia; but are to be supplemented by Russian members of the Reformed church, whose doctrinal symbol is the Heidelberg Catechism. Like the Mennonites, they are of German stock, and come to us for the enjoyment of greater religious freedom. A colony of 613 of these German Russians arrived recently at New York. They were under the leadership of Mr. Grosshaus, who is described as a "venerable, long-bearded patriarch." A company of these people lately arrived. They have purchased land near Omaha, where they propose to settle.

—Two of the iron works in South St. Louis have stopped, throwing about 300 men out of employment. The Vulcan Iron Works have stopped two of their three furnaces, closed their rail-mill, and discharged about 400 men. Other works have also stopped some of their furnaces, or discharged a part of their employes, and all have reduced their wages 20 per cent. Many manufacturing establishments in the city have materially reduced their working force, but have not cut down the wages.

—A dispatch from Toronto, Can., Nov. 6, says: The steamer Bavarian, bound for this port from Montreal, took fire last night when opposite Oshawa, and was a mass of flames in an instant. The crew only succeeded in lowering two boats, both of which reached land in safety. They contained twenty-two persons in all. There were fourteen persons on board of the steamer when the boats left her, and they were, without doubt, lost. Among those left on board were the chief engineer, the captain, the steward, and three lady passengers.

ABROAD.

—It is announced from Bayonne that General Loma, the Republican commander, was defeated by the Carlists in an engagement on Sunday last.

—Reports received by the Spanish Government represent that demoralization and insubordination among the insurgents are culminating.

—Late Paris dispatches hold out the hope that an agreement satisfactory to all political parties, except, perhaps, the two extremes, will be effected.

—The Bosnian difficulty between Turkey and Austria has been arranged. Turkey has removed the offending functionaries and pardoned the political refugees.

—There are of Old Catholic congregations regularly organized in Germany, 23 in Prussia, 33 in Bavaria, and 27 in Baden, with over 50,000 members, and three times as many more devoted and zealous adherents scattered throughout the empire

—Madrid dispatches report that the Spanish Government has advices from Mavilla of the capture, by a Spanish war steamer, in those waters, of two German merchantmen, having on board as a part of their cargo 300 rifles, intended to be sold to Malay pirates. The news has created an excited feeling in government circles at Madrid.

—The Orleans Princes have united in a formal declaration that they will not accept the Lieutenancy of the Kingdom, and this they do to avoid all appearance of competing with Count de Chambord. All the factions of the Right have consequently agreed to move the prolongation of President MacMahon's powers. There is a difference of opinion as to the length of time. Some favor making MacMahon President for life, and others for extending his term six or ten years. All are determined to continue the existence of the present Assembly, and a motion will probably be introduced postponing its dissolution three years.

Correspondence.

Quarterly Meeting Report.

This meeting was held with the church at Pine River, Richland county, Wis., in the Southwestern division, Oct. 11 and 12. The attendance was good, I may say large, and very attentive to the word preached. Hope some seed fell on good ground. Five ministers present. Reports good, especially from the young brothers. Fletcher Ghormley is exerting an excellent influence. Seems to have a mind to work, choosing the hedges and highways as most desirable. Such young men should be encouraged, and at the same time made to understand that when they enter camp that it is not to seek pleasure or profit, but to "endure hardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ," (2 Tim. 2: 3) or in common parlance, to "eat hard tack," and camp out doors, or fare any way so Christ might be magnified, "Whether by life or death." This mode of living and laboring would be more conducive of health and cheerfulness of mind than twenty car loads of Vinegar Bitters or other panaceas got at the drug shops.

The church is steadfast; no difficulty in work when they are present, but some failures in not attending.

Two have received a letter of good standing to other churches; one member has been removed.

The report of the Sunday School Superintendent shows that he is hard at work in this field, and is prospering. P. W. Hough.

Third Session of the Advent Christian Conference, Ark.

Conference met at Walnut Grove chapel, Ashley Township, Sept. 12, 13, 1873. Eld. Samuel Rosebraugh in the chair. Eld. J. P. Williams was chosen Secretary pro tem.

Delegates from Walnut Grove church, W. M. Bonham and M. J. Rosebraugh.

Blue Mountain church—Jacob Whitesel.

Elds. J. W. Crosby and W. H. Lenox, ministers from the Baptist church, were received.

Brn. John McD. Mitchell, of Pleasant Plains church, and J. B. Perkins, of Walnut Grove church, were received as licentiates to preach the gospel of the kingdom.

The Advent churches in Pleasant Plains and Walnut Grove, White county, were received with their delegates, J. McD. Mitchell, Daniel Bradon, A. K. Lewis and L. Hilger.

The following officers were elected:

S. Rosebraugh, President.

Geo. W. Crosby, Vice President.

J. B. Perkins, Secretary.

Jacob Whitesel, Treasurer.

It was voted that when the Conference adjourn that it meet with the Pleasant Plains church, Friday, Sept. 26, and continue over the Sabbath.

Adjourned.

Conference met at Pleasant Plains as per adjournment, Sept. 26, at 11 a. m., Dr. G. W. Crosby, Vice President, in the chair.

The President appointed a business committee, and the conference adjourned to the call of the chair.

Met at 3 p. m. Eld. S. Rosebraugh called for report of business committee, which was received and committee discharged.

The President gave the following address:

Brethren of the Conference: It may be proper at this time to say something in reference to the origin and progress of the Advent cause in Arkansas. The first that we heard was by Dr. Fletcher, of Chambersburg, Ohio, in Sycamore, Izard county, in 1866-7. The Doctor, being an Advent preacher, was on a visit to his relatives, and on business also. Spoke freely of his faith among the people, who became interested and invited him to hold meetings with them, and give the people a more perfect understanding of the subject, which he did. The result was good. Quite a number were converted from the world and many professors embraced the doctrine. But as he did not organize, the results of his labors were scattered—only a few isolated ones remained.

Among the additions were Eld. Wm. H. Lenox and Dr. G. W. Crosby, from the Baptists. Both influential men, and thoroughly Advent in heart as well as theory. Their all was laid upon the altar. With these we also have several new churches added to our body.

Brethren, these things give me good cheer. Allow me to say a word respecting myself. I am from North Carolina. There I heard of this doctrine as much as twenty-five years ago. I had struggled for the light all these years, and you may well believe that I was overjoyed to hear the truth plainly and freely spoken on the coming of Christ and the blessed hope.

We meet to-day under encouraging circumstances, and we may indeed thank God and take courage. Now for work. What we need most to carry forward our work, is a State Evangelist, and I would recommend the appointment of one or more brothers to this work, to proclaim the gospel of the kingdom, and organize churches where doors are open. But at the same time let us all work with our might for the time is short, and I will add, give as well as work. I shall work all I can and give all I can, and will pledge at least fifty dollars to carry on this work this year. Let us work! give! watch! and be ready.

Resolved, That the Conference appoint two Evangelists to proclaim the gospel of the kingdom within its bounds the coming year.

Resolved, That Dr. G. W. Crosby and Wm. H. Lenox be appointed Evangelists for the coming conference year.

Resolved, That Br. F. M. Meacham be appointed collector for conference funds.

Resolved, That the annual conference be held with the church at Pleasant Plains, the Friday before the fourth Sabbath, in October, 1874.

The following persons pledge to give the sum affixed to their names during the conference year:

S. Rosebraugh, $50 00; A. K. Lewis, 50.00; J. E. Grisham, 50.00; F. M. Meacham, 25.00; J. McD. Mitchell, 10.00; James Campbell, 5.00; J. Bruise, 10 00; J. M. Ellis, 10 00; J. P. Williams, 15 00; A. W. Bruise, 5.00; A. W. McCallay, 25.00.

A list of names of the ordained and licensed ministers of the A. C. Conference of Arkansas:

Ordained ministers—S. Rosebraugh, W. H. Lenox, G. W. Crosby, J. C. Overstreet, J. P. Williams, J. B Brown.

Licentiates—J. McD. Mitchell, J. B. Perkins.

The sessions of the conference were harmonious, and the brethren were filled with good cheer, in view of the prospect of spreading the truth, and preparing a people for the coming of Christ.

S. Rosebraugh, President.

J. B. Perkins, Secretary.

Conference Report.

The eighth quarterly meeting of the De Kalb district was held with the church at Afton Center, Oct. 2.

Preachers present—N. W. Spencer, D. S. Clark, E. H. Burington, L. H. Davis, Br. Tyler, Alice Sarvis and H. G McCulloch.

We had a pleasant and profitable meeting with those of like precious faith, and the blessing of the Lord rested upon us. Preaching good, prayer and conference meeting good, and all felt it was good to be there.

At a business meeting of the conference all expressed a determination to go forward in the work of the Lord until released by death or the coming of the Master.

At the conclusion it was voted to hold our next meeting in DeKalb the first moon in January, of which due notice will be given.

H. G. McCulloch, Secretary.

Iowa Quarterly Conference.

The first Q. M. met as per appointment at the Odell S. H., Oct. 31, and adjourned to Manchester, to commence Friday eve., Nov. 28, and hold over the Sabbath.

I hope, dear brethren and sisters, that you will see to it that this Q. M. be well represented, either by delegates or by letter. Every church should, if possible, send its full quota of delegates, and if this be impossible, let us hear of your prosperity and determinations by letter. And brethren, you should if need be, make a sacrifice to attend these meetings. God help us all to wake up. The Judge standeth at the door. And let not our ministers be slack about this matter. We want your help and influence in these meetings.

Martha J. Janes, Secretary.

From Dr. John Smith, Joliet, Ill.

Br. Sheldon: It is some time since you heard from Joliet. I thought I would pen a few lines for the Times. A few days ago a friend of mine handed to me a copy of the Chicago Evening Journal of Sept. 29, in which he pointed out to me a short abstract of a sermon preached by Mr. Kitteridge, the subject being "Recognition of friends in heaven," preached in consequence of an unusual number of deaths in his congregation during the past summer. His text was, "I shall go to him," and proof text, "This day thou shalt be with me in paradise." He said, Paul wrote that he longed to "depart and be with Christ." He said Stephen saw heaven opening "to receive his departing spirit"; that Moses and Elias knew each other on the mount of transfiguration. Let us look calmly and see if the Bible writers taught us that death is a friend that opens to us the gate to glory. If it is, we shall learn it from the oracles of eternal truth: "Sin entered into the world and death by sin." "The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." Then from the testimony we learn that this much vaunted orthodox friend that carries men to heaven is death; then why not cease to sing, Praise God from whom all blessings flow? "I shall go to him". here the claim is made that this child had gone to heaven, and that David would go when he died; for, said Mr. Kitteridge, "heaven is a home, not a cold, chilly place"; but the gentleman did not say whether there was an exception made in favor of this child over those that were murdered in the days of Herod. (See prophecy, Jer. 31: 15, 16; fulfillment, Matt. 2 and 18). Did Rachel believe these children had gone to heaven? Not at all, for she is told, "They shall come again from the land of the enemy," nor did David go to heaven at death, for Peter says, "David is not ascended into the heavens." This is in harmony with what John said some time previous to this, "No man hath ascended into heaven." David himself said in Ps. 49: 15, "But God will redeem my soul from the power of the grave." How could this be, if David's soul went to heaven to be with his child's soul? Again, David says, "I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness." Mr. Kitteridge said, "We shall not sleep in the grave until the general resurrection." Mr. Kitteridge is here addressing persons who had lost friends by the enemy death. Paul, in 1 Thess. 4: 13, was addressing the same class; hear Paul in contrast: "I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them that are asleep." Daniel says 12: 2, "Many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake." Hear our blessed Master (John 5: 28), "Marvel not at this, the hour is coming in the which all that are in their graves shall hear his voice." How different the teachings of Christ, David, Daniel, Paul and Peter from orthodox teaching. In regard to Stephen, he says not a word about seeing heaven's gates open to receive his spirit, but we do read that "devout men carried Stephen to his burial." Moses and Elias knew each other on the mount, says Mr. Kitteridge; but if the word of the Lord is worth anything, Moses never was personally on any mount in company with Elias.

God told the truth when he said to Joshua, "Moses, my servant, is dead," but theologians look around for some hundreds of years, and finally they find Moses in company with our Lord and Elias on the mount, and in the very land too that God told him he should not go to for the mount of transfiguration is in the promised land. Did God tell the truth? He did; for Moses was not on the mount in person. In Matt. 17: 9, Christ says it was a "vision," and the word vision in this text is horama, defined by Groves, "a sight, vision, appearance." The same word is rendered vision in Acts 10: 17; hence if they contend that Peter saw a literal Moses on the mount, in all honesty they ought to contend that the beasts were literal that Peter saw in the sheet. As far as the thief on the cross is concerned, they say he went to paradise; but paradise is not heaven. After the resurrection Christ told Mary that he had not yet ascended to his Father, hence the thief did not go to heaven. Mr. Kitteridge said Paul wrote that he longed to depart and be with Christ, but if death is a sleep, then his words have no meaning. But did Paul expect to meet these converts in glory at death, or at some future time? (See 2 Tim. 4: 6, 7, 8). "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord the righteous Judge shall give me at that day, and not unto me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." Paul expected his reward, not at death, but at the resurrection. When in Asia, in great trouble, he says, "We trusted in God who raiseth the dead." (2 Cor. 1: 8, 9.) In Phil. 1: 23, we are told Paul desired to depart and be with Christ, and that he meant to say that at death he would go to heaven; but if Paul meant to tell us death is the gate to glory, what does he mean in Phil. 2: 27, where he says "Epaphroditus was sick and nigh unto death, but God had mercy on him, and not on him only, but on me also, lest I should have sorrow upon sorrow? Does Paul mean to tell us that he would have sorrow upon sorrow if this good man had departed and gone to be with Christ, and that God had mercy on him by keeping him out of heaven? Nay, but render the text in Phil. 1, it is far better for the returning of Christ, and then we have harmony all through Paul's writings. Paul says, "For the hope of Israel I am bound with this chain," and what was the hope of Israel? What was his discourse at Athens? "Jesus and the resurrection." (See Acts 17: 18, 32, Acts 24: 21, Acts 26: 8, Heb. 13: 20.) And as the "God of peace brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great shepherd of the sheep," "even so them that sleep in Jesus" will he bring again according to his promise. "I will open your graves, O my people, and bring you up out of your graves, and shall put my spirit in you, and ye shall live." In Heb. 11: 39, 40, Paul gives us to understand that none of these as yet had entered upon their reward. They all "died in the faith, not having received the promises." (v. 13.) In 1 Thess. 1: 9, 10, they were instructed by Paul that they must wait for Christ from heaven, instead of being taught by him that they were to go to Christ when they died. This is the gospel Paul preached, and he says, "I neither received of men, neither was I taught it, but by revelation of Jesus Christ." (Gal. 1: 12.) Paul is in harmony with Christ. When our Saviour was about to leave his disciples he said, "I go to prepare a place for you, and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also." (John 14: 3.) "Ye shall be recompensed at the resurrection of the just." "For our conversation is in heaven, from whence also we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ." "And when Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory."

From Eld. A. N. Seymour, Mich.

Br. Sheldon: Through the good providence of God we have been permitted of late to travel more extensively, and bear witness for Jesus and his truth, a labor that we ardently love and admire; although wearisome to us in our present measure of health. It is truly heart-cheering to mingle our voices and sympathies with God's dear children scattered here and there, pilgrims and strangers as they are, bound with us to the land of promise. Over one thousand miles we have been borne by public and private conveyance since the second of September, and wherever we have gone we have under no circumstances been ashamed of our faith in Jesus or his truth, but have sought as did Paul to preach the "whole counsel of God" concerning this generation, which doubtless will prove to be the last in the annals of time. Never have we felt more like sinking out of self, and all worldly employment, and of being all swallowed up in the one and last great message of mercy to a fast perishing world, than now. Oh how ardently do we desire more strength and permanency of health that we may go where duty calls and tell the world that the blood of Jesus cleanseth from all sin, that there is permanent joy and satisfaction in being fully consecrated to God, and that the light of prophecy that shines so vividly and gloriously along the Christian's pathway at the present time, is soon and surely to usher in the blessed morn of eternal day. In our journeyings from place to place we have met with many devoted Christians, who love truth and righteousness, not through any selfish or sectarian purpose or policy; but because they are elements of God's throne, and because God is their Father, and because he loves them and has redeemed them from all unrighteousness, and has acknowledged them as his sons and daughters by giving them the earnest of their inheritance, and we are thankful that the Lord is increasing this loving, devoted, praying army. Our fervent prayer is, "Oh may we be among them found, whene'er the archangel's trump shall sound." Our interest in the things of time and sense fades and recedes from our vision the more we have to do with God, and "the faith once delivered to the saints," and the nearer we approach the things that are eternal. As we have gone from place to place we have found always open doors and hearts to receive us, and bid us a hearty welcome, and never have we been so strongly solicited on every hand to go and preach the things of the kingdom and the name of Jesus, as of late. And these pressing invitations saddens our heart, because health will not allow us to labor as formerly, but while such is the call, we do thank God for the disposition to work for Jesus, and do all we can for poor, unregenerate, perishing souls. The harvest is truly great, but laborers are few. In our late trip to Lapeer, North Branch, Elk, Speaker, Brockway Center, Almont, Mt. Clemens, Dearborn, Canton, Nankin, Salem, Clinton, Clayton, Chelsea and other places, we enjoyed a precious visit. Old acquaintances were renewed and new ones formed, and we done what we could for the good cause wherever we went. In all of the above places save two, the A. C. Times is taken, and with but one or two exceptions the brethren spoke of the rising interest more than formerly. Perhaps this admiration comes in part by the change of basis and policy, so that it becomes the property of the body in general, who wait for their coming King. As our heavenly Father has shown mercy by moving the hearts of his people to lift the new association, who assumed the debt of the old, out of the rut, all should now come forward to the rescue and labor to make it a most thoroughly interesting and powerful means in swelling the last cry, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh!"

From Br. G. N. Merrill, Worcester, Mass.

Br. Sheldon: I see that my subscription for the Times has expired, enclosed find two dollars for its renewal.

My health is poor, but it is pleasing to know that the time is not far in the future when life eternal will be given to all the holy ones. Then ill health will be in the past, and death the enemy destroyed: our loved ones live again in paradise restored. Thank God. The hope, how transporting, how cheering amid the trials, temptations, and ills of life. The Lord help me to hold fast the profession of my faith, without wavering, unto the consummation or end of the world. Well, I love the coming of Jesus and believe it to be near—wish I could tell when, but I can't. Some think Jesus will come next month, others between this and next April. Who knows? Does any one? I do not think they do definitely as yet. If so, why the exhortation so often by our Saviour to "watch"? "If the good man had known in what hour the thief would have come he would have watched and not suffered his house to be broken up." This is an admonition for us to take warning of the "good man" and watch, because we do not know the time that our house may be broken up. I am thankful that although we do not know the exact time when our Lord will come, we may know when he is near "even at the door"; and we that love him can lift up our heads and rejoice, knowing that our redemption is drawing near. This text is often quoted to prove that we shall know the exact time when Jesus will come, "Ye brethren are not in darkness that that day should overtake you as a thief," &c. I want to know if we need the admonition of the blessed Jesus to "watch," if he will come upon us as a thief? To illustrate, suppose we had a beloved friend, one that we loved next to life, away from home in a far and distant land; suppose we received letters from that friend saying they were coming home, and should say such and such a thing would transpire, and when you see this thing and that thing take place then know that my coming is near, then tell us to get ready and watch, for you don't know the exact time of my coming, what would you do? If you loved that friend you would get ready. You would have everything ready in and about the house to receive him, and you yourself watching for him to enter the door. If you were thus ready and watching that friend would not come upon you as a thief, would he? I think I hear you say no.

Well, if we are thus ready and watching for the coming of Jesus, he will not come upon us a thief. Notwithstanding all this I think the time will be when all will know the time, as in the parable, but not time enough for any to get ready to receive salvation eternal in his everlasting kingdom. The Lord help us to be watching and all ready to hail him with joy when he comes. A preparation to meet Jesus is holiness, for without it, it is impossible to see him. The Lord help us to have it in all its fullness. If we are fully consecrated we shall be reconciled with his providences and satisfied with his promises.

Yours, hoping for life at the appearing of Jesus.

From Br. R. P. Johnson, Arkansas.

Dear brethren of like precious faith: What is faith? We understand that faith came by hearing, and hearing by the word of God; and without faith we cannot please God: he that cometh to God must believe that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him. We understand seeking is by obeying God's commandments, and his commandments are not grievous upon us, neither was it on Noah. The Bible sets forth only one faith; not that which is of the law, but that which is of the faith of Abraham who is the father of us all; and if we are firmly in this faith we expect to be saved in the coming kingdom by the Lord Jesus Christ, whom the heavens must retain until the restitution of all things. The Campbellites about here say that we are looking to Abraham for our reward. They also tell us they have got immortal souls, and we don't believe it. They also tell us that they have got friends in heaven, but we know that it is not so, for the Lord is coming the second time without sin to reward them that are looking for him. "And the nations were angry, and thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead that they should be judged, and that thou shouldst give reward unto thy servants, the prophets, and to the saints, and them that fear thy name, small and great." The Lord is coming to take the saints into his kingdom.

From Eld. Wm. McCulloch, New Rutland, Ill., Oct. 26, 1873.

Dear Brethren: After nine months furlough from active service in the cause of the Master (on account of inflammation and granulation of the eyes), I now enter the great field again to fight against sin in its various forms, and to persuade all that I can to renounce the works of the devil and come and join in the army of the Lord.

My first efforts will be in Southern Illinois, where the winters are mild; and I hope with care and prudence to be able to continue in active service all winter, and any wishing my labors in Southern Illinois can address me at Anna, Union Co., Ill., care of Eld. F. A. Childs, and I will do the best I can to supply their wants.

I shall visit Mt. Joy church and hope to see the work of the Lord prosper among the people. I have suffered Br. Childs to make out the programme for my labor in part, and he will accompany me in the work. Wife will also be with me on this tour. We hope to see the brethren from Equality at the meeting at Mt. Joy, Johnson Co., and all the scattered ones that possibly can come we hope to meet while on this trip.

Yours for justice, mercy and truth.

From Br. C. Rimo, Oresco, Iowa.

Br. Sheldon, and all the brothers and sisters scattered abroad: I have been for five months debarred from enjoying myself in preaching on account of ill health; but thank the good Lord my health is so much improved that I have again commenced my labors, and I am now so situated that I have nothing to do, only to go into the field and look after the lost sheep of the house of Israel. I have only one regular appointment at this time, and as I see in the TIMES so often that some little flock is destitute of preaching, if any such are in my reach that will write to me, I will by the help of the Lord come and see them. Since I am left alone in this world I feel to travel and see if it will not make some change in my feelings; so I give this offer to do all the good in the world that I can till Jesus comes.

I am in full faith that I soon shall see Jesus coming in the clouds of glory to liberate us from those trials and oppositions that we have to pass through in this sin cursed world. I ask the prayers of the church that I may stand firm in the Lord. Amen.

From Br. John Soares, Iowa.

BR. SHELDON: The Ringold church was organized August, '71. We have had our trials and persecutions, but the Lord's grace has been sufficient for us. He is the Rock of our salvation. We confide in his holy word. He is our refuge, our tower and stronghold; in a word, he is our all in all. He is the life, truth, and the way that leads to bliss and felicity, beyond the silent grave. He died for our sins according to the Scriptures, and was buried and rose again according to the Scriptures. He achieved a victory over death, hell, and the grave, and ascended up on high. He is coming again without a sin offering unto salvation. Yes, he will descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and with the trump of God, and resurrect the sleeping saints, and change and immortalize the living saints. To God and Christ be all the praise.

From Eld. J. Ridley, Iowa.

BR. SHELDON: The cause of the Lord is onward here in Manchester. I baptized four persons last Sunday, and in the evening eight more started to serve the Lord.

Love and harmony prevails in the church and the people have a mind to work, and the Lord shines through them. Blessed results are inseparably connected with such conditions.

From Sr. Martha J. Janes, Iowa.

Our Q. M. is in the past. There was but a small attendance at the first, but it closed with a good representation of appreciative hearers of the word, and a good interest, and I trust the seed sown will yet bear much fruit to the glory of God.

Spirit Phenomena.

L. MANN.

Some of our ablest minds have said that, while there were many mysterious phenomena produced by the agency of the so-called spirit mediums which they could not accredit to the spirits of dead persons, yet they were not prepared to offer a wholly satisfactory solution of the query. Many persons have been very positive in their affirmation that these feats possessed no claims other than those of extrordinary slight-of-hand feats, and even now, many deny them a consideration with ordinary phenomena; while some merely assert that they are the works of the devil. But well accorded facts suggest that, while their manifestations and origin may not be readily explained, their existence cannot longer be denied.

All newly discovered principles have in their earlier days been thus treated with coolness even bordering on scorn by the many, while the few at first only acknowledged them as mystified phenomena, without attempting any reasonable explanation. When a newly discovered principle—and we term the demonstrations commonly called working of spirits a principle—has been before the people long enough for them to become somewhat familiar with its mode of demonstration, its nature, etc., it is then looked upon a more common place affair, and with less of a mysterious air about it; as in the time when Sir Isaac watched the apple in its rapid descent—the common mind for a long time failing to comprehend the nature of his newly found principle. Thus will it ever be during the continuance of the present age.

The forms through which this mysterious principle and its workings are brought to notice are varied. While the largest class call themselves "mediums"—proposing to be your medium of communicating with the spirits of your dead friends,—a smaller part, by means of "clairvoyance," (clear-seeing,) propose to call up before your mind the buried and half forgotten past, and also to map out for you before hand a portion of your future life-journey. Here also we have a few denying to anyone this penetrating power, or intuitiveness, but facts forbid such a position. It can be clearly shown that they are capable of reading the mind of their inquirer quite as clearly as though it were written out and placed before them; their degree of fallibility depending upon the amount of will-force exercised by their visitors. This applies to those who by conversing with you, or otherwise securing a calm in your mind, are able to tell you almost everything you know yourself with wonderful accuracy; and they possess an amount of intuitiveness which, by constant use and development, enables them to foretell with some degree of accuracy certain future events.

A prominent American publication recently contained a paper bearing upon this branch of the subject, in which a detective was mentioned, and instances given where he would detect the true character, occupation and age of a person by seeing their hand writing. Various clairvoyants possess this power in various forms and degrees. Another comparative small class, while possessing the power to do much or quite all that the others do, yet they deny any connection with, or dependence on spirits, or any supernatural power. But the reader had the opportunity of perusing an able and exhaustive article by Mrs. H. V. Reed, touching this class in all the variations. Also we have a few who work mesmeric wonders, by obtaining control over the minds of others and placing them under mesmeric sleep. So completely do they command the entire senses and voluntary muscles of their subject that severe surgical operations have been performed upon persons under the influence of their power. When M. Mesmer first discovered this principle, he and many of his followers supposed it to be the effect of a fluid animal magnetism that passed from the operator to the subject.

It is doubtless by means of this form that we may be able to trace out to a certain extent the workings and manifestations of others. It is well known that certain minds are capable of exercising such an influence over others as to be able to read their thoughts, and to give the mind thus controlled by them certain mental impressions as the operator may desire. Many persons possess this mesmeric or will power in a very strongly developed degree, especially where it has been freely exercised, by which means the influence is the more easily brought to bear upon the weaker wills. The same influence has also been largely brought to bear upon the inmates of lunatic asylums, and also upon the brute creation. Witness the ease with which the lion-tamer enters his cage of denizens, and immediately their fierceness is subdued; note also with what readiness some persons command obedience from the various domesticated animals, while others can hardly obtain the slightest attention from them. Now any scientest will tell you that the command of a person over the brute creation or over his fellows, is attributable in a degree to his power to convey mental impression to the minds of others. Instances can be called to memory where men have refused to have any business or friendly relations with certain other men, saying that while in their company they were not themselves—could neither think nor act freely except by permission of the stronger mind.

If the human mind of one man is thus capable of holding such a powerful sway over that of his fellow beings, and can control even the actions of men by a mere exercise of the will, cannot a number of these strong minds with well developed will-force produce similar effects upon inanimate objects? The ordinary feats of modern spiritists are tipping the tables, balancing chairs on one leg, and even moving these and lighter objects through the air without touching them. Now, to the ordinary observer these phenomena are of such a nature as to delude and lead to the idea that they are the workings of spiritual, or some other than human agency; but do not lose sight of the fact that these mediums always assemble in circles, and try very hard to impress upon the mind of any visitor who they may grant a seat in their circle, that the strictest attention must be given to the objects of the evening; thus, if they do not secure the co-operation of the will-force of the visitor, they at least avoid any counter influence they might otherwise bring to bear upon the results. They also seek to impress you with the importance of perfect quietness, telling you that "the least noise will drive the spirits away." Thus by the united influence of their several wills they are able to produce physical effects upon material objects without the aid of physical agencies.

Very many persons possess this will-force to an extent that would enable them to assist at these "sittings," if they were only aware of the fact, and often fail in the exercise of this power until after they have become strong believers in the so-called spirit manifestations, and then, with the assistance of their strong faith, they at once become "mediums."

Thus can be seen a suggestion of the reasonable and scientific explanation of the phenomena usually connected with modern spiritism; though brief from necessity, it may induce the reader to pursue the subject in all its details at his leisure.

Our Young Folks.

Busy Little Fingers.

BY ROSE GERANIUM.

Dedicated to little three year-olds.

Into mamma's basket, 'ranging all her pieces,
Hunting up the ruffles, smoothing out their creases;
With the nicest clothes brush sweeping up the ashes;
Finding out my flower-seeds—"fro'ing 'way the trashes."

Climbing on the table, fixing all my papers,
Keeping of the frowning with such funny capers;
Falling on the carpet, getting sadly bruised!
Was a darling baby ever so abused?

Kisses! will they cure it? One, two, three, four there!
Tasteful little fingers, busy with my hair.
Cunning little sundown—Maudie bird must wear it
'Way out to the apple-tree; darling mustn't tear it.

Full five minutes absent, what has she been doing?
Washing hat and ribbons, starching them and blu-ing!
Oh! the naughty darling! "Tired baby ain't her!
Mamma 'd be an artist long enough to paint her.
Dainty head is drooping, "rock and sing 'bye baby,'"
One day's mischief ended, she is sleeping—may be.

ANSWERS to Uncle Simeon's questions have been furnished by Martha Thomson, of Wis., and by Izova R. Hooker, of Ky, aged 13 years, who writes: "Please give me some more questions, for in hunting the Bible for answers, I always find something new."

Bossing it.

Things do not always go on with perfect smoothness in my brother John's house. It is a pretty well regulated family, and the brothers and sisters, for the most part, agree beautifully with one another; but now and then comes a jar.

I happened to see such a one a few days ago. It was on Sabbath afternoon. I was just coming in at the door, when I saw little Frank sobbing and in a passion of tears. "Why," I cried out, "what is the matter with this little boy?" Between anger and grief he could hardly speak, but he managed among the sobs to tell me that a moment or two before, Tom had taken him by the arm and had dragged him into the house. "I only wanted to go down to the corner and meet mamma and papa! I told him so! and he would not let me go! and then he pinched my arm and hurt me, and pulled me in the house!" was his summing up.

Now I am cheerful what I say to the boys, but they know me so well that I talk very freely to them. They take it for granted that I have a right to do it. So Tom did not take it amiss as I turned and said: "How is this, Tom? that is a hard story little Frank tells about you."

Tom looked a little ashamed, but frankly replied: "Mother don't let him go out on the street on Sunday, and he hadn't his hat on; and he wouldn't come in when I told him. So I only took hold of his arm to make him come in."

I did not pursue the investigation, as it was not my business to regulate matters in the household. I took Frank in my lap and got him to tell me what they had been doing in the infant class. He soon was deeply engaged in telling me how the boy next to him pushed his missionary penny in a crack in the seat, and couldn't get it out again. He would once in a while give a long breath and a sob, that was like the memory of a great grief; but he soon was smiling again.

After supper Tom and I walked out together, and we talked the affair of the afternoon over. I, of course, had said nothing of it to any one. I said something like this to Tom:—

"I suppose that you thought that you were doing right to drag Frank in the house, but I want you to put yourself in the same place. You feel strong, and able pretty well to take care of yourself. But suppose that you had been standing on the stoop, and a large, tall and strong man, as much bigger than you as you are than Frank, had said to you, in about the same tone and way in which you spoke to him: 'Come in right away!' and when you did not feel inclined to do it, all the less because you did not think he had any right to command, and you did not move, he had come to you, seized your arm, pinched it tightly, and had given you a great jerk into the hall, which sent you reeling and almost on your back, how would you have felt? Would not the insult, the injury have seemed almost too great to be borne? Would you not have been almost beside yourself with anger and the bitter sense of wrong?

"Yet that was just what you did to Frankie. You are so much bigger and stronger than he, that he could not resist you, but I think that you can imagine how he felt. You need not wonder that I found him in such a passion of tears. You would have cried too, with unutterable indignation if you had been in his place.

"Now, my boy," I added, "I want you to think of this when you are about to do something of the sort again. Remember that one of the last insults that a man can give another is to lay his hand in anger on him. There is something in the touch that is like fire in the soul. A little child feels it so. You are strong, you feel yourself to be so, but you must hereafter be too manly to show it on your little brothers and sisters. I know that you did not hurt him. When he said that you did, although he did not understand it, he meant that the hurt was a great deal more in his feelings than on his arm.

"That was very much harder to bear, and he could not bear it. I am very sure that if you had thought it all over you would not have done it."

Tom is a boy of noble impulses, and he would be the very first to defend his little brother if he saw any one opposing him. If he had seen another person doing just what he did to Frank he would have in a moment stepped in to protect him, but like many other big brothers and sisters, he did not see it in exactly the same light in his own case. There was a fair opportunity and with a show of right to "boss it" over this little one, and he improved it. The result was not beautiful.—Christian Weekly.

Books and Tracts.

List of Books, Tracts, etc., kept on sale at the Advent Christian Times office.

RESURRECTION OF THE DEAD IN Christ. (German.)

NATURE AND DESTINY OF MAN; (German.)

RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. (German.)

DESTRUCTION OF THE WICKED (German.)

SOUL OF MAN. (German.)

THE KINGDOM OF CHRIST ON Earth (German.)

IS MAN IMMORTAL? (German.)

☞ The above seven German tracts are published by L. Reimer, 1003 Chestnut st., Philadelphia, Pa., and can be ordered either of this office or of him.

IMMATERIALISM, by Wm. Sheldon. Post-paid, 6c.

THE PENALTY OF SIN, by O. R. Fassett. Post-Paid, 6c.

*AN ADDRESS TO M. E. CON*ference of Minnesota, by Eld. L. C. Collins. Should have a very wide circulation. Post-paid 7c.

THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL answer to the questions: Is the popular conception of the soul that of Holy Scripture? By Chas. L. Ives, M. D., Professor of the theory and practice of Medicine in Yale College, 187[illegible], 119 Pages. For sale at this Office. Price [illegible] cents.

END OF THE KING OF THE NORTH, and the Impending Time of Trouble, and the [illegible] Coming of Christ. By L. T. Cunningham. [illegible], 12 cents.

THE JUDGMENT IMPENDING Prophecy and Chronology converging to one grand culmination. By L. T. Cunningham. Price, [illegible] cts.

THE DESTINY OF MAN, by William Erwin. An excellent treatise by a member of the M. E. denomination that gives the Bible view in a radical style. 312 pp. nicely bound in cloth and gilt. $1,50 post paid.

MODERN SPIRITISM, its origin, character and tendencies, by C. C. Marston 56 pp. in paper $6,00 per hundred; $1.00 per dozen; 12 cts per dozen

*COMPLETE WORKS OF FLA*vius Josephus; translated by William Whiston. 979 pp. in cloth. post paid $3.00

THE COMING EARTHQUAKE, By D. T. Taylor. 25 Cents.

*CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—Unabridg*ed, $3, by express. Condensed, sufficiently full for ordinary purposes, by mail, $1 75.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE: with engravings, maps, and tables. $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

*BIBLE DICTIONARY: by Smith & Bra*num. The best abridgment of Smith's larger work. Leather $6. cloth $5. By express.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. $[illegible] by express.

*ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORD*ance. With Greek and English index. $[illegible] by express.

*ENGLISH-GREEK LEXICON. By Lid*dell & Scott. A standard work. $7 50. by express.

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 32mo. 25c.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock. $2 50, Post-paid.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3: 1. By H. L. Hastings. Paper, 50c. Postage, 8c.

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY of God: and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By P. A. Smith. 15c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble, 8c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man of the earth earthy: the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 7c.

*PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC meet*ings. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 50c. a hundred.

*THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; with a re*view of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabath By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of Scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added History, Statistics and Tables. Cloth, $2; leather 2 50

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. By Wellcome and Gould. 460 pp. $1 25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATTHEW, 24 and 25, 25c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM. 20c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM. 25c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic; Which? 10c. $6 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a dozen, The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one adress, post-paid, for $4 00.

LAST DAY TOKENS: by S. S. Brewer. 35 cts.

FUTURITY; by Wm. Sheldon. 20 cts.

THE INDEX BOOK MARK; 25c a dozen.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. Nothing so good on this topic. Cloth $1. Paper, 50c. 3 copies for $1, post paid.

GOOD TIDINGS; a general view of Advent doctrine. By an Association of Authors. 426 pages. Cloth 65c, Paper 40c. Post paid.

*THE NATURE AND DURATION OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT: By Henry Con*stable, Prebendary of Cork, 25c. Post paid.

THE FAITH OF ST. PAUL; showing it to have been neither Pharisaic nor Sadducean, but Hebrew. By L. C. Collins. 15c.

*THE STATE OF THE DEAD; a Discus*sion between N. Field, M. D. and T. P. Connolly, Esq. pp. 200. 50c. Post Paid.

THE JUBILEE HARP. $1. $9 a d[illegible]

HADES AND SHEOL; By L. C. [illegible] The best published exposition of the parable and Lazarus. 15c.

THE ADVENT MINSTREL; a choice co[illegible]tion of spiritual songs. Flexible cloth, 25c. $2.15 a dozen. Paper, 15c. $1.[illegible] a dozen.

HYMNS OF THE HARP; cloth, 75c, *Leath*er $1.

HYMNS OF THE MORNING; A new and rich collection. Cloth 80c. Leather, 95c.

PAULS EARNEST EXPECTATION and hope; (Phil. 1: 21: 20.) By O. R. Fassett. 5c.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT: containing the original Greek text of the New Testament with an interlineary word for word English translation and a new emphatic version, [illegible] pp. Cloth $4; leather back $5., Postage, 15c.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, November 11, 1873.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES
IS PUBLISHED BY THE
Western Advent Christian Publishing Society.
Business Office: McCormick Block, corner of Randolph and Dearborn Sts., Room 27.
[Printing Presses located at Norwood Park.]
TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.
Sent Three Months for Fifty cents.

The officers of the Society are as follows.

President—DARIUS MATHEWSON,
Vice President—L. C. COLLINS.
Secretary—FRANK BURR.
Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
HOWARD, E. McCULLOCH,
J. M. SNOOK.

.. W. TUCKER, TREASURER & BUSINESS AGENT.

Don't Fail

To give your name and address full and complete every time you write.

Remember

That all Drafts, Money Orders, etc., payable to the Business Agent, A. W. Tucker.

☞ Address articles intended for publication in THE TIMES to Wm. Sheldon, and all business communications to

A. W. TUCKER,
27, McCormick Block,
Chicago, Ill.

☞ Write Appointments, Notices, Communications for THE TIMES, and business matters, each on separate pieces of paper.

☞ Do not fail to comply with the above suggestions.

APPOINTMENTS, NOTICES, etc., must reach us by Thursday night to be in time for the next issue. Please remember this.

Business Department.

Book and Job Work.

We are now prepared to do all kinds of BOOK and JOB PRINTING with despatch, and in a satisfactory manner. Books, Pamphlets, Tracts, Leaflets, Circulars, Envelopes, Letter-Heads, Note-Heads, Bill-Heads Cards of all kinds, etc., etc. Our friends and the business public will do well to get our figures before ordering work elsewhere. Estimates cheerfully given.

To Correspondents.

MRS W. A. MILLER—Your money was received and credited to Mrs. P. Miller; was it a mistake?

MRS EMILY BOALY—W. Young's paper has been stopped, probably by the P. M., the others continue to go, shall we stop them?

Change of Post Office.

The address of Elder P. W. Hough is changed to Fairbank, Buchanan Co., Iowa.

Letters Received.

☞ ALL letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgement is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

J Mann
A M Sheldon
L Rice
A A Gibson
J Armour
J Ridley
M J James
P Mitson
E S Clark
S E Mabey
P W Hough
A B [illegible]
J Goldsmith
A F Carpenter
S B Baldwin
S B Mabey
J H Paton
S J Adamson
E Wolcott
J W Elliott
I S Ames
M O Weston
C F Dow
F J Groat
C Griggs
L Kennedy
L Mann
S M Adams
J Bowers
J H Melvin
A Pelham
L M Davis
D R Mansfield
C Eckhart
W H Hurlbut
J Ives
A McCowan
T Troxel
L M Jarvis
J Edmonds
H Gushing
J W Young
J M Beal
P Burr
T Vandervort
S B Taylor
H Horton
A F Primm

M A Waite
T Bradley
S Waffle
W E Rankin
A E Babcock
J A Churchill
A A Gilbert
E Bosey
J W Young
S Morrell
M A Sylvester
P Hitchcock
S B Pearl
S B Davidson
N B Barbour
N B Davis
W Davidson
C Eckhart
G W Montgomery
W Royce
J Stoneway
W C Nelson
J D Olney
C C Marston
H Arnidon
H L Hastings
P W Hough
W B Fields
B Huntington
J R S Mowrey
T E Cook
N F Loomis
C H Williams
S Lane
Blaisdell & Small
A J Winter
W G Boutes
S E Lawyer
W E Doolittle
G K Merrill
M Wakeman
A Wright
W Erwin
L B LittleJohn
G Bolles
E Sanderson
L N Waters
E D Sargent

J Ecker
J Mars
A B Fabrick
C Libby
H T Hughes
M H Hubbell
A Walker
J Brigham
J Yates
T H Loerpabek
E C Andrus
T J Williams
S B Brewer
E B Durand
M Harding
J Chapin
S K Gi[illegible]
E [illegible]
D Poore
J Patrick
J Prosser
H A Kier
E S Robbins
H Hunter
W C Taylor
C Smith
J Clapper
J Allen
W J Barsell
A N Seymour
G W Smith
T S Thomasson
H G McCulloch
T E Cook
M R Orr
S S Young
J B Wimbish
E N Bliss
J S Lawyer
E J Raymond
D O Amos
H C Wellcome
L Winterscholt
A Organ
J McMichael
P W Hough
J W Elliott

Books and Tracts Sent by Mail.

H Lewis
E A Irine
A J Smith 2
M B Hubbell 2
J F Wilcox

J B Ames
J Kitt
G D Hickendick
M O Weston
Miss Babb

W G Boutes
E S Robbins
H W Clark ex
M Wait

For Times Extra.

J. W. Young	$60 00
E. Wolcott	3 00

WESTERN TRACT FUND.

Previously Reported	$54 00
M. Harding	$1 00
J. Prosser	50
Br. Walker	1 00
Mrs. C. Griggs	1 00

H. H. Hurlbut	3 00
I. Troxel	[illegible]
A Friend	1 00
Mrs W. C. Nelson	3 00
L. Smith	[illegible]
M. R. Orr	3 00
J. A. Churchill	1 00
D. Thorp	1 00

The $4000 Fund.

To Free the Society from Debt.

CASH.

Previously Reported	$671 80

PLEDGES PAID.

Previously Reported	$[illegible]12 00
J. Patrick	$4 00
J. Prosser	10 00
A. B. Cushing	5 00
L. Wintersholtt	5 00
G. Bolles	10 00
A. B Fabrick	5 00
C. Libby	25 00
H T. Hughes	2 00
A. Walker	10 00
A. Catlin	2 00
G. D. Lickendick	5 00
L. N. Ames	50
J. S Ames	50
Mary Little	50
J. B Brown	1 00
Mary G. Weston	3 00
S. S. Gould	25 00
Mary A Waite	10 00
T. Bradley	5 00
S. & A Waffle	5 00
J. A. Churchill	5 00
G. W. Montgomery	10 00
C. Eckhart	3 00
S E Pearl	1 00
N. F. Loomis	1 00
G W. Whiting	10 00
Blaisdell & Small	5 00
H J. Winter	4 00
W. C. Taylor	5 00

Obituary.

BRODE.—Died, in Canton, Fillmore Co., Minn., Oct. 19, 1873, Marian Lucia, daughter of Peter and Lucy Brode. Aged, five months and eight days.

When the loving mother and aged grandmother were taking the last look at the lovely face, as it lay in the little coffin, I saw the large tears flow down their faces, I could but weep, and cry from my heart, come dear Savior, and deliver thy little ones from the hand of the enemy.

I tried to speak words of comfort from Jer. 31; 16.

PETER MITSON.

ROGERS.—Died, at Ridgeway, Wis., Nov. 1, 1873, Mrs. Rebecca Rogers. Aged, 38 years.

She leaves a husband and six small children, from thirteen months to eleven years of age. May God carry these lambs in his arms, and lead them to himself.

Services by the Congregational minister and brother Meige. Text: "The righteous hath hope in his death."—(Prov. 14. 32.) PHILO HITCHCOCK.

Appointments.

ILLINOIS.

Genoa, Oct. 27, and every other Sabbath until further notice. E. H. BURINGTON.

Lynnville, 10:30 a. m., first and second Sabbath's in each month.

Phelps S. H. second Lord's day of Oct. and Nov., at 10:30 a. m.

Lynnville, at 7 p. m.

Rochelle, first and third Sabbaths, as brethren may arrange.

New Rutland, fourth Sabbath, morning and evening.

After November three-fourths of my time will be to use as the way may open.

Such are my arrangements until further notice.

ALICE E. RATHBUN.

Preaching brethren coming to Chicago wishing to preach in Advent Christian Chapel, will correspond with H. P. WRIGHT, 203 Walnut Street.

Advent Christian Mission, Cairo, Ill.—On and after Sunday, Aug. 31, services will be held in the school-room on the corner of Twelfth street and Washington avenue, opposite the Bulletin office. Morning discourse 11 o'clock a. m. Bible class for adults 4 p. m. Evening preaching at the ringing of the bells in the city. Brethren passing are cordially invited to call. H. JOHNSON, T. S. THOMASSON.

I will commence a series of meetings in the city of Bloomington, Nov. 10, 1873, as Br. J. S. Gibson may arrange. D. S CLARK.

Piano (Congregationalist church), Nov. 9, 10:30 a. m.

Jericho, 2:30 p. m., Nov. 16. C. W. SMITH.

After the close of the present successful meeting now being held at the Mt. Joy church, in Johnson county, by Eld. Wm. McCulloch, who will close it in time to commence a meeting at Union chapel (Br. Penninger's), six miles east of Anna, on Wednesday, Nov. 12, before the third Sunday. Meeting will continue over Lord's day, until Tuesday, Nov. 18, when the Southern Illinois Conference will hold its annual session on Tuesday, Nov. 18, at Union chapel, six miles east of Anna.

It is hoped that all the churches and preachers within the limit of the Conference will be represented by presence or letter, as we hope much important business may be transacted for the benefit of the cause and glory of our Redeemer.

JOHN S. LAWYER, President.

Simpson S. H., two miles south of Nekoma, Knox Co., commencing Monday eve., Nov. 17, and continuing over Sunday, Nov. 23.

L. F. COLE.

DISCUSSION.—There will be a public discussion at Ancona, Livingston Co., beginning the second Friday in Dec. 1873, at 2 p. m., holding four days of two sessions each, on the following proposition: "Resolved, That the wicked dead will be raised to life from the state of death in the last day." C. C. Marston, of Elida, Ill., affirms; John Billings, of New Rutland, Ill., denies.

Elida in the evening. Also at Elida, Nov. 16 and 23, morning and evening.

Providence, Bureau Co., Temperance Hall, Nov. 26-30.

New Rutland, second and third Sabbaths in December. C. C. MARSTON.

MICHIGAN.

To the churches in Branch County, Michigan, I would say that my appointments for the year 1873 will be as follows:

East Gilead, Jan. 5, 10 a. m., and every two weeks after.

California, Jan. 12, 10:30 a m and every two weeks after.

Algansee, every Sunday 2:30 p m and evening. Prayer meeting every Wednesday evening.

Moscow, as Br. Buell may arrange, Nov. 10, eve.
Clinton, as Br. Fabrick " " 11,
Canton, as Br. Clark " " 12, 13,
Dearborn, Friday evening and over Sunday, Nov. 14, 16. J. B. PRESTON.

Pt. Sanilac, Advent chapel, every Sunday morning, at 11 o'clock.

Lexington, Everett's Hall, every Sunday evening 7½ o'clock. GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.

Lexington Lake Shore Advent Chapel, 3 miles north of village, Sabbath, Jan. 26, at 3 p. m., and every two weeks after.

Lexington Ridge, White S. H., Feb. 2, at 3 p. m. and every two weeks after.

GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.

Woodbridge, Johnson S. H., 10:30 a. m.

Bell S. H., 2:30 p. m., Sunday, July 20, and every two weeks thereafter.

Brodock S. H., Tuesday eve., July 22, and once in two weeks.

WM. BRANCH.

There will be preaching in the Louis S. H., Almer, Sept. 7, 2 p. m., and every two weeks.

In the Delling S. H., Almer, Sept. 7, 10½ a. m., and every two weeks.

In the Graham S. H., Fairgrove, Sept. 14, 10½ a. m. Centre S. H., 3 p. m., and in the Hinron S. H. 8 p. m. and every two weeks.

E. H. DURAND.

The next quarterly meeting of the Northern District of Michigan will be held in the Decker S. H. at Millbrook, commencing Friday, Dec 26, and continue over Sunday.

E. B SCOTT, Sec'y.

Porter Centre, Mich., Sept. 21, 10½ a. m., and 3 p. m., and every four weeks.

JAS. FERRIS, Pastor.

The Lord permitting, we shall dedicate our church on Sunday, Nov. 16. All our brethren are invited to attend, and especially the ministerial portion. By leaving the cars at Battle Creek, on the M. C. R. R., or Bellevue, on the Peninsular Railway, teams will be found going to Assyria Center, and most especially if you come on Saturday. Yours in hope.

ELD. C. D. BERRY.

Assyria, Oct. 24, 1873.

INDIANA.

Meeting every Sunday at the Volga Church, commencing at half-past 10 o'clock, preaching alternately by T. V. Porter and the pastor,

LEMUEL RECORD.

Lavalle, Oct. 5, and every four weeks until further notice. Fairfield, Sept 12, and once in two weeks. Baraboo, Sept. 12, and once in four weeks. Webster's Prairie, Sept. 28, and once in four weeks. Fisher Valley, Sept. 21, and once in four weeks. E. P. GRAVES.

WISCONSIN.

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.

Call upon Brs. Bracket or Reese, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.

A. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

Springville, May 4, and every two weeks until further notice.

Dudley S. H., May 11, and every four weeks until further notice.

Chaseburg, May 17, and every four weeks until further notice. JOB BROWN.

Arena, Nov. 16, and once in two weeks.

Cross Plains, Nov. 9, and once in four weeks until further notice. PHILO HITCHCOCK.

N. B.—I am at liberty one Lord's day in the month at present. P. H.

NOTICE.—The next Q. M. for the Southern District of Wisconsin will be held at Belleville, commencing Friday evening, Nov. 14, and holding over Lord's day. It is hoped there will be a general attendance of the brethren. Br. Graves has promised to be with us, and we expect several others of our preaching brethren to help us. Let all come determined to work, and good will be done in the name of the Lord.

GEORGE HOWARD.

Montpelier, Sunday, July 13, at 10:30 a. m., and 7:30 p. m., and every four weeks following.

Bridgewater, Sumner S. H., Monday eve., July 14, and once in two weeks thereafter.

WM. BRANCH

Preaching at the Cain S. H., Decatur Co., first Sunday in each month, at 11 a. m.

Dubie S. H., 3 p. m., first Sunday in each month. J. F. ADAIR, Pastor.

Preaching in Thompson's Hall, Delmar, Clinton Co., Jan. 5, and every two weeks until further notice. C. W. PITCHER.

Manchester, the first and third Sabbaths of each months, at 11 a. m. and 2:30 p. m.

J. RIDLEY, Pastor.

MINNESOTA.

Ridgeway, Feb. 8 and 9, and once in four weeks.

P. MITSON.

The Lord willing, I will preach at Monticello, Wright Co., Minn., every Sunday at 10½ a. m.

Baily S. H., at Baily Station, near Elk River, Oct. 12, at 3 p. m. and every two weeks after until further notice.

Otsego Village S. H., Sunday Oct. 5, at 3½ p. m and once in two weeks after, until further notice.

Lilly Pond, Sunday eve., Oct. 5, at 7 p. m., and once in two weeks after, until further notice.

Preach at Big Lake Station, Sunday eve., at 7 o'clock.

S. C. WELLCOME.

P. S. Our Covenant Meeting is held the last Saturday, before the first Sunday in each month, at 2 p. m., at the Monticello Chapel.

Bailey S. H., Nov. 15

Prairie Creek, Stone S. H., Sunday, Nov 23.

Cottage Grove, Atkinson Corners, Sunday, Nov. 30. MRS. H. M. DUBEY.

Utica, Winona Co., as the brethren may arrange, November 22, evening, and over Lord's day.

If the friends farther West, North or East, wish me to come to their place they can write to me before the 23d of November at Utica, Winona Co., care of D. Cheatham.

PETER MITSON.

NEW YORK.

Saratoga Springs; meetings every Sunday in the Lower Town Hall, corner of Broadway and Lake Avenue, at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday School and Bible class directly after morning service.

Prayer meeting every Thursday eve., at the residence of the pastors, 218 Broadway, nearly opposite Town Hall.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., prayer meeting every Thursday evening, at the residence of the pastors, Van Dam street, first house east of Broadway.

WM. A. and M. L. DURAND, Pastors.

Elmira, N. Y., near Br. John S. Smith's Nov. 14. JOHN T. ONGLEY.

The Western District, New York State Conference will meet with the church at East Shelby, Friday eve., Nov. 28, and continue over Sunday, Nov. 30.

We hope for a good time at this meeting. Let every church within this District be represented, and do not forget the quarterly collection.

A. P. MOORE, Sec'y.

P. S.—There will be teams at Knowlesville on arrival of the accommodation train from the West, at 9:30 a. m. and from the East at 2:30 p. m. on Friday. Let all that come by cars come on that day. For the church.

E. SANDERSON, Clerk.

OHIO.

A meeting of days will be held at Rockbridge, O., commencing on the second Saturday in Nov. Br. Frank Burr will be our minister.

WM. H. HULS.

Christian Advent Church, Archibald, Fulton Co. Preaching every Sunday at 10 o'clock, a. m. and 7 o'clock p.m. Prayer meeting every Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock, Reynolds' S. H. Traveling brethren having a gospel sermon to preach, please give us a call and preach the word.

F. VOS, Elder.

PENNSYLVANIA.

In Quincy Hall, 127 Leacoc Street, Allegheny, Wednesday evening, Nov. 26, and over Sunday, the 30th, as the brethren may arrange.

G. W. STETSON.

The next quarterly meeting of the Advent Christian Conference of Northern Pennsylvania and Southern New York will be held with the church at Wallace Station, Steuben Co., N. Y., commencing Friday evening, Dec. 5, to continue over the following Sunday. Those coming by railroad will leave the cars at Wallace Station on the Rochester and Corning Railroad, and inquire for M. J. Brown. Those coming with teams, inquire for T. C. Armstrong. All are cordially invited. E. C. COWLES, President.

J. W. TAYLOR, Secretary.

Button S. H., as brethren may appoint, Nov. 13.

South Creek, Bradford Co., Nov. 16.
East Troy, " " Nov. 18.
Williamsport, Lycoming Co., Nov. 19, 20.
Waterford, Erie Co., Ecc., Nov. 22, and over Sunday, as friends may appoint, Nov 23.
Millers Station, Crawford Co., Nov. 24.
Rootville, Crawford Co., Nov. 26.

JOHN T. ONGLEY.

IOWA.

Warsaw, third Saturday in each month, in the evening.

Chester S. H., Sunday following, 11 a. m.

Corydon, 2 p. m. J. F. ADAIR.

Clinton, Iowa, July 1873. Gospel meetings held every Sunday. Prayer meetings on Thursday evening. S. B. MABEY, Pastor.

Broken Kettle S. H., the first and third Sunday of each month, until further notice.

HATTIE A. PLANK.

Preaching at Crook's School-house, Wayne county, Sunday, Aug. 24, at 3 p. m., and every three weeks until further notice.

A. A. DAVIS.

VISIT TO IOWA.—To the brethren in Iowa who requested me to visit them and hold meetings, I would say that my arrangements are to spend the month of February and perhaps longer in your State. Those desiring me to stop with them will please write to me at Elida, Winnebago Co., Ill. C. C. MARSTON.

There will be a meeting of the delegates of the Christian and Advent Christian Conferences of the State of Iowa for the purpose of organizing a general Union State Conference, and for the transaction of such business as may come before it, to be holden at Belle Plain, Benton Co., Iowa, commencing Jan 8, 1874, and hold over the following Lord's Day. It is the earnest desire of many that this meeting be represented by every conference in the State. Let there be a general rally, and come with hearts full of love and unity, and then we shall be prepared to labor for the good of the cause, and shall not be ashamed of our work when it is done. C. C. RAMSAY.

Per order of Committee.

MISSOURI.

There will be a special meeting at the McKinley S. H., eight miles east of Unionville, Putnam Co., Mo., to commence Nov. 14, at candle lighting and continue over Sunday. The object is to organize a quarterly conference for the southern part of the annual conference known as the S. Iowa and N. Mo. A. C. conference. There are a small number of churches that have not as yet been known in the annual conference. Will Br. Snow be with us? Brethren, let us make a grand rally. N. C. MILLER.

The first Quarterly Meeting of the Western M. O. Conference will be held with the Greenland Church for 1873, commencing on Friday, December 5, and will hold over Sunday. We shall look for a full delegation from all of the churches for there will be much important business.

Visiting brethren will find a cordial welcome. Try and come out largely. Our cause is one of immense interest. Don't delay.

J. M. BLIVEN, Sec'y.

CANADA.

The Advent church at Montreal, holds regular meetings every Sabbath, at Temperance hall, 6 Bleury St.

JOSEPH LUTTRELL, Sec'y. 307, St. Joseph St.

Advertisements.

$20 SAVED!

To meet the urgent demand of the times the FLORENCE SEWING MACHINE CO. have determined to

REDUCE PRICES,

and will hereafter sell their $65 Machine for $45, and other styles in proportion.

THE FLORENCE

is the ONLY Sewing Machine that feeds the work backward and forward, or to right and left, as the purchaser may prefer. It has been greatly IMPROVED AND SIMPLIFIED, and is far better than any other machine in the market.

It is NOW the CHEAPEST.

Florence, Mass., Nov. 1, '73. Agents Wanted.

496-4t.

WHY NOT club for Washers and Wringers as well as papers. Colby Bros. & Co., Reading such, will send circulars for any one to get up a Club Order for their superior machines. Wholesale prices to all and a Washer free to the one who gets a club for one dozen—a Wringer for two dozen, and both, worth $18.50 for a club of three dozen. Farmers' Clubs and Granges supplied at wholesale price. Send your address, and say how many circulars you will distribute. You can thus save one-third their cost by getting machines direct from the manufacturer. WHY NOT?

496-4t.

Agents Wanted.
SEND FOR CATALOGUE.
DOMESTIC SEWING MACHINE CO., N. Y.
496-4t.

"DOMESTIC" PAPER FASHIONS.

To every New subscriber paying for THE TIMES one year in advance, also to every Old subscriber paying ALL ARREARS and one year in advance, we will send a copy of one of the following valuable works:

DEBATE ON
"THE STATE OF THE DEAD,"
Field vs. Connelly, 300 pp.
BIBLE DOCTRINE of the SOUL,
By Prof. Ives, 110 pp.
NATURE AND DURATION OF
"FUTURE PUNISHMENT,"
By H. Constable.

We have a large number of these good works which we want placed in the hands of the reading public, thereby doing good to them, and largely increasing our list of subscribers. We desire that every reader of the TIMES to at once enter earnestly into this good work.

Anyone sending Four New Subscribers With eight dollars, will receive their choice of the above works in addition to the one to each subscriber.

Begin the work at once. Sample copies of the paper sent on application. Address,

A. W. TUCKER.

THE
American Bee Journal

Established by the late Samuel Wagner in 1861, at Washington, D. C., is now published at Chicago, Ill., and edited by

W. F. CLARKE,
President of the North American Bee-Keepers' Society.

The American Bee Journal.

is the organ of no man, party, patent hive, or selfish interest. Its one aim will be to advance Apiculture.

We expect to give good value to all who subscribe, and the larger our hosts of readers the better value we shall be able to give them.

Lend us a hearty Vigorous Co-operation, and we promise on our part to SPARE NO PAINS to make this the

BEST SCIENTIFIC AND PRACTICAL JOURNAL OF APICULTURE IN THE WORLD.

SINGLE COPIES, TWO DOLLARS A YEAR IN ADVANCE.

CLUB RATES:

$1 75 per year, in clubs of two ....or [illegible]
1 65 " " " three .... " [illegible]
[illegible] " " " six .... " 9 00
[illegible] " " " ten .... " 14 00
1 25 " " " twenty .... " [illegible]

Specimen Copies sent on application. Communications and remittances to be addressed to

W. F. CLARKE,
AMERICAN BEE JOURNAL,
Room 27, McCormick Block, Chicago, Ill.

Chicago & North-Western Railway.

THE ROUTE DIRECT

From CHICAGO to OMAHA,
From CHICAGO to MILWAUKEE,
From CHICAGO to SHEBOYGAN,
From CHICAGO to ST. PAUL.
From CHICAGO to MADISON,
From CHICAGO to GREEN BAY,
From CHICAGO to MARQUETTE,
From CHICAGO to SIOUX CITY,
From CHICAGO to YANKTON, DAK.
From CHICAGO to GENEVA LAKE,
From CHICAGO to FREEPORT,
From CHICAGO to DUBUQUE,
IS VIA THE

Chicago and North-Western RAILWAY.

In Going North, North-West or West You cannot go amiss if you buy your Tickets Via this Route.

See that Your Tickets Read via Chicago & N.-W. Railway.

This is the Pioneer Route to and from CALIFORNIA and the PACIFIC SLOPE.

Full information in regard to this Route will be cheerfully furnished by all Ticket Agents in the EAST, WEST, NORTH or SOUTH.

Running Through Five States,

This Great Railway Line, made up of nearly Two Thousand Miles of the best Railroad there is in the North-West, offers inducements to the traveling public second to none in the country, and superior to any offered by its competitors.

Steel Rail, Shortest and Quickest Route, Westinghouse Safety Air Brakes, Miller's Safety Platform, Pullman Palace Cars.

Speed, Comfort and Safety, are combined, and render this the Great Route for the People.

IT REACHES
North, North-West and West,
And Traverses the Garden Spot of the World.
ILLINOIS, MICHIGAN, IOWA, WISCONSIN, AND MINNESOTA,
ARE ALL TRIBUTARY TO THIS LINE.

Chicago Ticket Offices:

Corner LaSalle and Randolph Street.
Corner Canal and Madison Streets.
Kinzie Street Depot, cor. West Kinzie and Canal Streets.
Wells Street Depot, cor. Wells and North Water Streets.

W. H. STENNETT, MARVIN HUGHITT,
Gen'l Passenger Agent. Gen'l Superintendent.

AGENTS, Terms Extra. "CYCLOPEDIA OF Things Worth Knowing," 25,000 WANTS SUPPLIED. CHEAP RECEIPT BOOK. FREE. The greatest of the age. Continental Pub. Co., St. Louis, Mo.

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. XI.---NO. 15. CHICAGO, NOVEMBER 18, 1873. WHOLE NO. 498

Advent Christian Times.

Published Every Tuesday by the

Western Advent Christian Publishing Society.

37, McCormick Block, Chicago.

Poetry.

"The Lord Shut Him In."

The deluged earth, with billows vast
  High swelling o'er the peopled plain,
Engulfing hills, the mountain's crest,
  In one unbroken, boundless main—
No refuge gave to man accursed,
  To nations steeped in hoary sin :—
But Noah's faith prepared him erst
  An ark ;—the Lord then shut him in.

What through the deluge come, and flood
  On flood descend ?—the raging deep
Vast fountains pour in angry mood,
  All life and breath from earth to sweep,
And in a watery grave entomb
  The world grown old and dead in sin ?
The man of God the fearful doom
  Escapes ;—the Lord has shut him in.

Thus ever finds the Christian soul,
  When rising storms burst forth amain,
And seas triumphing darkly roll
  O'er earth's proud sons ; and visions vain
Become one waste of ruin wide,
  And terrors grapple hearts of sin ;—
That soul e'en then doth safe abide
  In Christ ,—the Lord has shut him in.

This refuge, Lord, be ever mine ;
  This ark of Christ wherein I come.
'Mid breaking seas it floats sublime ;—
  It shelters from impending doom.
The rest, the peace, profoundest joy
  Herein I find, no blasts of sin,
No tempests wild can e'er destroy ;—
  For thou, O Lord, hast shut me in.

—Sel.

Eternal Blamelessness.

"Blameless in the day of our Lord Jesus Christ." —1 Cor. 1: 8.

There are several words used to declare what a Christian man should be. He is to be "blameless" (1 Thess. 3: 13), "unrebukeable" (Philip. 2: 15), "without spot" (1 Peter 1: 19), faultless" (Jude 24), "undefiled" (Song of Solomon 5: 2). All these words are to be more or less realized in every Christian,—in measure here, in all fulness hereafter.

They are chiefly negative; in the Greek, remarkably so; describing a Christian not so much by what he is as by what he is not. But this is striking and full of meaning; inasmuch as it reminds him of the sin out of which he was taken, and from which he is called to be separate. It reminds him of that evil world from which he has been delivered, and from which he is to keep himself unspotted. He was a sinner once, nothing but a sinner. From sin, wrath, pollution, ungodliness he is taken, and from them he must keep aloof.

These characteristics may be divided into three kinds: judicial, priestly, personal.

1. Judicial. The word used in our text is the judicial one. It means one that cannot be challenged, or accused, or impeached in law. It is another form of the same word as used in (Rom. 8: 33), "Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect?" A Christian is one against whom there is not only no condemnation, but no accusation. He is a sinner, yet no man, nor angel, nor devil, may accuse him, or mention his guilt to God. This is the footing on which we stand.—unaccusable! Blessed footing to one who feels that he is the chief of sinners. The chief of sinners, yet beyond the reach of all accusation! How is this? Because there was one who was accused in his stead; who owned the accusation as if it were His own; who allowed sentence to pass against Himself, and was condemned for another's guilt,—the Just for the unjust.

2. Priestly. I might call it sacrificial. The word used in such places as Eph. 1: 4 is the same as that in 1 Peter 1: 19, "the Lamb without blemish, and without spot." This unblemishedness has special reference to our fitness for worship and service. And this we derive from the unblemished Lamb himself, and specially from His blood. It is His blood that cleanses and fits us for entering Jehovah's courts, and ministering as His priests at His altar; for "we have an altar." I speak of the priesthood of believers, the priesthood which a sinner enters on when he believes on the Son of God. Let us make constant use of the Lamb and His blood to keep ourselves unblemished for sacrifice or service; for we are to present even our bodies as living sacrifices unto God (Rom. 12: 1).

3. Personal (Philip 2: 15; 1 Thess. 3: 13). We are forgiven and delivered from wrath that we may be personally holy; holy in heart and life; saved from sin, conformed to Christ. We are delivered from wrath, from Satan, from self, from the world, from sin, from vanity, ignorance, from the lust of the flesh and eye. We are made like "the second man" (1 Cor. 15: 47), "the last Adam" (2 Cor. 15: 45), in God's image. We delight in the law of God; we are transformed by the renewing of our minds. Our life is spiritual, our character, our conversation, our joys, our pursuits. Everything is spiritualized in character, aim, and tone. All true religion is personal, not a thing of proxy; a real inward thing, not a form, or a creed, or a shadow, or a rite. It penetrates the entire being, pervading the whole life, and influencing everything about the man, great or small. Holiness is to be everything in and about the man.

If, then you call yourself a Christian, consider how much is expected from you; how much God expects from you; how much Christ, how much the angels, how much the church, how much the world. All eyes are on you, and great expectations are formed of you. Consider,

(1.) Your names. They are "saint," "Christian," "redeemed from among men," "followers of the Lamb." Do not these call you to holiness, to blamelessness.

(3) Your designations. You are the lights of the world, the salt of the earth; pilgrims, strangers, virgins, cross bearers, kings and priests; a temple, a habitation of God.

(4) Your calling. You are called with a holy calling. Everything in connection with your calling is holy,—its past eternity, its present working, its everlasting prospects. You are called to glory, honor and immortality.

(4.) Your hopes. They are sure and bright,—a h'ly kingdom, an undefiled inheritance, a pure and splendid city, into which nothing that defileth shall enter.

(5.) Your companionships. They are all heavenly and pure. Your ties have been broken with this present evil world. Old friendships are severed, and new ones formed. Of your new companions the chief are God, and Christ, and the Holy Spirit, and the saints that are on the earth. Holy companions shall make a man holy, for as evil communications corrupt good manners, so do good communications elevate and purify evil ones.

If you are Christians then, be consistent. Be Christians out and out; Christians every hour, in every part, and in every matter. Beware of half-hearted discipleship, of compromise with evil, of conformity to the world, of trying to serve two masters,—to walk in two ways, the narrow and the broad, at once. It will not do. Half-hearted Christianity will only dishonor God, while it makes you miserable.

There is abundance of Christianity, so called, in our day. Who does not call himself a Christian? But who cultivates the holiness, the blamelessness, the devotedness, the calm consistency of followers of Christ? Who hates sin as it ought to be hated? Who separates from the world as he ought? Who follows Christ as He ought to be followed? Who walks in the footsteps of the holy Son of God?

The day of Christ here spoke of, is coming. How soon we know not. Year after year is bringing it round. It is the day of decision. It ends the finite and begins the infinite; it ends the temporal, and begins the eternal. It is the day of the Lord Jesus Christ. This is Satan's day, man's day, the world's day; that is the day of Christ, and it is to that day we look, for it we prepare.—Bonar on the Acts and Epistles.

"Thou Shalt Follow Me Afterwards."

A Brother wishes our mind on the meaning of Christ's saying to Peter: "Whither I go, ye cannot follow me now; but thou shalt follow me afterwards." (John 13:36.) The meaning is obviously antagonistic to the popular exposition, which is that Peter was to follow his Master in a disembodied state, for Jesus did not go away in a disembodied state, but he went bodily; so when Peter follows him, he too will go bodily.

What the Saviour meant by "afterwards," we are not left to conjecture, for in the same discourse, immediately after uttering these words, Jesus affirms: "I will come again, and receive you unto myself"—thus negating the claim that Peter had followed him to heaven and been received by him previously.

Christ was caught away from earth bodily; Peter was "afterwards" to follow Jesus in the same manner: but as Jesus was raised from the dead before he was caught away, so will Peter be before he follows Jesus in his ascension from earth, to be confessed of Jesus before the Father and the holy angels in the new Jerusalem above, while the indignation lasts on earth. Then Jesus and the saints will return and "reign on the earth."

That Time Discussion.

I. C. WELLCOME.

I have just finished reading the discussion between Brother C. C. Barker and Brother J. H. Whitmore, on the question: "Is the definite time of the Second Advent revealed in the Holy Scriptures?" They are both able, with well disciplined minds.

The subject is one of great importance, and this discussion, at this time cannot fail to be of much value to the body of Second Advent Christians. Probably no two could have been chosen who could better represent the two views now held among Adventists on this subject, or better prepared to advocate the respective views.

I trust it will be widely circulated and be extensively read by those not now waiting and watching for the Lord. And those who read it will be enlightened and benefitted by seeing the subject so clearly and scripturally handled. I have long desired to see something of this kind before the public, and am thankful to God that his providence has brought it out.

Life and Death.

Life is glorious. Life is fruitful of great deeds. Life carves the soul into Divine symmetry, if we will but grasp it nobly. Life is the battle-ground; the hosts of sin marshaled on the one side, the hosts of holiness on the other; man can choose on which side he will serve, and there is no greater victory than the victory over sin. From the beginning to the end of life, the stalwart arm can always find a sturdy foe; and every blow struck is a blow for suffering humanity, and for Christ who died to redeem it; and every blow struck is sure to be successful.

What is death to this? Death is only an incident; life is the essence. Death is passive; life is active. Death is shrinking; life is aggressive. Death is but for a moment; life is forever. Death is the blot of time; life is the radiance forever.—Gail Hamilton.

New in Christ Jesus.

The paper manufacturer is not nice in the choice of his materials. All come alike to him. The clean and glancing cloth from the table of the rich, and filthy rags from a beggar's back, are equally wellcome. The clean cannot be serviceable without passing through the manufacturer's process, and the unclean can be made serviceable with it. He throws both into the same machine, puts both through the same process, and brings out both new creatures. The Pharisees were scandalized on observing that publicans and sinners came in streams to Christ, and were accepted. "This man receiveth sinners," they complained. Yes, receiveth them; sinners are taken between the wheels, at the commencement of this process; but at the end of it saints in white clothing are thrown out, fit for the kingdom of heaven. Christ does not find any pure on earth; he makes them. Those that stand round the throne in white clothing were gathered from the mire.—Arnot.

The Newspaper and its Readers.

Some one truly says of the attachment that grows up between a good newspaper and its readers: "Stop my paper," words of dread to new beginners in business, lose their terrors after a paper has been established for a term of years. So long as a paper pursues a just, honorable and judicious course, meeting the wants of its customers in all respects, the ties of friendship between the subscribers and the paper are as hard to break by an outside third party as the links which bind old friends in business or to social life. Occasional defects and errors in newspapers are overlooked, by those who have become attached to it through its perusal for years. They sometimes become dissatisfied with it on account of something which had slipped into its columns, and may stop taking it; but the absence of the familiar sheet at their homes or offices for a few weeks becomes an insupportable privation, and they hasten to take it again, and, may be, apologize for having stopped. This we believe to be the common experience in the history of all established newspapers. No friendship on earth is more constant than that contracted by the reader for a journal which makes an honest and earnest effort to merit his continued support.

Miscellaneous.

AT HOME.

—Two-thirds of the capacity of the Philadelphia mint is to be employed in coining silver. Over $1,000,000 will be coined each month.

—The entire Fire Department of Boston is ordered to sign the total abstinence pledge.

—Since the 1st of January over 10,000 books have been copyrighted in this country.

—The free-delivery service in the postal department has nearly reached a position in which its expenses will be paid by local postages, with which it is credited. The system will be extended to all cities having a population of twenty thousand and upward.

—An Italian father and daughter are fighting in the courts, at St. Louis, over $10,000, the proceeds of twenty years of street begging in the large American cities.

—Daniel O'Brien and James Kelly, caught in the act of breaking into the postoffice at Piermont, were, last week, held by Commissioner Betts, to await the action of the United States Grand Jury. This is the second time O'Brien has broken into this postoffice. When caught this time, he and his companion had opened six or seven letters.

—For a long time in the South, and now particularly, railroad tickets have been and are used as currency. Two hundred thousand dollars worth of these are now in circulation in Georgia.

—Great excitement prevails at New York city concerning the recent murder of Generals Ryan, Verona and others, by the Spanish authorities at Santiago de Cuba. It seems that the steamer Virginius was captured in British waters while flying the American flag at her masthead, and her seizure, as well as the massacre of the persons named who were on board of her at the time, calls for instant action on the part of the American Government. What that action should be is plain enough. Let the Cuban Republic be recognized, and money, troops and fleets be furnished, to drive the Spaniards from the island. Forbearance has ceased to be a virtue.

—The "Post Office Bank" is a new topic, comparatively. It is being agitated with some interest. Postmaster General Creswell recommends it strongly, and the president indorses it emphatically. The proposition is to make every Postal Order Office in the United States a Bank of Deposit, where the laboring man can put his hard earnings, for safe keeping, with the assurance that they are safe. Under this system a man can draw his money at any Postal Order Office in the United States—a great convenience.

—During the past month there were issued to Postmasters, of ordinary postage stamps, 83,529,860, valued at $3,250,300; stamped envelopes, plain, 7,964,250, valued at $227,934.20; stamped envelopes, request, 4,264,250, value, $143,736.22; newspaper wrappers, 1,560,000, value, $34,364.80; postal cards, 7,063,500, value, $70,635; official postage stamps, 1,030,660, value, $47,916.30; official stamped envelopes and wrappers, 813,950, value, $16,934.76—making a total value of articles issued, 105,806,785, the aggregate value of which is $3,780,453.61. Since the abolition of the franking privilege, the demand for postage stamps has increased more rapidly than ever before, the number issued during October exceeding the issues of any previous month by about 3,000,000.

—San Francisco, Nov. 11.—In the civil suits of the sailors of the ship Sunrise, against Captain Clarke, to recover damages for personal injuries, pending in the County Court, the defense is proving by Captains that the tying of men up by the wrists for from eight to forty-eight hours is the usual punishment on American vessels.

ABROAD.

—The Old Catholic Congress, at the late meeting at Constance, claimed to have already 100 parishes and 200,000 members.

—Intelligence has just been received of a great victory by the Carlists over the Government troops, after a desperate fight, near Myranda del Agra, in the province of Navarre. The loss of the Republicans was very great, including among the killed Lieut. Gen. Prima de Rivera. Gen. Moriones was wounded and taken prisoner by the Royalists. The Carlists also lost heavily, and among their wounded are Gen. Olla and other [illegible]

—The highest inhabited spot in the world is the Buddhist cloister of Hanle (Thibet), where twenty priests live, at the enormous height of 16,500 feet.

—Mr. Thiers, on Nov. 9th, received a French deputation from San Francisco. During the conversation he declared his belief that the Republic was assured in France.

—Special trains in France, having for some time past been conveying specie to the frontier, are now employed in the transit of gunpowder and arms. "The boundaries must be guarded."

Faith and Works.

J. S. [illegible]

There is no discord or disagreement between Paul on faith, and James on works. Both agree. Faith saves a man. Works save from sin and make the man deserving of salvation. A man can accomplish nothing by works alone, neither is faith of any benefit to a sinner while he is to every good work reprobate. Good works are acceptable to God, proving to him the creature is willing to do all in his power to please God and merit his mercy and grace. Faith comes through confidence in the power and promises of God—believing he is able to wake the dead and give unto all men according as their work shall be. Paul was one of the wisest as well as one of the most learned men of any age; and to properly understand his writings requires careful and constant study. Many a Bible student has pored over Paul's writings and finally drawn an erroneous opinion of him, because they did not understand his words. His writings have to be understood, that the author and his doctrine may be correctly appreciated. Doubtless many of our learned reformers of Methodistic caliber have called Paul an old fogy, and undeserving of a very exalted place in their learned and modern theological chart. Many have fallen out with him because long years ago nearly all Protestant churches conceded the fact that he was a predestinarian, and furnished to John Calvin the material for erecting a church with a very unscriptural and anti christian dogma for its chief corner-stone. I have heard Paul called a "hard shell." No doubt many firmly believe Paul to be the champion defender of their faith, when in truth they no more understood him while reading his epistles, than the heathen in Africa now understand the English language. Thousands have never read for themselves, but have listened to some emphatic declaimer harangue in true primitive style, interlarding with misquoted passages from the dearest and best of books. These quotations are always found in the writings of the apostle Paul. Dear good man! I often wonder what he would say if he could but know how dreadfully his beautiful erudite epistles have been hacked and mutilated by the self-styled theologians of this and past generations. That learning, acquired by diligent study at the feet of Gamaliel, when connected with the wisdom and power of God's spirit, gave to Paul the requisite ability to teach any and every nation in the world the way to life. But alas, how would he blush were he alive to-day to behold the blindness and stupidity of those who give their own crooked interpretations of his edifying epistles. All foolish and absurd doctrines are ascribed to Pauline theology. But Paul never taught but one doctrine—having one faith, one baptism, one Christ, and one God for foundation and support.

I have not time to review his varied writings, but hope it will suffice to say that all he ever wrote was to compass all means on earth to accomplish one great end—the salvation of man. The great aim he had in view was ever uppermost in his mind, as it was ever appearing in the front ground of every pictured thought—the salvation of man from death. Salvation from sin, if salvation were to end here, would be as futile and vain as though none were offered. This great truth Paul labored with unflagging zeal to impress upon the minds of all to whom he spoke or wrote. Hence his herculean efforts to demolish that huge error erected by the Jews upon God's moral law—that men were saved by the deeds of the law. The constant burden which weighed down his noble mind was a knowledge of their awful condition while trusting in the law for righteousness, and rejecting Christ, who had become unto all believers, "righteousness, justification, sanctification and redemption." He struggles, though in bonds and physical suffering, with a deathless energy to free his kinsmen from the bondage of the law. They had stumbled and fallen, supposing the law to be sufficient for salvation and eternal life. This would not have been such a great error if man were indeed possessed of an immortal spirit, as doubtless the keeping of God's moral law would have given to the soul of the self-righteous Pharisee a sure and peaceful rest in Abraham's bosom. But the duality of man being a fatal error, liable to lead man to death, the apostle Paul holds out to all the offer of life—simple individual life—who reject the law as their saviour, and accept Christ as such. This he proves to be absolutely necessary from the fact that righteousness was not of the law. "For (says he), if there could hav been a law given that could have given life, surely righteousness (the righteousness of faith) would have been by the law." That is to say, had the law been perfect, Christ need not have suffered and died, for the law would have been able to raise up the dead. But he shows the office of the law—serving a double purpose to hinder and keep us from sin and bring us unto Christ that we might through him be justified by faith in his name. All the Jews, except a few of the common people, rejected Christ because, as they thought, he was making the law and their traditions of none effect. Paul shows them it were impossible to obtain life by any other name. The righteousness of the law did not amount to anything, because by sin came death, and it passed upon all flesh. No law could put a stop to death, as it had by traduction become independent of sin. The doer of the law, if he accepted Christ as his Life giver, was not to be condemned, for he that doeth the deeds of the law shall live in them—never theless, according to the nature and the constitution of sinful man, death would overtake him, and then the law had no power to arrest its skeleton arm or snatch its victim from its relentless grasp. The law fails here, and Christ comes to our aid and requires of us the exercise of faith. Saith the voice of the Saviour, "Believest thou that I am able to do this thing?" Can I restore the sick to health, make the lame to walk, open the eyes of the blind, calm the raging seas, feed with a mouthful the mighty multitude, bring back to life the decaying corpse—can I do all these miracles? Faith answers, yea Lord, thou canst do all thou wouldst. for thou art the Son of the living God, and hast the words of eternal life. Faith dares not inquire how these things are to be done. She does not philosophize before accepting the result of all mysterious problems, when God himself makes the declaration, and establishes the truth of his words by many miracles. The miracles are proofs, and the helpless condition of man inclines him to believe. He hath need to believe, because he sees no other chance to obtain life. Dire necessity impels him to cast all his doubts to the winds, and come boldly up to the throne of grace. Paul taught that death kills men, and left them in the grave until the great day when the secrets of men's hearts shall be made known. He told the rebellious Jew—the proud Pharisee, that in the law there was no strength to save, except Christ come and fulfill the law. Then Christ becomes the end of the law for righteousness unto every one that believeth. But he failed to beat this truth into the Jews as a nation, and unto this day they are seeking righteousness through the deeds of the law. God help them, and graft them in again. May they not yet be saved, as they "touching the election are beloved for the fathers' sakes?"

James says faith without works is dead, being alone. He that has the true faith will see the need of good works. The kind of works James speaks of would naturally spring from the heart holding the true Christian faith. "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this: To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world." This language agrees with all of Paul's writings, and only shows that the true and faithful Christian will be charitable and strive at all times to please God by keeping the body, with its fleshly lusts, in subjection. I find it much easier to keep the body from sin since the truth has been made clear to me that the body has to be rewarded or punished for the deeds done while in the flesh. There is no poor weak body for the immortal soul to impose upon, and charge with every impropriety, as is too often the case with those who think to escape when sin overtakes them.

The truth is, Paul and James are agreed. One tries to convince men of the need of a resurrection in order to obtain eternal life with its joys; while the other exhorts to good works, that when Christ shall come, God, who can not look upon sin with the least allowance, may give to the faithful Christian the crown of life. Faith is the antidote for death—good works the barrier against sin. The one allays our fears of the grim monster—enabling us to say with Paul, "Oh death, where is thy sting, where thy victory, boasting grave?" While the other makes us feel worthy to be called the children of God—having through faith done all to subdue the evil passions and sinful lusts of our nature, that thereby we may be justified and accounted worthy, when Christ shall come, to be crowned with immortality and clothed with the clean white linen—the righteousness of saints.

Come, Lord, with angelic hosts, and may we who are accounted good and faithful workers, have Abraham, Isaac and Jacob for our companions forever. Amen.

Christian Experience.

E. A. GIBSON.

"Commit thy way unto the Lord; trust in him, and he shall bring it to pass."

While passing through the various scenes of this inconstant life, how important it is to have a friend in whom we can trust, and have confidence to know that he is ever ready to lend a helping hand to relieve our wants and supply our needs, and comfort us while traveling through this world of trials and disappointments, where all is vanity and vexation of spirit. Well may we call such an one a friend, and we cannot too highly esteem the kindness of the one who (good Samaritan like) binds up our wounds, and demands that we be cared for till we be able of ourselves to stand and walk. Truly we would say, this is our neighbor and friend. Yet how much greater the importance of having true fellowship with that Friend who has said: I will be with thee alway, even unto the end. "I will not leave you comfortless;" "my grace shall be sufficient for you." "In six troubles I will be with you, and in the seventh I will not leave you."

Our experience for a number of years has been, that in every hour of trial, through every time of trouble or disappointment, when we have cast all our cares upon Jesus, this friend that sticketh closer than a brother, has cared for us. This God is our refuge and strength; "therefore we will not fear what man may say of us;" for "evil doers shall be cut off; but those that wait upon the Lord, they shall inherit the earth." Oh, how it makes me rejoice, even as I write these few imperfect lines, to know that he is soon coming to earth again, and what for? Why, to bring the welcome tidings that our work is done! Then, and not till then, may the servant of God sing,

"His glorious warfare past,
The battle fought, the victory won,
And he is crowned at last."

When I remember these things, I ask myself the question, "Why art thou cast down, O my soul, and why art thou disquieted within me?" And why go I mourning because of the oppression of the evil one? O how many of my brethren and sisters will join me in asking for a closer walk with God, more of a sacred nearness to him, more of that meek and lowly spirit that was in Jesus, our Leader? O, is it not awfully grand to be living in these momentous days—this age in which we may be looking for and expecting every day the return of our absent Lord without sin (or sin-offering) unto salvation—salvation to all his people? To all such as look for him will he "arise with healing in his wings." Then let us gird up ourselves, dear brethren, and be strong in the Lord, always abounding in good works, having our lamps trimmed and burning, lest, coming suddenly, we be found sleeping.

I am striving each day to get nearer my God, and to more fully commit all my ways unto him; and knowing that he is able to save all those that put their trust in him, I am willing to trust him yet a little longer. Ere long the voyage will be ended and the old ship Zion will cast her anchor, and we shall be safe within the vail. O blessed day! O glorious hope of immortality; eternal life in the kingdom. Is not this worth contending for? What if the world should frown on us for believing these things? What if we do have some trials by the way? Did not Jesus say, "Blessed are ye when men shall revile you and persecute you, and say all manner of evil against you, falsely, for my sake"? Then let us rejoice and be glad that we are able to suffer shame and reproach for his name. Think on what the Saviour bore in the gloomy garden, sweating as it were great drops of blood to procure our pardon. Ah! was ever pain, was ever love like this? Let us see to it, Christian friends, that we neither murmur nor complain of our lot. They that conquer shall wear the crown, "he that endureth to the end shall be saved." May I meet you all in that kingdom, is my prayer.

Spiritism.

S. E. MABEY.

Having the opportunity to attend a Spiritist lecture a short time since, I pen a few items for the consideration of the readers of the TIMES.

The subject was introduced, and the argument presented in such a way that it seems that if the Scripture that speaks of Satan's being "transformed into an angel of light" ever is to be fulfilled, it is now.

She commenced (the woman that lectured) by reading 1 Cor. 12, as a "foundation of that ancient spiritism of Christ and the apostles, so intimately connected with modern spiritism," and closed the chapter by quoting language of Paul, "Yet show I unto you a more excellent way" (and that was spiri*tism* in modern form). She endeavored to tell us "what she knew about it," stating that the law of nature was discovered about twenty-five years ago, in Hydesville, N. Y., by some children who were at play, and heard a sound of something like a telegraphic signal, and that by agreeing on a plan, they received answers to questions pro and con, and from that time it began to spread, until she finally learned the secret of "the Old Time Inspiration."

In her remarks she said she never could believe in the immortality of the soul until she had received this new revelation, and that three-fourths of the believers in that doctrine found no positive proof of it in the Bible, and that the Bible had need of spiritism to sustain it, instead of its deriving any help from the Bible.

She was led to believe by what she saw outside the Bible, and related some incidents which I will give as correctly as possible.

At Rockford, the place of her nativity, she saw, at Mr. Haskel's, a very large, heavy family bible, taken by this unseen force from one place in the room to another, and opened to a passage of Scripture.

At another time she saw a little girl (in trance state, I suppose) take a book in Greek and read correctly, who had no understanding of Greek whatever. As she did not believe in any supernatural power, she endeavored to account for the various manifestation of spiritism on the same principle as that of telegraphing; but I failed to see the analogy, for, by the way, she spoke of the trance state, as the same agency as that manifested in camp-meetings; said she saw five persons in trance at a Methodist camp-meeting by same principle of mesmerism or psychological materialization. Said revivals of religion were the result of mesmerism. Had seen Eld. Knapp, the revivalist, use the same power. That might be true, but the query is, how can dead folks use that power? But she got over the difficulty by explaining that the—conscious—never-dying—immortal—spirit-entity—intelligences—were born—at—the—death—of—the—body. Departed spirits of dead people returned to communicate with the living. One of the reasons why she believed it was, that in her investigation of this nonsense (for so it seems to me to be in the light of God's word, yea, more than this, "the devil's lie,"), she said she saw the appearance of a brother who had died four years previously—he spoke to her and said, "It is all TRUE." "The old adversary, the devil," Peter says, "is going about as a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour." And also Scripture states that, "In the last times many shall give heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils." And it would have been a very unwise policy for Satan to have told her anything else than "that it is all true." How crafty! He gets people to read their Bibles first—or, perhaps, to pray—finally to sit in the circle—and then they see, as they suppose, the spirit of a friend, and then they are "led captive by Satan at his will," and "left to believe a lie."

Of course, the woman of Endor was brought up as Bible proof that God sanctioned this kind of business; but had she read a little more Bible we think her argument would have upset itself. The "transfiguration on the mount," and some other points of Scripture were all mixed up with what she saw and "knew about spiritism."

In St. Louis, with Mrs. A. Stewart, trance-medium, she saw, at a circle convened at a certain house, in open space, in a curtain, appearance of hands, and arms, and faces.

Again. A Unitarian minister, in investigating spiritism, saw (to make the story short) the spirit of his wife's sister. She pointed to him and said, "When you go home, you tell Helen you saw me here,"—repeated it three times, more emphatically each succeeding time.

He was convinced; went home—was dismissed from church. Yet that very church retained the foundation of this fable, which caused his ruin. If a spirit entity survives the death of the body, why may it not come back and communicate with the living, if that position be true? This is but a device of the devil to lead people astray from the Lord to destruction.

How can these manifestations be accounted for? Bible truly is silent as regards proof of this doctrine, and so they themselves admit, by rejecting it in the main; but it does teach the way of truth more perfectly, that man is unconscious in death until the resurrection morn, in a state of quiet and rest. The Psalmist David (146: 4) says the "very day a man dies his thoughts perish." The wise man says: "The dead know not anything; neither have they any more a reward or portion in anything done under the sun. The memory of them is forgotten." Take away this theory of a spirit entity and the whole fabric of spiritism falls to the ground, or reverts back on to the true cause, evil spirits, or demons.

In summing up, I came to the conclusion, as she admitted, she did not believe in a devil, or hell, that she was deceived.

She admitted the principle of trance state to be a mesmeric state; if so, who is the operator? Not her supposed friends, for they are dead, so Scripture affirms. But devils, called unclean spirits, or fallen angels, have power superior to man to make themselves visible or invisible. They know just how her friends look and how to imitate their voice, and could draw a panoramic scene when people are waiting in the circle, to deceive them; could use some natural law, if they please to call it so, to mesmerize those who throw themselves into his power, and lead them to perdition.

May this not be the cause? Other positions, which I have not time to mention, show the same fact.

We are truly near the consummation of the blessed hope—the jots and tittles of prophecy are fast filling up. All over the land the spirit of antichrist is raising up, declaring that there is no God, or Christ. "That man is as much the Son of God as Christ is." So this lecturer admitted; and with Scripture we would say, "And when they shall say unto you, Seek unto them that have familiar spirits, and unto wizards that peep and mutter should not a people seek unto their God?" To the law and testimony, if they speak not according to this it is because there is no light in them." (Is. 8: 19, 20.)

Follow After Godliness.

BY L. C. KERR.

"Be ye, therefore, followers of God as dear children; and walk in love, as Christ also hath loved us, and hath given himself for us an offering and a sacrifice to God for a sweet-smelling savor." (Eph 5:1–2.)

As a tree is known by its fruits, so are men known by their works, "for a good tree bringeth forth good fruit, but an evil tree bringeth forth corrupt fruit." And taking this as a criterion and a rule, we may be able to test, in a manner, what the great goal is at which men aim, whether it be God or the world. For "out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh, and with the lips confession is made unto salvation."

If we would know which men are of as we travel through this wide world, we need only to watch their conversation, as it is specific to their motives. If the conversation be of a godly sort, there is the heart of the individual, but, if of evil, a corrupt heart; for where a man's heart is there are his treasures." A good man out of the good treasure of the heart, bringeth forth good things, and an evil man out of the evil treasure bringeth forth evil things. "For by thy words thou shalt be condemned." (Matt. 12:35–37.)

The prevalent topic of most people seems to be how they can get the most money: every where we go, we hear conversation all in that direction, when not in folly, and worldly pleasures, and obscenity, and such other ungodliness, thus developing their unholy pursuits, and their carnal and fleshly desires. Brethren, if by the words of our mouth we are rewarded, let us take particular heed to our conversation, for "if we are risen with Christ, let us seek those things above where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God, and mortify our members on the earth, covetousness, filthiness of the flesh, hatred, malice, strife, envy, having no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, for because of these things cometh the wrath of God upon the children of disobedience. "Seeing we, as Christians, look for such things, as are promised by God to those that love him, what manner of persons ought we to be? We ought to walk as Christ walked;" "Wherefore he saith, Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light." "See that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, redeeming the time, because the days are evil." (Eph. 5: 14,15,16.)

To arise from the dead, in this sense of the term, is to arise from dead works, putting off the old man and his deeds, thus purifying our hearts with the spirit of our Master, and awaking from our sleep of sin, "for ye were sometime darkness, but now are ye light in the Lord:" let us walk as children of the light, "for if the word spoken by angels was steadfast, and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward, how shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation." And as we shall give an account of every idle word in the day of judgment, (Mat. 12:36) we should take heed lest we enter into temptation, knowing that Satan will attack us on our weakest points, and we want to fortify ourselves strongly on those points, that we may be able to stand the firy darts of the enemy, which can only be accomplished by deep and fervent prayer to him who is able to succor us who are tempted. Again, if we have the spirit of Christ, we are of him, and things which are evil are offensive to us. But notwithstanding our hatred of evil, the devil may take us unawares, when we neglect our duty, being off our guard, and cause us to speak and do things that we would not have done had we trusted more to Christ and less to ourselves. We ought to improve every opportunity of "self denial" and attribute more to the strength of a willing and faithful God. Men depend too much to their own strength and ability in resisting the evil, to become successful in overcoming temptations. If "every imagination of the thoughts of man's heart is evil continually," wherein does lay that opposing strength to overcome evil except it be given him of the Lord?

John says, (2:6.) "He that saith he abideth in him, ought himself also to walk even as he walked." Which does not altogether signify a word, but a form, for many there be who profess to abide in him, and their works and walk are directly opposed to it. But when we find a man of this description, viz., that "loves not the world, neither the things that are of the world," "verily in him is the love of God made perfect" For "if any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." "For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world. And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof, but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever." (vs. 15–17.) It is a shame to see those who profess to love the Lord of glory, fellowship those of the world, and thus become partakers of their evils, to patronize them in any of their worldly ways, in dress and fashion, in conversation, or to characterize them in any practice which is opposed in the least to Christ and his truth. Finally, my brethren, we have to come out from the world, deny ourselves, take up our cross, and follow Christ whithersoever he goeth. "And marvel not, my brethren, if the world hate you." We know that it hated, and does continue to hate, Christ, and if we will love him we must expect to incur the hatred of an ungodly world. Let us have Christ irrespective of the cost, for if we commence to count the cost, and "take hold of the plough-handles and look back, we are not fit for the kingdom of heaven."

Lastly, my brethren, let us love one another as God hath loved us, and let us admonish one another.

Spirit Birth.

SAMUEL KAIL.

"Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." (John 3: 3).

This language was addressed to Nicodemus by the great Teacher who spake as never man spake. And greatly to his astonishment, he was told he must be born again, which appeared to be a great mystery to Nicodemus; and before he could understand or comprehend its meaning, our Saviour had to give him an explanation of what the man was like after he was born again. And we shall do well it we take heed to the explanation our Saviour gave:

"The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh or whither it goeth: So is every one that is born of the Spirit." (John 3:7.) We are positively told we must be born again, not twice or thrice as the case may be, but once more, which will take place at the time we are born of God from the dead, or a similar change at that time. And that is the reason that if a man is not born again he can not see the kingdom of God; for if Nicodemus should fail to be born from the dead, it will be an impossibility for him to see the kingdom of God, for the dead see not, neither do they know anything; for says Job: "His sons come to honor, and he knoweth it not: and they are brought low, but he perceiveth it not of them."

I am fully aware that there are many who believe they are born of God at conversion. I was one of that class for many years.

We will investigate the explanation that the great Teacher gave in regard to the birth of the Spirit. There we find the man that is born of the Spirit, is represented as the wind: it is not every Spirit that is represented as the wind, but it is every one. Who does the word "one" stand for? Does it stand for the Spirit? No. Does it not stand for the man that is born of the Spirit? Yes. Then it is the man, that is born of the Spirit that is represented as the wind.

And where is the man, that professes to be born of the Spirit, that the language of Christ's explanation will apply to? I have, failed to come across that man. John says, "Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin: for his seed remaineth in him: and he cannot sin, because he is born of God." (John 3:9.)

In the foregoing Scripture we are taught the impossibility of sinning after they are once born of God, for, says John, his seed remaineth, it cannot be lost; but the seed that is sown at conversion is very frequently lost. Please read the 13th chapter of St. Mathew; there we find those that had read the word of God with joy in their hearts; by and by, the enemy plucked the seed, and they became unfruitful. So we see there is a possibility of losing the seed that is sown at conversion: but when we are born of God, it is an impossibility for us to lose the seed, and impossible for us to sin while the seed remains, because we are born of God. It is said that Christ was the first-born among many brethren, which was the work of the Spirit—born of God from the dead. Says John: "Which were born not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." (St John 1:13.) This language was spoken in direct reference to Christ's birth from the dead, and we must be born the same as he was, as he is the first fruits of them that slept; and, we find in his birth there is no will of blood, nor of the flesh, nor of man, but of God. According to the language of the apostle there is but one will in this birth, which is the will of God; man has nothing to do with it, according to the Scriptures. So when man is once born of God, whose will it is, he shall partake of every Divine attribute of God, which is one of the laws of nature and qualities of that which it is born of: and we become the legitimate sons and daughters of God. Then is fulfilled Christ's language to the Jews, where he says. It is not written in your law, I said ye are gods. You that believe that you was born of God at conversion, permit me to ask you a few questions: Can a person ever be unborn after he is once born? If not, How can he be born again when he is already born? The child was born of the flesh, which is flesh, and it is impossible for that child to be born of the flesh again; just so with those that are once born of the Spirit,—an impossibility for them to be born the second time of the Spirit, which would be again in direct opposition to the laws of nature; and I verily believe God will never violate his laws when there is no necessity of it. Christ was the first-born from the dead, which birth, I verily believe to be the Spirit birth, that Christ taught Nicodemus, after which he made his appearance in the house amongst his disciples when the door was shut, and they could not tell from whence he came, and they could not tell whither he went. So, says he is every one (not him alone) that is born of the Spirit. After his resurrection, many of the saints that slept arose and walked into the Holy city Jerusalem; from there, where did they go? no man can tell. Here is a miraculous thing the number consisting of many, which many I verily believe to consist of one hundred and forty-four thousand. Yet it appears no man can tell us whither he went. What does all this mean? They, too, were born of the Spirit, and made like unto Christ. John says, "Beloved now are we the sons of God." (1 John 3: 2.)

Says one: We must have been born of God. Says Paul: "We are all the children of God, by faith, in Christ Jesus." (Gal. 3:26) Then according to Paul we are the children of God, and if children then we are the beloved sons of God, as John declairs It is very necessary for us to to understand in what sense we are the sons of God. Says Paul, By faith, in Christ Jesus. Again says he: Faith is the substance of things hoped for the evidence of things not seen, still in the future.

Then we are not the legitimate sons of God by a birth, but by faith through which the Holy Ghost is given, which gives the substance and evidence of things to come; and among the things to come is the legitmate birth from God, or a similar change when he comes; we then are only the children of God by an adoption into the family of God's people. When we, according to the law of the land on adoption, adopt our neighbor's son into our family, does it make him our son by birth or blood relation? I answer, no, yet through the fulfillment of the requirements of the law it gives to him a full assurance of all the rights of a legitimate son to his portion of the adopted father's inheritance; just so, when we are begotten through faith, which is the fulfillment o the Divine law of God, which, then gives us a full assurence of things to come. Says one: Does not John say, "Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ, is born of God?" Yes: But what, does the word "believeth" signify? Faith. Then they are begotten or adopted into the family of the people of God through faith, in Jesus Christ, and not by being born, as the translators have rendered it.

A misapplication of the birth of the Spirit to conversion has laid the ground work for a fearful doctrine, which is, once in grace, always in grace; or in other words once converted, always converted, and never can sin, because they say they are born of God, and it is impossible to be lost, which is a fact if we apply the birth to conversion, or if conversion means the Spirit birth.

The Christian Life.

Onward.

"Casting aside every weight."

Silent, like men in solemn haste,
Girded wayfarers of the waste,
We press along the narrow road
That leads to life, to truth, to God.

We fling aside the weight, the sin,
Resolved the victory to win;
We know the peril, but our eyes
Rest on the grandeur of the prize.

No idling now, no wasteful sleep,
Our hands from earnest toil to keep,
No shrinking from the desperate fight.
No thought of yielding or of flight.

No love of present gain or ease,
No seeking man or self to please;
With the brave heart and steady eye,
We onward march to victory.

The Right Sort of Religion.

We want a religion that goes into the family and keeps the husband from being spiteful when dinner is late —keeps the wife from fretting when the husband tracks the newly washed floor with his muddy boots, and makes the husband mindful of the scraper and the door mat; keeps the mother patient when the baby is cross, and keeps the baby pleasant; amuses the children as well as instructs them; wins as well as governs; projects the honeymoon into the harvest moon; and makes the happy hours like the eastern fig tree, bearing in its bosom at once the beauty of the tender blossom and the glory of the ripening fruit. We want a religion that bears heavily, not merely on the "exceeding sinfulness of sin," but on the exceeding rascality of lying and stealing; a religion that banishes small measures from the counters, small baskets from the stall, pebbles from the cotton-bags, clay from paper, sand from sugar, chiccory from coffee, annatto from butter, beet juice from vinegar, alum from bread, strychnine from wine, water from milk cans, and buttons from the contribution box. The religion that is to save the world will not put all the big strawberries at the top and all the bad ones at the bottom. It will not offer more baskets of foreign wine than the vineyards ever produced bottles, and more barrels of Genesee flour than the wheatfields of New York grow, and all her mills grind. It will not make one-half a pair of shoes of good leather and the other of poor leather, so that the first shall redound to the maker's credit, and the second to his cash.

It will not put Jouvin's stamp on Jenkins' kid gloves, nor make Paris bonnets in the back room of a Boston milliner's shop, nor let a piece of velvet that professes to measure twelve yards come to an untimely end in the tenth, or a spool of sewing silk that vouches for twenty yards be nipped in the bud at fourteen and a half, nor the cotton thread spool break to the yard-stick fifty of the two hundred yards of promise that was given to the eye, nor yard wide cloth measure less than thirty-six inches from selvage to selvage, nor all, wool delaines and all-linen hand kerchiefs be amalgamized with clandestine cotton, nor coats made of woolen rags pressed together be sold to the unsuspecting public for legal broadcloth. It does not put bricks at five dollars a thousand into chimneys it contracted to build of seven dollar materials, nor smuggle white pine floors that have paid for hard pine, nor leave yawning cracks in closets where boards ought to join, nor daub ceilings that ought to be smoothly plastered, nor make window blinds of slats that cannot stand the wind, and paint that cannot stand the sun, and fastenings that may be looked at, but are on no account to be touched. The religion that is to sanctify the world, pays its debts. It does not consider that forty cents returned for one hundred cents given is according to the gospel, though it may be according to law. It looks upon a man who has failed in trade and who continues to live in luxury, as a thief. It looks upon a man who promises to pay fifty dollars on demand with interest, or without interest, as a liar.

Advent Christian Times.

WM. SHELDON, - EDITOR.

All matter for publication in THE TIMES, whether articles, letters, obituaries, or appointments, should be directed to

WM. SHELDON,
27 McCormick Block, Chicago, Ill.

Give your Name, Postoffice, County and State every time you write.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, November 18, 1873.

WE shall fill orders for the "Disembodied State Examined," this week so far as the present edition will go, and a new edition will be struck off in a few days, when all orders will be filled.

THE six months probation system has been set aside by the Methodist church, South; and the change gives general satisfaction. It always seemed to us quite unlike the plan of Deity to have converts kept out in the cold porch six months before being allowed to enter the church.

We spent last Lord's day with the friends in Chicago, and spoke to them twice at the house of Dr. Rice. The chapel formerly occupied by them is being repaired. Though the Chicago church has been without a pastor since Elder Burr left them, we trust they yet will see better days, and as one man unite in letting the true light shine in that great city.

THE Business Agent has ordered the paper maker to manufacture $180.00 worth of Tract paper, which we greatly need for new editions of tracts; but not having the money to pay for it, the paper lies in the hands of the paper maker. We ought to have it speedily converted into tracts, but wish to keep out of debt. Who will help augment the Western Tract Fund, that we may do much more in this department?

AN exchange furnishes us with an obituary, in which reference is made to the deceased in these words:

> "'He sleeps in Jesus, blessed sleep,
> From whom NONE ever wake to weep.'
>
> His departure to paradise was improved by Rev. Edwin Waters, of Bridgeborough, N. J., from Matt. 25:21."

Is paradise a realm of sleep? If so, why might they not as well sleep in the grave till the waking up time? In sound sleep there is no consciousness; if there is, as an English writer observes, "it must be a consciousness of which we are not conscious." Certainly an unconscious state in paradise has not much advantage over an unconscious state in the grave.

WE sometimes hear much said about interpreting the Bible in harmony with the laws of nature, and on this hypothesis the resurrection, and the miraculous conception, and other miracles, are discarded. Nonsense intensified. Who made the laws of nature, but God? Did he make laws higher than himself? Is he a servant to his own laws? Every miracle is above the laws of nature, and also mysterious in the eyes of such law. God's power is not to be measured or limited by any laws known to human beings. He has power to reorganize and reanimate the dead. God works by power not restricted by laws.

THE question is sometimes asked how God can forgive sins, if Christ pays the debt? God pardons only through Christ. This was as true under the old dispensation as under the new—then it was through a coming Christ, indicated by types, prefiguring "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world." The remedial economy was introduced when the "seed" of the woman was promised, who was to be "bruised" for our sins, but finally to become victorious. Christ "purchased us by his blood," thus exempting us from the claims of a broken law. He "appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself," and "the Lord laid on him the iniquity of us all."

THIS is not the only newspaper office that feels the pressure of hard times. O[illegible]ction it must be apparent to every thinker that newspaper men are more closely pressed than most other business men in times like these. An Exchange justly remarks:

"In hard times merchants who can not sell for cash, can stop buying goods. Not so with newspaper proprietors, who have to be subject to all the expenses of publishing in hard times the same as in easy times."

This train of thought may lead some to remit arrears, even if it involves a little inconvenience on their part.

WE often come in contact with two classes of people that need adjusting to the Divine plan. One class live on theory, and have no relish for experimental religion. Their intellects are enlightened, but their affections are not turned into the right channel. They need a baptism of Divine love, to give a new life to the heart. Another class accept the experimental part of the gospel, but when the theology of the Bible is introduced, they start back in holy horror, as though this were stepping upon an enemy's ground. This class need their intellects enlightened. Is it not better to merge the good qualities in the two classes? God wants men with hearts well stored with heavenly wisdom, and well filled with Divine grace.

PRAYER has an inseparable connection with genuine religion. Prayerless Christians are simply nominal saints. How many profess godliness who are even void of the form, and how many who have the form, are destitute of the power. The heart should possess the spirit of fervent supplication, for acceptable praying, and saying prayers in a cold, formal manner, are two widely different things True prayer is the earnest yearning of an anxious heart. A certain writer has correctly said:

"God looks not at the oratory of our prayers, how eloquent they are; nor at their geometry, how long they are; nor at their arithmetic, how many they are; nor at their logic, how methodical they are; but he looks at their sincerity, how spiritual they are."

"The fervent effectual prayer of a righteous man availeth much." Are our prayers "fervent," or merely formal?

CATHOLICISM still dupes the people with false miracles in various localities. The Catholic Review affirms that "the miracle of the liquefaction of the blood of San Gennaro took place this year with more than ordinary effect," and adds: "The joy of Naples is great, and her people look for happier days."

The Editor of the Weekly Baptist thus comments upon the matter:

"This miracle is, as most of our readers know, a pleasant little conjurer's trick consisting of turning a vial-full of a red substance resembling hardened blood into a liquid form while it is held up in a priest's hand, at which the crowds in attendance shout for joy. We are suprised at this, for we have seen Signor Blitz and Prof. Hartz delight a room full of children and their nurses with similar, and much more ingenious, performances. For instance, we have seen them pour several different kinds of liquor out of an empty bottle held up in their hands, and there was considerable applause; but that a whole city should be made joyous by this little amusement, and look for happier days in consequence, shows how puerile a people can become under the training of superstition."

Earthly House.

BR. SHELDON:—I have read several interpretations of 2 Cor. 5:1-4, but in all I see some difficulty which I cannot harmonize with the exhibition of the forerunner, or first fruits from the dead.

If I say it means a habitation to be brought at the revelation of Jesus, the same as expressed in the saying "in my Father's house are many mansions," why should he say, "if so be that being clothed we shall not be found naked"? Can any thing unclean or naked enter into those mansions? Certainly not.

If I say it means an exchange of this mortal body at death for another body, eternal in the heavens, as is held by many, the same objection is still there, and more also; this does away with the resurrection; otherwise every one will have two bodies. This is certainly a mistake. D. B. ROGERS.

Another brother thus writes about the same matter:

How do you explain 2 Cor. 5:8, and Phil. 1:23, so that they shall not seem to conflict with your belief concerning the state of the dead? I wish you would give at least a short explanation of those more difficult passages that you have not treated of lately.

Yours affectionately, H. W. WEBSTER.

The first brother's difficulty is mainly in overlooking the fact that being "clothed upon with our house which is from heaven," is one thing, and being "clothed upon that mortality might be swallowed up of life," or "being clothed that we shall not be found naked," is another thing, and a prerequisite to the former. We are to be clothed upon with "our house," and also to be "clothed upon" with immortality. The "naked" state is the mortal state, instead of a disembodied state—being without the clothing of immortality.

For a fuller exposition than we have time now to write, we append a few pages of our recent work, "The Disembodied State":

Perhaps no text of Scripture is more frequently misapplied than Paul's statement in 2 Cor. 5:1, "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." Though this is what Paul said, a persistent effort is made to make him mean, "We know that when our body shall die, our soul will go to a home in heaven." But we deny that Paul even hints at the dying hour in this text, or in the context. He makes no allusion to death, or to an emigration of the soul to heaven. The dissolution of the body is not his theme, nor is the disembodied state of the soul so much as intimated; but, as we shall presently see, the epoch specified is the day when temporal things shall be dissolved by fervent heat, and a building of God shall descend from heaven, as a home for the resurrected saints, and mortality be invested with immortality.

But before noticing the apostle's meaning in this text, viewed in the light of the context, we call attention to the fallacy of the popular interpretation giving the results of the assumptions upon which this interpretation rests. Notice the following points:

I. It is assumed that "our earthly house" means the body. But this is the very point that should be proven, before we are called upon to believe it. Assumption is not proof. But the result of this assumption is enough to lead any candid man to abandon the claim after due reflection; for if there is any truth in the assumption that the "earthly house" means the body, then it is equally true that our "house....in the heavens" means another body—a body for each saint, in heaven—and "our house which is from heaven," spoken of in the next verse, must as really mean a body to come down "from heaven." There is no escape from this conclusion while holding on to the assumption that the "earthly house" means the body; for Paul is not using the term "house" in two different senses in the same breath, without giving us any intimation of a change in his meaning; hence, if he means a body when speaking of the "earthly house," he as really means a body when speaking of the heavenly house. This leads to several queries which are legitimate till the popular assumption is abandoned:

1. Is heaven really filled with soulless bodies waiting for earthly bodies to die, to furnish them a tenant? And when an earthly body dies, does a soulless body come "from heaven" to hunt up the disembodied soul? Who ever saw a body coming down from heaven? Mark, nothing is said about going to a house in heaven, but reference is made to "our house which is from heaven"; so, if "house" means body, the soul is not to go off after another body, but that body is to come after the soul. Is it conscious before it comes? If so, what does it want of a soul? If not, how can it find the soul it comes after?

2. Has each saint a body in heaven? And are there bodies there for sinners too? If so, when the sinner is damned, will that innocent body be damned with him? If not, what will become of it? Are there bodies enough there for the whole race, if they will repent, but not to be received by the impenitent? Then what will be done with the overplus, seeing they are "eternal" and cannot be destroyed? If sinners have not bodies there, neither had the saints before their conversion: then are bodies manufactured for the saints at conversion? If so, what becomes of them when they backslide? Are bodies constantly springing into existence in heaven when men repent on earth, and evaporating when men sin on earth?

3. If each new saint receives a new body from heaven at the death of the old body, why need the old body ever be resurrected? And when the old body is resurrected, what will become of the new body? Will each soul have two bodies? Or will the new body then be deserted by the soul, and be again left tenantless? These questions are all proper while the claim continues to be made that the "earthly house" means the body, which involves the conclusion that the heavenly house is as truly another body. If the assumption involves too much, let it be abandoned.

II. It is assumed that the tabernacle is also the body, and its occupant is the soul. But let it be observed:

1. The "earthly house" and the "tabernacle" are not the same, but are two distinct things, else the apostle would be charged with the use of tautology, in talking about "our earthly house of this earthly house," or "our tabernacle of this tabernacle," or if body is meant both by "house" and by "tabernacle;" the meaning would be, "our body of this body." Thus it is evident that, let the house and tabernacle signify what they may, they indicate two different things.

2. The dwellers in this tabernacle are not immortal souls, as it is claimed, for Paul adds in the 4th verse, "For we that are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened: not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life." Who "groan"? "We that are in this tabernacle." "Groan" for what? For immortality—"that mortality might be swallowed up of life." If souls are referred to as groaning, they must be souls possessing "mortality," instead of being immortal souls.

3. This "tabernacle" is not the body, for it is not the tabernacle that groans, but "we that are in this tabernacle do groan;" not we immortal souls, but "even we ourselves do groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, namely, the redemption of our body." (Rom. 8:22.) If the tabernacle were the body, the tabernacle itself would be the groaner, instead of "WE THAT ARE IN" it, as Paul affirms. If "we that are in this tabernacle" are souls, then souls are mortal, and groaning for immortality. So turn the text whichever way you will, it is opposed to popular theology. Let the tabernacle signify whatever it may, it cannot mean body, nor can the earthly house mean body, unless the heavenly house means another body in heaven, thus proving that heaven is full of soulless bodies.

The foregoing considerations pave the way for the inquiry: What is meant by the "earthly house," the "tabernacle," and the "house in heaven"? Paul had just been contrasting temporal or earthly things with eternal or heavenly things, in these words: "While we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: for the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal." Then to throw more light on his statement concerning the temporal things which "we look at," in contrast with the eternal things which we cannot see, he adds: "For we know that if our earthly house [this temporal home] of this tabernacle [tent, or shrouding] were dissolved [with fervent heat] we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."

1. Here "our earthly house," or home—that is, the house of each one, the totality of houses—is said, by implication, to be "made by hands;" in contrast with a heavenly home which is "not made with hands." Our earthly house or home, arranged by human hands, being temporal, will be dissolved in the coming conflagration. But we have an eternal house, now in heaven, thus spoken of by the Saviour: "In my Father's house are many mansions." (John 14:2.) So numerous are its mansions, furnishing homes for all the faithful, that it is also styled a city, "whose builder and maker is God"—"a city to come"—and John saw it "coming down from God out of heaven;" while Paul speaks of it as "our house which is from heaven."

2. The "tabernacle" is not identical with the "house," the house being the the container of the tabernacle: "House of this tabernacle," or "Home of this tabernacle." The tabernacle occupies the house. Evidently the tabernacle indicates, not the body, but its mortal state, in which it now lives and groans for redemption from the bondage of corruption: "We that are in this tabernacle do groan....not that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life." (v. 4.) We learn that we are now said to be clothed with mortality or shrouded with a mortal nature. This clothing, tenting, or tabernacle in which we are now groaning, is to be succeeded by the clothing of immortality. Peter lived in the same kind of a tabernacle: not Peter's soul, but Peter himself, was enveloped in a mortal state or tabernacle; but he expected to put it off, and how? "Even as our Lord Jesus Christ hath showed me." (2 Pet. 1:14.) Peter then goes on to relate the vision witnessed in the holy mount, where he beheld the excellent glory, and a sample of the living and dead saints, together with Jesus, robed in immortal splendor. Here in vision Peter was shown a state superior to that in which he himself was shrouded. Again, Christ more perfectly showed the process of putting off the tabernacle of mortality in his own death—ceasing to live in a mortal state—from which he emerged to the power of an endless life, wearing the robe of immortality: "death hath no more dominion over him." Here we have the glorious first fruits, having exchanged the tabernacle of mortality—the mortal state—for immortality.

We are not only to be clothed upon with our house which is from heaven, but also to be clothed upon with immortality, which will make us fit to live there. For after Paul speaks of our being clothed upon that mortality might be swallowed up of life, he goes on to tell us that God hath "wrought us for the self same thing, who also hath given us the first fruits of the spirit. Therefore, [or for the reason that mortality is to be swallowed up of life, we being wrought for the self same thing], we are always confident, knowing that, whilst we are at home in the body, [referring to the mortal body,] we are absen[illegible] from the Lord....and willing rather [illegible] be absent from the body, [alluding [illegible] the mortal body,] and to be present with the Lord." But the apostle [illegible] here express the thought of [illegible] ent from the body at death, but [illegible] mortality shall be swallowed [illegible] the resurrection, at which [illegible] saint shall have an immortal [illegible] be without a mortal body by [illegible] of a change to the immortal state. Then we shall rise to meet the Lord in the air, and shall be present with the Lord in our heavenly house—absent from mortality. On no other principle can we be present with the Lord, and at no other time. Both the time and manner are revealed. The time is not at death, but at the coming of Christ. The manner is not by entering into a disembodied state, but by putting on immortality. Not by having the body sleep, but by having it transformed into a spiritual body, like Christ's glorious body, fit to be present with the Lord.

Isaiah's New Earth.

Br. Sheldon: I have long been anxious to know the meaning of Isaiah 65: 17, 25. Will there be any distinction in the kingdom of heaven? Will not the last and greatest redeemed sinner be as large and on an equality with the best or greatest saint? And will not infants and children be raise to full grown stature, like Jesus Christ's glorious body? or will they grow up to full manhood?

S. G. Mabie.

Isaiah is contrasting the new earth state, or world to come, with the present world. Here is weeping, death, sin, old age, premature death of children, &c., but there, the child that dieth in this age, shall be perfected as though an hundred years old; and the sinner who has here lived an hundred years, shall then be accursed. Isaiah's new earth, and the revelator's new earth, are identical; and as there "shall be no more death" in the latter, the same will be true of the former. To make Isaiah affirm that the child shall die in the new earth, is to make him clash with John, who affirms that there shall be no death there. The full thought in the Prophet's mind, according to a critical rendering is, the child that shall die in (this age) shall (there) be as an hundred years old; and the sinner that here lives an hundred years—thus being entitled to human veneration—shall there be accursed.

Whether children will rise in matured stature, we are not told; but it is not unreasonable to suppose that the change then due will obliterate all deficiencies. If the person who has a limb amputated at the age of two years, and dies at the age of seventy years, is entitled to a full grown limb at the resurrection, instead of an infants limb, why may not the same change being up the entire body of the infant to maturity? But whether they will come up thus matured, or not, they will be void of helplessness, which is an appendage of mortality, for "when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away."

The Spirit of the Age.

No careful observer can fail to notice the wide difference between the present time and thirty years ago in the principles of morality among people professing godliness. There is a great swerving from the radical principles of the gospel, and a lamentable catering to the conservative principles of carnality, which is subverting true godliness all over the land. An exchange makes the following timely remarks:

> Our plausible and pretentious age is certainly shifting from many good old landmarks by its easy, apologetic, and accommodating terminology. Things are not called by their right names. Thus morality is becoming billowy and uncertain. No one can have failed to observe the wishy-washy way in which principles have of late come to be deflated, and the tender and gentle influences with which their enforcement is attempted.
>
> Even in the pulpit, in many cases, this tendency is discernible. There is by far too much preaching in gloves. The old fashioned truths of God's word which are unpalatable to corrupt human nature, are too frequently either entirely eschewed, or handled with so much delicacy, and accompanied with so many explanations and cautions, that they evaporate into vague generalities, having no direct or personal application. It would not do to offend, it would not do to be harsh, and hence, in many instances, congregations are kept in a circle of texts and discussion which give no alarm, produce no pain, and do not cover one half of the territory of man's nature, which the Bible proposes to occupy as a whole. Any one can see by referring to an old sermon-book, or his own experience of thirty years ago, the difference in pulpit ministrations to which we advert. The truth is not as boldly declared now as then.
>
> It is, however, to other quarters, mainly, we wish our remarks to be directed. There is an increasing disposition to smooth over ungodly actions by clothing them with kind and polite epithets. Once, for a man to fail with full hands, and to defraud his creditors, was to be disgraced; but now such an one is called unfortunate, or is only said to have "suspended." Once, for a man to be dissipated, was to be called a drunkard or a rake; but now he is permitted to pass on with the half compliment that he is "fast," or a "gay" man. The day was, when to be guilty of licentiousness was to draw down contempt and scorn; but now such an one is said to have "that little failing," or he has "got into difficulty." The day was, when to overreach in a bargain was dishonesty; but now it is dignified into "shrewdness"—when to be two faced was to be a deceiver; but now such an one is "timid" or "undecided."
>
> These examples will serve to show what we mean. Nor is the matter one of speculative importance. It lies at the foundation of the purity, peace, and prosperity of the social system. The waters of a river may by a gradual retreat from their bed, make for themselves another bed, and this scarcely be noticed until it is complete. So may the principles by which a community professes to be governed, be transmitted into nearly their opposites by tampering and trifling with the words that define them.
>
> There is a loud call for improvement in this particular. Not only has God pronounced a woe against those who call bitter sweet, and sweet bitter, but the welfare of a people also requires that fidelity should be practiced in this direction. Never should it be forgotten that muchsoever as men dignify vice with names of virtue, such names cannot deceive the Searcher of hearts.

Bible Study.

God's word should not be treated as a reservoir for theological cavilers, but as a fountain of sacred truth, to tell us what we are, whither we are tending, and what we must do and be in order to gain redemption at last. We should study that word with becoming reverence; not to manufacture theology out of it, but to learn the revealed mind of Deity. We should not treat the Bible as gamblers do a pack of cards, or as a theological plaything, to help in theological games. It has been well said by Dean Alford:

> In the study of the Bible the first requisite is faith. Trust this book. Do not be ever trembling for it, still less cavilling at it. In it is found the blessed presence of him whom, if you are a Christian, your soul loves above all things. He who is ever sitting at the feet of Jesus, and learning, will be listening more to his blessed words than to idle voices which float around. The next requisite is intelligence. "Be ye not unwise, but understanding what the will of the Lord is." The Greek language possesses great capacities for expressing minute differences and fathoming profound depths of thought. Another requisite is honesty—a straightforward, candid spirit. Handle not the word of God deceitfully. Every fact is God's fact, sent to thee for thy good. Fear it not, face it, give it its due influence. It may seem unwelcome at first—a visitor whose speech jars on thy snug system of cherished home thoughts; but, depend upon it, thou wilt entertain an angel unawares. The last requisite I name is charity. Oh, my brothers! we all speak and write too many hard and bitter words. We try to break, not to mend, the bruised reed. While we strive to be strong in faith, let us not despise the faith of the weakest; for there will come a day to all of us, when in the giving way of the powers of nature, and the pouring in of the great water floods, we shall grasp at some thing which may hold us up, and carry us over. And then, not how much we have searched out and known, not how much we have disputed and prevailed, will help us, but how much we have lived on Christ, and imbibed his Spirit.

Certain Thoughts.

J. Armour.

There seem to be some difficulties in reference to some items of belief. One thought is about the comparative condition of the wicked and the good. All who have lived and died, of both classes, since the time of Adam, enjoyed to a great extent the same privileges. The dust and the mold of hoary ages has obscured the tombs of each, and they peacefully sleep in hades. We frequently notice that the advantages are in favor of the former. We are told of the wicked flourishing as a green bay tree. The first murderer sleeps as sweetly as the first martyr. The first Adam rests as quietly as did the second three days in Joseph's tomb.

We are perplexed to think that the righteous who died nearly sixty centuries ago are in the same state as the wicked who then passed away, and they have been kept from their reward so long. Those who died 5,000 years ago are as unconscious as they who departed yesterday. So far as this life is concerned and the condition of each between death and the resurrection, the parallel is comparatively exact.

It is the destiny of the former at the last day that we more particularly notice. The main thought is about the duration and intensity of the fire which is to result in annihilation or destruction. We are told about the consuming being as of chaff or stubble. It is well known that these frail materials vanish in almost the twinkling of an eye. Speaking from observation of the effect of fire upon chaff, we may reasonably infer that the duration is less than half a minute.

I was induced to make these remarks after reading this paragraph: "It shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom and Gomorrah in the day of Judgment, than for that city." The doctrine is that fire is then employed not to torture or purify, but to destroy. The suggestion that occurs is about the force of the expression, "more tolerable," if the destruction of all the wicked is to be as sudden as that of chaff or stubble. We should all live so that we may "inherit the earth," for it is fearful to think either of eternal suffering, or of eternal death. I earnestly desire all who read this to strive for the future home of the saints.

[Death is the prison of both saint and sinner till the arrival of the judgment day; and prisoners can be justly treated alike before they are condemned, or acquitted. The "duration and intensity of the fire" to burn the wicked will be regulated by the same Divine interposition that will bring the fire upon them, and by the same infallible precision by which the sinner will be judged for every evil work. Miraculous power and divine wisdom will so take supervision of this event, that Christ's words will be verified, "It shall be more tolerable for Sodom," etc.—Ed. Times.]

Business Agent's Report.

Knowing that all are interested to learn the true situation of the Publishing Society, we take pleasure in presenting the following REPORT.

Among the many discouraging features of the past year's labors, the one most prominent and disastrous has been the tendency on the part of many to disunion and discord. We can grow strong and prosper under the iron heel of persecution, and bid defiance to the errors of modern theology and the world, while our hearts beat in unison and we stand together as a unit in defense of the truth; but let the tie that unites us be sundered, and love and harmony be supplanted with discord, we become an easy prey to the enemy, in whatever form he may attack us.

It is to be deeply regretted by all who love the cause that, although there may be differences of opinion, any should withdraw their support from the paper and hedge up the way of publishing the last great message to a perishing world; and it is hard to understand how any true friend of the cause can be found thus doing. Personal considerations and prejudices should not be allowed to control those who so soon expect the consummation of that "blessed hope."

It would be well to appoint a day of prayer, that the united petitions of the people may be made for the general prosperity of the truth, and that love and harmony may much more abound.

In presenting to you the financial condition of the Society there is no disposition to under-estimate its property, only a desire to give the true value. Recent references to the assets were based upon the last annual report, which, upon thorough investigation, we find was made upon figures largely in excess of the cash value. The following are the assets of the Society:

Value of property on hand............	$ 6,510 11
Balance of cash on hand..............	148 00
Due from subscribers to date..........	4,212 90
Due on individual account.............	918 75
Due on real estate....................	100 00
Total assets........................	$11,889 76

At the commencement of the year the office was burdened with debts, and destitute of means with which to meet its obligations, aside from the regular cash receipts, which alone were insufficient to meet the current expenses. Informal meetings of members of the Board and others interested in placing the Society on a sound financial basis, were held without any apparent success. Being thus left without matured plans, but with strong faith in the loyalty of the friends of the cause, the project of issuing blank pledges suggested itself as a plausible way in which to bring about the desired results, and to-day the Society is in possession of pledges (payable Jan. 1, 1874) of a sufficient amount to enable it to cancel its indebtedness; and to the staunch and tried friends of the cause, and our Master, let all credit be given.

The jobbing department has, during the year, been improved, and received some additions in type and material, and is now possessed of good facilities for executing orders in this branch of the business. The amount of work done has steadily increased, and the profits have averaged a fair margin. This department will continue to receive care and attention, as from it a very creditable revenue can be derived, which may be directed to good use in our work and objects. The attention of our brethren—merchants, and others engaged in business occupations—is directed to this announcement, that their work can be done accurately, promptly, and at much lower rates than by many other job offices.

The Society is nearly destitute of books and tracts, and is without the necessary funds to procure material for printing more. To those who are interested in the dissemination of the truth in new and destitute fields, a glorious opportunity is now offered to assist in the accomplishment of a great work; and to those who are indebted to the office on account of books and tracts, it is the desire to earnestly impress upon your minds the necessity of an immediate settlement of the same.

We commenced the year with 4,294 subscribers, and increased to the 1st of July to 4,502, since then the number has decreased to 4,249. In view of this we would impress upon ALL and our preaching brethren especially, the necessity of more zealously performing their duty in increasing the circulation of their wester[illegible]

D[illegible] year the amount rece[illegible]ption has been only $5,[illegible] while the actual cost of publishi[illegible]g the paper has been $8,000. This wil[illegible] [illegible]able the friends to understand the [illegible]e for the many appeals for pecuniary aid in the past, and why the Society is in debt at the present time.

There is now due on subscriptions up to date, $4,212.90, which, added to the amount that should have been paid in advance for the ensuing year, would give $9,357.90. The payment of this sum would require but a nominal effort on the part of the subscribers and would place the office beyond the possibility of embarrassment. The recent financial panic and the continued stringency of the money market has had the effect to shut off all accommodations of loans or credit for even a short time, and has thrown the office upon its own cash resources. Thus left entirely dependent upon its daily receipts, the office most earnestly appeals to ALL who are in arrears to forward AT ONCE their indebtedness IN WHOLE OR IN PART. Bills have to be met promptly with CASH, and this can be done if the friends will do their duty. Every dollar now received assists us materially, and every neglect of duty in the past will be cheerfully overlooked, if you will give due attention to this matter at once. W[illegible] done must be done soon; and our t[illegible], our talents, and our money should [illegible] placed upon the altar for the furtherance of truth and the saving of men.

Let every one be thankful that eve[illegible] [illegible]me good has been accomplished, [illegible] a few have, by the [illegible]lp of the [illegible], been led to see by [illegible] eye of fai[illegible] the glories of the co[illegible] kingdom, and let all awake to a c[illegible]r realization of the important and r[illegible]onsible character of the work before us; for "the time is coming in the which he will judge the world and all the inhabitants thereof."

Respectfully submitted for your prayerful consideration.

A. W. Tucker.

Statement of cash received and paid out from Oct. 1, 1872, to Oct. 1, 1873:

CASH RECEIVED.

Amount on hand Oct. 1, 1872......	$ 702 02
From subscription on Times.......	5,001 68
" Merchandise....................	2,109 06
" Individual accounts............	1,358 66
" Job work.......................	1,509 91
" Donations......................	963 72
" Debt...........................	536 30
" Rent...........................	75 00
" Fuel...........................	163 85
" Advertisements.................	14 60
" Tent account...................	60 00
Total............................	$12,493 70

CASH PAID OUT.

Paid L. C. Collins, editorial services,	15 50
" W. Sheldon, " "	15 00
" A. W. Tucker, on loan acc't..	583 85
" W. L. Himes, on salary......	365 00
" " " on account.....	725 86
" J. V. Himes, "	274 40
" S. J. Rosbrook, on loan acc't..	250 00
" Interest (D. R. Prescott)......	50 20
" Composition on Times.......	1,964 80
" " " Jobbing, including books and tracts set up for Society.............	727 85
" Work on mail list, correcting, revising and printing.......	211 00
" Labor in press room, including printing Times, books, tracts and all job work...........	832 00
" For books & tracts, other than those printed in the office...	428 38
" For printing paper for Times, books, tracts and jobbing...	2,986 57
" For printing material, including new type for jobbing department, new type cases, new electrotype plates and repairing old plates........	380 22
" Rent city office...............	220 00
" Fuel and lights................	659 57
" Express and freight on office supplies, books and tracts bought and sold..........	77 24
" Postage on letters, bills, books, tracts, and papers sent by mail.......................	309 23
" Expenses, including moving presses, engine and boiler, repairing machinery, building cisterns, traveling expenses, cartage, extra help at office, and various items used in the different departments......	1,165 30
" Individuals on account.......	64 23
Cash on hand....................	174 50
Total...........................	$12,493 70

A. W. TUCKER Treasurer.

Correspondence.

Report of the Western Michigan and Northern Indiana Conference.

Met at Union Mills, Ind., Oct. 2. Eld. Jas. Ferriss in the chair. On motion of Br. Mathewson a committee of three was appointed on credentials. Committee consisted of Brn. Winchell, Mead and Booth.

Committee report from the church at Union Mills, Brn. Booth, Leming, Sr. Clark, as delegates.

Buchanan—Brn. Mead and Matthewson, and Srs. Mathewson and Dumbleton, as delegates.

Sumption Prairie, Ind.—Brn. Cordry and J. P. Rupel, as delegates.

Mudcreek, Ind.—Br. Jas. H. Nafe, delegate.

Porter Center, Mich.—Br Jas. Ferriss, delegate.

On motion of Br. Mathewson the conference appointed three delegates to represent the Northern Indiana and Western Michigan Conference in the W. A. C. P. Society. Delegates appointed were Brn. D. Matthewson, N. J. Winchell and L. P. Fox.

On motion of Br. Mathewson a letter of recommendation was given to Br. N. J. Winchell, as a fit person to preach the gospel.

The ministers that were present to preach the word were Br. Wm. Sheldon, of Chicago, Brn. Mathewson and Ferris, of Buchanan. The preaching was excellent. Eld. Sheldon preached to us several discourses, which revived us very much. The impression he left was good. Every one seemed to wish he would visit us again. The prayer and conference meetings were filled with the Spirit of the Lord. All felt that it was good to dwell together in fellowship and love. On Sunday quite a goodly number partook of the emblems of our Lord's broken body and shed blood, in commemoration of his death, waiting anxiously until he comes to reward the faithful of all ages with everlasting life.

On motion of Br. Mead the conference voted the minutes of this conference be published in the Times and Crisis.

Conference adjourned to call of chair.

Jas. Ferriss, Chairman.

Dr. D. S. Nafe, Secretary.

From Br. A. F. Carpenter, Ill.

Dear Brother: I feel that I can no longer restrain myself from performing an act that has long been due yourself and others, who have labored with so much earnest zeal for the promotion of truth, the correction of error, and the vindication of God's word and character. To remain longer a silent, inactive witness to the efforts of others in spreading light and truth, will require of me the abandonment of every principle of honor as a man, of every whit of self-respect, and my love for Christ and his cause, as a Christian. My friends may turn their backs upon and ridicule me for apostacy from long established creeds. The M. E. church may ostracize and banish me from their society, but to consent to the above conditions, I never can. To lay aside every principle that I have loved and cherished, I never shall. I was born of Christian parents, nourished and admonished in all the doctrines of the M. E. church, and in the dawning of my manhood, when I turned to lead a new life, it is no strange thing that I should have connected myself with that church, without questioning the truthfulness of these doctrines. They had been instilled into my mind in childhood, and I accepted them in after years as true according to the Scriptures; and as such, for eight years, I have labored with some zeal to propagate them: but my work in that direction is at an end, and I can no longer remain a coterie with those who hold and inculcate teachings so subversive of truth, that so thoroughly deceive and are so prolific of evil to society, that so emphatically impeach and vilify the character of God and Christ.

In beginning as I did, a few months since, an investigation of my earliest teachings (petted and popular orthodoxy), I did so, confident of its complete vindication by the Scriptures. I was furnished by friends with Whitmore, Constable, Blaine, and other works, but ere I had finished the first named book, some things that had always been shrouded with mystery, became plain; and the walls that I had thought impregnable, had been breached. With unbounded amazement I continued my investigation, and when I had finished Constable and Blaine, the whole structure of modern theology lay before me a mass of philosophic and traditional errors, crushed by the truths of God's eternal word. I have made this acknowledgment for various reasons. (1) Because it became me as a Christian and a man. (2) To give assurance to you who have labored for right and truth, "that your labor has not been in vain." (3) To more thoroughly sever every alliance that will compel me to give strength or countenance to error, and array myself as an implacable enemy to falsehood.

I want the truth, I want it for the sake of truth. I want it for the sake of society; I want it for my own sake, and I want it for Christ's sake, and as an earnest seeker after truth you may count me in the future.

From Eld. O. F. Sweet, N. Y.

Br. Sheldon:—I do not expect, neither intend to trouble you or the A. C. Times with many of the letters I may receive in response to the "divine call" for use expressed. But as the within letter was the "first fruits" of that call, and was so commendable and full of sympathy, that I send it asking its publication. A God bless you of that stamp, completely overcame me, and as I read and realized the tender and Christian love of those I never saw, I walked on from the office and up Washington St., while tears gushed freely from my eyes, and I reflected that there was sympathy for the tried and care-worn soldiers of Jesus, in some if not in others.

Dear Br. in Christ:—Following your advice on laying down the last copy of The Times, we enclose you a dollar for brother Ongley, hoping it may reach you safely, and that God will bless it to the use intended. The amount you ask is so small it seems as if every Adventist could respond, and in that way the debt be met and means obtained to send the tent into new fields. Praying that God may prosper the cause in your hands and that means may be furnished you to spread the glad tidings of much joy, we are your sisters, in the blessed hope, A. & I. Lowry.

From Eld J. T. Ongley.

We had quite an interesting time at our two last tent meetings. At Millers Station, five souls put on Christ by baptism. Also at Waterford, Erie Co., Pa., four souls were baptized, and we trust quite a number others were awakened; one lady meeting the Presbyterian minister on the side walk, was accosted by him, "Are you going to that tent to meeting?" "Yes," she said, "I am going where I can hear the gospel preached." Others became very much interested.

From Eld. D. S. Clark, Ill.

Br. Sheldon:—I had the privilege of attending the conference at Afton, DeKalb Co., Ill., which was held the first of October. The weather was rather bad, and not as many out as would have been if the weather had been good; but notwithstanding we had a very good meeting, perfect harmony with all present, and a willingness to work for the good of the Master's cause. This church is in good working order, trying to let their light shine, and be ready for the coming kingdom, which I think is near at hand. Brother H. G. McCulloch is pastor of this church. He also preaches in other places as much as he can and not neglect his charge. From this place I went to Genoa, and held two meetings with the church in that place. Here I found a good church, doing well under the labors of E. H. Burington. He is beloved by all who know him, for his labor of love to save the perishing around him. I went with brother B. to Hampshire, and held five meetings with the church in that place. Found some holding on to the truth, and trying to live in harmony with its teaching. Brethren Crocker and Tyler preach occasionally to the church in this place. We hope the meeting will wake up a new interest among them.

From Hampshire we went to Rutland, and preached five sermons to good congregations, and we hope to good acceptance. Some professed the truth, and requested brother Burlington to preach in the future to them as often as he could. Brother B.'s health is some improved, but his throat is bad. He has more calls than he can answer. Rutland is a place where they have not heard much preaching from our people. We returned to Genoa, and was with them on Sunday. Also stopped and preached with the church at DeKalb on Monday evening; it was very stormy, but few out. Tuesday arrived at home in Amboy; found all well. I am trying to prepare for the coming winter, so I can leave my family comfortable, while I go out to work for the Master in other fields. May the Lord give me health of body and mind to give the alarm of the coming judgment. How many are asleep to the fact of Jesus' coming. Are we ready? When I think how prone we are to get out of the way, and do as we ought not, I ask shall we be found when he comes all ready? May that be our happy lot. I want to be good, and I mean by the grace of God to be what I profess to be, and show others by my life that I have been with Christ, and learned of him, for if we have not his spirit we are none of his.

From Brother John H. Paton, Almont, Mich.

Br. Sheldon: I have not written much for the Times, but very little has been on its pages for more than two years, that I have not read. I have been much interested and instructed through its instrumentality, though sometimes grieved, but not looking for absolute perfection even among Christians, in a mortal state, even this has not overwhelmed me.

Fifteen years ago in obedience to Christ's word I was buried with him in baptism, thus confessing faith in him as a Saviour through his atonement, and at the same time owning his authority over me. Hence I have always felt under obligation to take his word as my guide, and rule in all things pertaining to both faith and practice. I look on the "path of the just as increasing in light, whether that path be considered as the life of an individual Christian, or as pertaining to the path of light on our way through the long night of sin and suffering by which, or in which God leads all his people. The latter I conceive to be the true idea, as there is but one perfect day, and that is the true object of hope of all Christians.

Thus it has been through the dispensations past and passing, one ray of light succeeds another, each succeeding truth surpassing its predecessor in beauty and power, and we see that the path not only shines, but shines "more and more." Thus it is in harmony with God's plan that the truth of the coming and glory of our Redeemer should become the prominent light immediately preceding the event, coming too as it does when it is most needed, to strengthen the courage of those who are passing through the "hour of temptation" in these "perilous times." Thus it is "meat in due season" giving the strength of the spirit of our God to the waiting ones.

But a few of the fifteen years of my Christian life have been cheered by the knowledge of the truth of Jesus the life-giver in a literal instead of a metaphorical sence. Now I see both are used in the word and applied to the Christian, the metaphor always based on the reality.

When the necessity of a resurrection was seen in order to future, eternal life, then the importance of the coming of Christ was realized, (for I never doubted the fact,) and I began to "love the appearing" of Jesus. I look upon it as self evidence that no being can love anything more than he appreciates its importance or value. About the same time I imbibed the general impression among those calling themselves Adventists that Christ's coming "is nigh, even at the door," without knowing clearly why, never having given the "Time" of the event much thought. And here let me say that I have found but very few "giving heed" to the "more sure word of prophecy" which gives light. Gradually has my mind been awakened to this subject, and when I began to think about it, I began to wonder why so little was said in the Times about the subject. I read the work on "Adventism" from your pen, and found calculations there which, if correct, show that the 1335 days or years of Dan. 12 end this year (1873,) and therefore that "Daniel will stand in his lot" this year. Then I was more surprised than ever at the silence of the Times. In last issue I see that some reasons exist that weaken your confidence in the calculations. Is it asking too much to ask you, through the the paper, to give publicity to those reasons. That work is causing some to expect Jesus this year, and I freely confess that the argument has much weight with me. Now if Christ is coming this year I want to know it, and not make calculations for years to come, in the way of renting, planting and building. I know of no reason, drawn from prophecy, of sufficient weight, to cause me to believe that he will not come; but good reasons may exist of which I am ignorant; and therefore I for my own sake and that of others call for light on this momentous subject. "Time soon will tell" says one, but I want to be assured beforehand; for I am fully convinced that God has designed that man shall know. "The wise shall understand." The fact that man has made mistakes cannot destroy another fact, couched in the above quotation. In harmony with this is the word of Jesus in Matthew 24. He speaks of "Meat in due season," and pronounces a blessing on the servant who gives this meat to the household. What that is which the wise servant proclaims, I think may be learned from the thought of the evil servant: "My Lord delayeth his coming." The opposite of delay is immediate. I gather from this teaching of Jesus that the wise servant shall understand when Jesus is coming, long enough to teach or make it known to the household. It seems to me that Jesus and Dan. 12 are agreed.

Whether this is the jubilee year or not, the study of prophecy must go on among us, or we cease to be a prophetic people, and if men were fully awake to its importance would we not hear more about it? Is it not a fact that only those who study the "sure word" till the day dawn will secure the light which God has covered with symbols to be understood as time advances?

Let me thus through our paper exhort all our brethren to wake up more fully to the study of the word, and give it immediate attention, so that we as ministers may give the trumpet a certain sound, that we may indeed be "children of the light" so that that day may not overtake us as a thief.

[When the proper time arrives we intend to speak on the point referred to by the Brother in the foregoing letter. Our remarks in our last issue are sufficient on the argument relating to '73, till time either endorses or repudiates it. We are not strongly of the opinion that Christ may come at any season of the year—we give some weight to the spring and fall types. These are past for '73. We much prefer our Brother's earnestness on this theme to the apathy imbibed by some. We cannot cease to be a prophetic people without being rejected of God.—Ed. Times.]

From Sister M. E. Orr, Mich.

The Times came to day, and while noting its contents, I was very forcibly reminded of a well-spread table, and the thought occurred at once, surely the most fastiduous can find something to encourage and strengthen.

The letters and conference reports were truly cheering, as they brought the glad tidings from different localities, of sinners being converted, backsliders reclaimed, and a growing interest in the cause of Christianity. Many of the articles were read with deep interest, especially the one on the "curse of neutrality." Alas! how many professed Christians are to day standing on neutral ground, and with folded arms are watching unmoved the great contest between truth and error. Indeed, there is such a prevalence in these last days for shirking duty. Prayer and conference meetings are thinly attended, very few comparatively, are willing to become teachers in the sabbath school, and if a call is made for mission labor, or funds to aid in publishing religious books and papers, the almost universal cry come up, "I pray thee, have me excused." Brethren and sisters, how is it with us? Are we too neglecting duty? Or are we doing all that we can towards contributing for the interest of our paper, and in publishing those gospel truths which we cherish so fondly? God help us one and all, to be alive to duty in these matters, that in the great reckoning day we may hear the "well done."

From Eld. A. N. Seymour, Mich.

Br. Sheldon: Some facts of interest in our late visit to Lapeer and vicinity came before our minds which gave us much pleasure. The ground over which we traveled and preached the word of life, was the field of our late Br. A. Mackie, a devoted, faithful laborer in his Master's vineyard. He has been a great blessing to the cause in these parts. He was a noble man, an energetic speaker; being original in his thoughts, apt in his expressions, it was a feast, truly, to listen to the words of life that so ably and freely flowed from his lips. His praise is in all the churches over which he has presided. How much they do miss him. Their loss is great, but none feel it more keenly than his worthy wife, who is left to weep in her loneliness. God bless and sustain her. He sleeps, but not forever, thank God. Her residence at present is in an upper room of Eld. Morgan's, at Lapeer. All sympathize with her. Eld. Paton, of Almont, (formerly a Baptist minister) now occupies Br. Mackie's field, and his efforts are much appreciated. Our visit at his house was pleasant, indeed.

Br. Morgan, above referred to, is the fruit of our feeble ministry some four years since. Our brethren invited him, and finally dared him, to give us a hearing. He would not stand the dare. Our subject that night was "What is man"? The truth in the subject presented on that occasion dislodged him, and he fell into our ranks; has been ordained, and is now preaching the faith he once sought to destroy, acceptably. He is beloved by his brethren, and his moral bearing is praiseworthy. Here we unexpectedly met Dr. Drummond, returning from Marlett, where he had been to preach. The church at M. has secured his labors, built him a house, and ere this have moved his family to that place. May the blessing of the Lord attend his ministry, and both the church and the sick prosper under his administration.

Near Mt. Clemens we called on Eld. Fuller, one of our first converts to the blessed hope some twenty-five years ago. Of this fact, however, we had lost all knowledge till some fifteen years had passed, when it was made known to us. He is a man of good understanding and excellent spirit, and is preaching in his quiet way as the field opens. His limits, however, are within his home circle, as his keen-eyed believing wife don't propose to enjoy single blessedness.

At Dearborn we called on Brn. Nowland and Crandall, who are struggling hard to build up the cause in their place. They preach and practice. During the summer they have built a very neat, commodious church in which to invite God's servants to preach the gospel of the soon coming kingdom. At their late quarterly meeting it was dedicated. Eld. J. H. Whitmore preached their dedicatory sermon. Report highly commends the discourse on that occasion. May the sacrifice made by our good brethren not prove a failure, but a great blessing to the entire community, and in the sequel may they have accessions to their numbers, such as shall be saved. May the blessing of the Lord ever attend them.

At Chelsea we tarried over night with Eld. J. B. Frisbie. Some fifteen or twenty years ago he stood with us in publishing the truth, but the influence and arguments of seventh-day sabbath keepers finally drew him into their ranks, and he has been a very able and earnest advocate of that theory for some fifteen years. During this time his reside has been mostly at Battle Creek, the he quarters of Sabbatarianism, where he been associated with the very best talent t that class of people possess. Some four ye since his mind became seriously impres with the fact that, after all said and done, and this class of people might be wrong the Sabbath and law; so he determined to view the whole ground. The result has b he and his companion have ceased observ the fourth commandment in the Decalog and thus it must be with every one who f lows Br. Frisbie's example. Scores h done it before him, and the result has b invariably the same. As he had commit his very thorough investigation to paper, I had done the same, we sat down and c pared notes till after twelve o'clock at nig We found that we had traveled over the sa ground almost entirely. We obtained so new thoughts of each other on the law the Sabbath. Thank God for this intervi We enjoyed it hugely. Br. Frisbie is an a man, possesses an excellent spirit, and many years has truly loved God, truth holiness. As the holy oracles of God changed his mind and planted his feet o more on a solid basis, touching the law Sabbath, we bid him God speed in preac "the wisdom of God" revealed through Ch that stands connected with this age or dis sation. "In Christ are hid all the treas of wisdom and knowledge." (Col. 2: 3) all this wisdom, and among all these treas where do we find seventh-day Sabbath-k ing published or enforced by either Christ, Holy Ghost, or the twelve and seventy d ples chosen to preach the whole couns God, and to keep back nothing that is pr able to the church?

We Are Denounced.

I. I. LESLIE.

Br. Sheldon:—In the Advent L ald of Oct. 8, I find a remark statement in regard to our Adv brethren in the west, and the condi of things in general there. This st ment is in a letter, written for and p lished in the paper above named, Eld. W. H. Swartz, of Harrisburg, He says he has lately made a visit some of his relatives in north-west Illinois, and learned all this tha states. He says he believes all he written. He certainly writes as p tively as if he knew it were so.

It seems impossible that one conv ant with the Scriptures, and preac the gospel could write and have p lished such a statement and believe in so doing he was pleasing God, furthering the gospel of Christ.

I thought I would refer to s of Eld. S.'s charges and show inconsistent and uncharitable his guage throughout is, but I think will see it as well as myself. I sorry to see such a spirit in any of brethren looking for the Lord. unchristianizing one another beca we differ in our views of the condit of the dead and the end of the ungo will never do for those who have love "thinketh no evil;" and "hop all things." To call all that are lo ing for the Lord, who believe that til he comes there is no knowledge reward for his people—to call these "irregular Christians," irrespectiv theire character, is a very grave thi This Eld. S. has really done. says: "A man may believe that, [sleep of the dead and the destructio the wicked] and be an irregular Ch tian." Now, an irregular Christian an imperfect one, consequently no believing that the dead sleep in consciousness and the wicked die et ally, can be a perfect Christian.

Brethren, is this so? If it is, we and you west are in a perilous situati Does our salvation depend upon believing in the conscious or unconsci condition of the dead? Must we, to perfect, believe that man is now imp tal—that he has a spirit of thought action which survives death, and g to Paradise, or elsewhere?

Is the devil leading us, or is Lord? Are we, in preaching that wholly dies and is wholly raised fr the dead, furthering the purpose Satan? Is this manifestly the dev purpose: to have the sleep of the d and the destruction of the wic preached with the Lord's coming?

n succeeding in this to such an that only a few in the west will ed? Eld. Swartz says he believes be wright or wrong? Would have been saved if the con- of the dead and the end of icked had not been mentioned nection with the Bridegroom's g? If Eld. S. is right what a many have made; and how have they been deceived! an error have they fallen into, ave thus mixed "this abomina- son with the grandest doctrine tered by the Lord, or announced n."

the revealing day is near, and it on be seen who have "built upon undation, wood, hay, stubble." on, let us love one another, for we know we have passed from unto life; and by this, too, will ld know that we are his disci-

ACT FROM ELD SWARTZ'S LETTER.

f the greatest impediments to the re- of the faith of the Lord's coming, in , has been its almost universal asso- with the doctrine of the sleep of the d the destruction of the wicked. ings have been urged with so much ce that the cry of the Bridegroom's has hardly had a bearing. If ever the urpose was manifest it is in mixing minable poison with the grandest ever uttered by the Lord or announc nen. It has fallen as a withering over the broad prairies of the west. is not an Adventist according to a r's definition, unless he can engorge g full fledged d not been for the introduction of into the Advent body, it would be powerful body of Christians on this t. There are hundreds of pious men on all over the west who perceive d in the popular sound of the gos- re ready to embrace the faith of the ming if they are allowed to drink it swallowing that nauseating potion nus plainly about this because I be- t I say. A man may believe that, I , and be an irregular Christian, but an follow it to its legitimate ends jority are now doing without his and homage for the God-man being Christ died, i. e., was totally extinct! man and only that! How grating ls along side of such texts as John the beginning was the Word, and the with God, and the Word was God," German has it, "And God was that ..In him was LIFE, and the life was f men. Just as a man's views of racter are, so will his service be.

at query is, Is not somebody held le to sound the true message out ese regions? Wherever it is being and lived it is telling.

—We are glad of the conces- t in the west the reception of and death theme is "almost l" among us. But it is not t "the cry of the Bridegroom's has hardly had a hearing;" ead of its being such an "im- t" to the convincing of people Lord is at hand, we are ready are figures with those who have d the advent without the life ath view. Which class has d best in point of numbers for ten years, for instance? Here re wonderfully against our ego- cotser, and he knows it if at ed. If they can do so much without this view, why have done it? And are they pros- better spiritually? No; but just erse. As for measuring our r by our views of Christ, we so- test: we accept him as God the Unto the Son he [the Father] y throne, O God, is forever;" God the Son, not God the Father. racle it was made possible for ine Son to die for men—thus g a divine sacrifice.—ED.

True Religion.

of religion is a life of faith, th is that strange faculty by an feels the presence of the , exactly as some animals have er of seeing in the dark. That fference between the Christian world. Most men know noth-ing beyond what they see—their lovely world, is all in all to them—its outer beauty, not its hidden loveliness. Prosperity, adversity, sadness, it is all the same, they struggle through all alone, and when old age comes, and the companions of early life are gone, they feel that they are solitary. In this deep, strange world, they never meet, or but for a moment, the spirit of it all who stands at their very side. And it is exactly the opposite of this that makes a Christian. Move where he will, there is a thought and a presence which he cannot put aside, he is "haunted forever by the eternal mind." God looks out upon him from the clear sky, and through the thick darkness—is present in the rain-drop that trickles through the branches, and in the tempest that crashes down the forest. A living Redeemer stands beside him, goes with him, talks with him as a man with his friend. The emphatic description of a life of spirituality is—"Enoch walked with God."—Sel.

Harps on the Willows.

People sometimes apply this expression to themselves when they are in a cold and formal religious state. Those who hung their harps on the willows were deeply affected by religious considerations.

They said, "By the rivers of Babylon, there we sat down, yea, we wept, when we remembered Zion. We hanged our harps on the willows in the midst thereof. For there they that carried us away captive required of us a song. How shall we sing the Lord's song in a strange land?" It is not the stupid professor who weeps when he remembers Zion, or who hangs up his harp and refuses to sing, when he is taunted by God's enemies. The one who weeps and does not feel like singing, but hangs up his harp, is the Christian who sighs and cries for the sins and abominations which he sees around him. He, like Lot in Sodom, vexes his righteous soul with what he sees and hears among the wicked. Like the Psalmist, he can say, "Rivers of waters run down mine eyes, because they keep not thy word. Horror hath taken hold of me, because of the wicked that forsake thy law." Or, like Jeremiah, he is ready to exclaim, "If ye will not lay it to heart, my soul shall weep in secret places for your pride." Such as hang their harps on the willows are ready to say, "If I forget thee, oh Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning. If I do not remember thee, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth; if I prefer not Jerusalem above my chief joy." Oh, that there were thousands of such mourners in Zion! They are the ones to travail for souls, who realize the awful condition of the unconverted. They are the choice ones in the church—the salt of the earth.—Sel.

In Every Thing Give Thanks.

Grateful love is the vital cement of true piety. Conscious of utter moral weakness and unworthiness, we flee to Christ. In his wonderful condescension and his great atoning work, he is to us "the chiefest among ten thousand, and one altogether lovely." We cast ourselves into his arms with a thankfulness which no word can express. All our hope is in him. Every moment and for every blessing we are dependent on him. He redeemeth our life from destruction. He crowneth us with loving kindness and tender mercies. Not a breath we breathe, not a beating of the pulse, but testifies anew to the fulness and freshness of his grace. Hence every utterance of the lips, every thought of the heart, should go up bearing heavenward the incense of gratitude. Failing to give thanks continually, we become aliens and apostates.

◆

SAYS the Methodist Recorder:

A rumor from San Francisco states that, after the execution of Captain Jack and (titleless) Schonchin, they were beheaded, and the heads forwarded to some Eastern Museum, there to be exhibited, in bottles of alcohol, to the curious Christians and other folks who may be willing to behold! Now, it occurs to us that this business of pickleing Indian heads is almost as cruel and graceless as that of scalping the heads of whites. What a forethoughtful proceeding, to be sure! Pickled Indian heads against dried pioneer scalps! While the savages are content with the top hair, civilization must cut deeper and take skull, brains, hair and all! Oh, Herodius what an achievement for the latter day!

Our Young Folks.

The Dawn of Day.

BY MRS. ROBETTA B. HASTINGS.

I love to sit and dream,
Amid the fading light,
When summer's dewy eve
Is deepening into night.
But, oh! the holiest hour
Is when the morning breaks
So calmly o'er the earth,
And silent Nature wakes.

Then floods of golden light
Through crimson portals glide,
As if to "glorious realms"
The gates were opened wide.

But brighter far will be
The heavens' glad array,
When dawns the glorious morn
That ope's the judgment day.

That last long night must pass;
That mystic morning break;
The mighty trumpet sound
The slumb'ring world to wake.

Oh! what a solemn pall
Will shroud the heavens o'er,
When fade the stars away,
To visit earth no more.

But soon our glorious King
Will radiate the skies;
The splendor of whose countenance
The glorious sun outvies.

The living and the dead
Will stand awe-struck, and dumb,
To see the "King of kings"
Amid the angels come.

When through the pearly gates,
With shouting and with song,
His saints shall follow him:
Shall we be in the throng?

Christian Standard.

Bible Stories for Children.

UNCLE SIMEON.

(ELIJAH—CONCLUDED.)

After Elijah and the wicked king had made the test of who was the true God, the prophets of Baal had all been slain, and the promise of an early end of the famine, Elijah went up into a mount, and went to praying for rain, while he set his servant to watch for the appearing of a cloud. After praying seven times, a cloud arose out of the sea, and Elijah bade his servant to tell Ahab, "There is the sound of abundance of rain," to make ready and go to the city at once lest the rain stop him.

The success of Elijah in the test of the power of God and Baal, and the killing of the heathen prophets, so enraged the wicked queen that she determined to have the man of God killed. When he heard of it he fled toward the Arabian desert, taking his servant with him for about a hundred miles, to Beersheba, from where he pursued his journey alone. The first night of his lonely travels he laid himself down under a juniper tree, and as he recalled the many persecutions through which he had passed, and the killing of the Lord's prophets by the wicked queen, he wished himself dead. During the night an angel brought him food and told him to eat of it. He did so, and slept. On waking the angel bade him to eat and drink of that which he had brought him. He did so, after which he resumed his journey and traveled forty days without refreshments. This is the second instance of a servant of Jehovah going without food for forty days, Moses having fasted that long before he received the law of the Lord for the children of Israel.

The prophet came to the mount called Horeb, where he made his home in a cave, and there the Almighty communicated with him. God commanded him to stand in the mouth of the cave, and while he did so a mighty wind passed, followed by a great earthquake, and this was followed by a flaming fire. How great and grand must have been these doings of the Almighty. Doubtless these terrific demonstrations were to inspire Elijah with the importance of the work about to be committed to him, and the mighty results that should follow.

After all these came "a small still voice," and in that voice God assured Elijah that there were then thousand people in Israel who had not worshiped Baal. And that he should return to his own land, and should anoint Hazael to be king over Syria, Jehu to be king over Israel, and Elisha to be prophet in his place. Some time after he found Elisha plowing with twelve yoke of oxen in a field, and as he passed by him he let his mantle fall upon his shoulder, and he followed him.

The wicked and idolatrous successor of Ahab tried to take Elijah by force, and sent a captain and fifty soldiers to take him. They found the prophet seated on the top of a hill, and commanded him to come down. But he called fire down from heaven and destroyed them. The king sent a second captain and his fifty men, and they were also consumed by fire; and when the king sent the third captain and his fifty men, the captain called unto Elijah begging for his life and the lives of his soldiers. And the angel of God told Elijah to go down with them to the king. The king being on his bed sick from a fall, the prophet told him because he had called upon Baal, and not upon the God of Israel, he should not get up from his bed, but should die. And according to this prediction of the Lord through Elijah, the king died.

When it was revealed to Elijah that that he was about to be translated, or taken up into heaven, he desired Elisha to tarry behind while he went to Bethel. But Elisha declared he would not leave him, and thus Elijah's translation was not secret as he had desired to have it. On their way to Bethel, they came to Jericho, and the sons of the prophets that were there came to Elisha and asked if he also knew that God would take away his master that day. And he answered, "Yes, I know it; hold ye your peace." Here again Elijah tried to have Elisha remain while he went on to the Jordan, but he would not, and the two went on their way, while fifty of the sons of the prophets at Jericho stood to view their departure. When the two came to Jordan, Elijah rolled up his mantle and smote the waters, and they divided so they could pass over on dry ground. After they had passed over Elijah told Elisha to ask what he should do for him, and he prayed for a double portion of his spirit to be upon him. It was a hard thing, but Elijah assured him that if he should see his ascension it should be so, but if he did not it should not be so. They were still talking as they went along, when there appeared a chariot and horses of fire, and they were parted asunder. Elijah, understanding that they had come for him, stepped into the chariot, and was taken up in a whirlwind. Elisha cried, "My Father, my Father, the chariot of Israel, and the horsemen thereof." And when he saw no more of them he tore his clothes. He then took up the mantle that fell from Elijah, went to the Jordan, smote the water and cried, "Where is the Lord God of Elijah?" and they divided as before, and he passed over.

This closes the brief story of one of those bold servants of God who dared danger, and endured privations, while they rebuked the sinful, God-forgetting people of their times, trusting always in the Lord of Israel for help and strength in times of trouble or danger.

Books and Tracts.

List of Books, Tracts, etc., kept on sale at the Advent Christian Times office.

RESURRECTION OF THE DEAD IN Christ. (German.)

NATURE AND DESTINY OF MAN; (German.)

RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. (German.)

DESTRUCTION OF THE WICKED (German.)

SOUL OF MAN. (German.)

THE KINGDOM OF CHRIST ON Earth (German.)

IS MAN IMMORTAL? (German.)

☞ The above seven German tracts are published by L. Reisner, 1008 Chestnut st., Philadelphia, Pa., and can be ordered either of this office or of him.

IMMATERIALISM, by Wm. Sheldon Post-paid, 5c.

THE PENALTY OF SIN, by O. R. Fassett. Post-Paid, 5c.

*AN ADDRESS TO M. E. CON*ference of Minnesota, by Eld. L. C. Collins. Should have a very wide circulation. Post-paid 7c.

THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL answer to the questions: Is the popular conception of the soul that of Holy Scripture? By Chas. L. Ives, M. D., Professor of the theory and practice of Medicine in Yale College. 1873. 113 Pages. For sale at this Office. Price 25 cents

END OF THE KING OF THE NORTH, and the Impending Time of Trouble, and the near Coming of Christ. By L. T. Cunningham. Price, 12 cents.

THE JUDGMENT IMPENDING Prophecy and Chronology converging to one grand culmination. By L. T. Cunningham. Price, 12 cts.

THE DESTINY OF MAN, by William Erwin. An excellent treatise by a member of the M. E. denomination that gives the Bible view in a radical style. 313 pp. nicely bound in cloth and gilt. $1.50 post paid

MODERN SPIRITISM, its origin, character and tendencies, by C. C. Marston 56 pp. In paper $6.50 per hundred; $1.00 per dozen; 15 cts per

*COMPLETE WORKS OF FLA*vius Josephus; translated by William Whiston. 979 pp. in cloth post paid $3.00

THE COMING EARTHQUAKE, By D. T. Taylor. 25 Cents.

*CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—Unabridg*ed. $5. by express. Condensed, sufficiently full for ordinary purposes. by mail. $1.75.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE: with engravings, maps, and tables. $1.60. By mail. $1.75.

*BIBLE DICTIONARY: by Smith & Bar*num. The best abridgment of Smith's larger work. Leather $6. cloth $5. By express.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. $22 by express.

*ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORD*ance. With Greek and English index. $6 by express.

*ENGLISH-GREEK LEXICON. By Lid*dell & Scott. A standard work. $7.50. by express.

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 32mo. 25c.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock, $2.50, Post-paid.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3: 1. By H. L. Hastings. Paper, 50c. Postage, 8c.

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY of God: and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By F. A. Smith, 15c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble, 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man of the earth earthy: the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 7c.

*PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC meet*ings. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 50c. a hundred.

*THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; with a re*view of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabbath By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added History, Statistics and Tables. Cloth, $1; leather $1.50

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. By Wellcome and Wood. 460 pp. $1.25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATTHEW, 24 and 25, 25c

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM. 20c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM 25c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic; Which? 10c. $5 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a dozen. The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one address, post-paid, for $4.50.

LAST DAY TOKENS: by S. S. Brewer. 35 cts.

FUTURITY; by Wm. Sheldon. 30 cts.

THE INDEX BOOK MARK; 25c a dozen.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. Nothing so good on this topic. Cloth $1. Paper, 50c. 5 copies for $1, post paid.

GOOD TIDINGS; a general view of Advent doctrine. By an Association of Authors. 436 pages. Cloth 50c. Paper 40c. Post paid.

*THE NATURE AND DURATION OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT: By Henry Con*stable, Prebendary of Cork. 25c. Post paid.

THE FAITH OF ST. PAUL; showing it to have been neither Pharisaic nor Sadducean, but Hebrew. By L. C. Collins. 15c.

*THE STATE OF THE DEAD; a Discus*sion between N. Field, M. D. and T. P. Connolly, Esq. pp. 233. 50c. Post Paid.

THE JUBILEE HARP. $1. $9 a doz.

HADES AND SHEOL; By L. C. Collins. The best published exposition of the parable of Dives and Lazarus. 15c.

*THE ADVENT MINSTREL; a choice collec*tion of spiritual songs. Flexible cloth, 25c. $2.15 a dozen. Paper, 15c. $1.50 a dozen.

HYMNS OF THE HARP; Cloth, 75c, Leather $1.

HYMNS OF THE MORNING; A new and rich collection. Cloth 50c. Leather, 60c.

PAULS EARNEST EXPECTATION and hope: (Phil. 1: 21-23.) By O. R. Fassett. 5c.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT: containing the original Greek text of the New Testament with an interlineary word for word English translation and a new emphatic version, ... pp. Cloth $4; leather back $5., Postage, 18c.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, November 18, 1873.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES
IS PUBLISHED BY THE
Western Advent Christian Publishing Society.
Business Office: McCormick Block, corner of Randolph and Dearborn Sts., Room 27.
[Printing Presses located at Norwood Park.]

TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.

Sent Three Months for Fifty cents.

The officers of the Society are as follows.
President—DARIUS MATHEWSON,
Vice President—L. C. COLLINS.
Secretary—FRANK BURR.
Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND.
PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
GEO. HOWARD, E. McCULLOCH,
J. M. SNOOK.

A. W. TUCKER, TREASURER & BUSINESS AGENT.

Don't Fail
To give your name and address full and complete every time you write.

Remember
That all Drafts, Money Orders, etc., payable to the Business Agent, A. W. Tucker.

☞ Address articles intended for publication in THE TIMES to Wm. Sheldon, and all business communications to

A. W. TUCKER,
27, McCormick Block,
Chicago, Ill.

☞ Write Appointments, Notices, Communications for THE TIMES, and business matters, each on separate pieces of paper.

☞ Do not fail to comply with the above suggestions.

APPOINTMENTS, NOTICES, etc., must reach us by Thursday night to be in time for the next issue. Please remember this.

Business Department.

Book and Job Work.

We are now prepared to do all kinds of BOOK and JOB PRINTING with despatch, and in a satisfactory manner. Books, Pamphlets, Tracts, Leaflets, Circulars, Envelopes, Letter-Heads, Note-Heads, Bill-Heads Cards of all kinds, etc., etc. Our friends and the business public will do well to get our figures before ordering work elsewhere. Estimates cheerfully given.

Now Ready.

"The Disembodied State Examined:" with an exposition of "Our Earthly House," and "The Rich Man's Hell." It contains 42 pp., besides the cover, in good, clear type, on good paper. For sale at the Times office, ten cents single, $1 per dozen.

To Correspondents.

T. S. THOMASSON—The money for R. Welch was received; thank you for the help you give us in getting subscribers.

J. H. PATON—The "Times" goes regularly to Andrew Paton, Calumet.

Change of Post Office.

The address of Elder P. W. Hough is changed to Fairbank, Buchanan Co., Iowa.

The address of Eld. E. Bliss, will be Glen Elder, Mitchell Co., Kansas, until further notice.

Books and Tracts Sent by Mail.

C Eckhart
J W McCarty
A Slocum
D M Sarvis
L M Davis
G L Smith
H A King & Co
D O Amos
I Allen
G Bolles
S C Wellcome
E B Miller
D R Mansfield
P H Drake 3
Wm Gorgas
L Kerr
Z C Raymond
S Baldwin
W Rickett & Son

Letters Received.

☞ ALL letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgement is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

F Udell
S Pope
A C Enney
C Fox
D L Weaver
W S Covey
J Couch
C Crowell
D R Mansfield
J S Wimbish
E B Holmes
H Willett
P H Drake
C S Hurlbut
G W Green
C C Marston
J R Osgood
J Pauly
J H Paton
C Morse
J Goldsmith
G C Stephenson
G W Baker
J Powel
J C Smith
L H Davis
J C Wells
J R Hall
J C Emerson
G L Smith
J W Willett
A Sife
J F Wilcox
J M Stouffer
L Davis
H B Baldwin
T S Thomasson
A M Gleading
N Field
J X Dillier
W Gorgas
J Hamilton
Z B Chase
J R Allen
W H Lansing
E Townsend
J C Wellcome
A Armour
E N Bliss
A T Rice
R Bolles
L C Kerr
S K Gitson
M A Folsom
L Sturdevant
D H Darnall
C F Benton
O R Stouffer
O D Gibson
R A Gibson
S B Mabey
Z B Chase
D Hammack
Hitchcock
J A Marsh
W Baker
J Ferlee
D S Nafe
W S Covey
A N Seymour
G W Randall
M Grant
T S Thomasson
W McCulloch

WESTERN TRACT FUND.

Previously Reported	$69 50
P. H. Drake	1 00
M. Trask	50

The $4000 Fund.

To Free the Society from Debt.

CASH.

Previously Reported	$871 80

PLEDGES PAID.

Previously Reported	$399 50
E. B. Holmes	3 00
W. L. Coe	3 00

J. A. Dillier	10 00
— Workman	10 00
B. F. Hutton	25 00
L. Davis	25 00
C. Morse	10 00

Obituary.

INGALLS.—Died at Canoga, Seneca Co., N. Y., Nov. 2, 1873, Henriett Ingalls. Aged, 66 years.

She was greatly beloved. Her funeral was held at the house of G. W. Randall, and was attended by her many friends. Services by the Rev. Mr. Crum. Text. Rev. 14: 13, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord." (Most appropriate.) During her whole life she was a devoted Christian of the Advent faith.

G. W. RANDALL.

Appointments.

ILLINOIS.

Genoa, Oct. 27, and every other Sabbath until further notice. E. H. BURINGTON.

Lynnville, 10:30 a. m., first and second Sabbath's in each month.

Phelps S. H. second Lord's day of Oct. and Nov., at 10.30 a. m.
Lynnville, at 7 p. m.
Rochelle, first and third Sabbaths, as brethren may arrange.
New Rutland, fourth Sabbath, morning and evening.
After November three-fourths of my time will be to use as the way may open.
Such are my arrangements until further notice.
ALICE E. RATHBUN.

Preaching brethren coming to Chicago wishing to preach in Advent Christian Chapel, will correspond with H. P. WRIGHT,
908 Walnut Street.

Advent Christian Mission, Cairo, Ill.—On and after Sunday, Aug. 31, services will be held in the school-room on the corner of Twelfth street and Washington avenue, opposite the Bulletin office. Morning discourse 11 o'clock a. m. Bible class for adults 4 p. m. Evening preaching at the ringing of the bells in the city. Brethren passing are cordially invited to call. H. JOHNSON,
T. S. THOMASSON.

Simpson S. H., two miles south of Nekoma, Knox Co., commencing Monday eve., Nov. 17, and continuing over Sunday, Nov. 23.
L. F. COLE.

DISCUSSION.—There will be a public discussion at Ancona, Livingston Co., beginning the second Friday in Dec. 1873, at 2 p. m., holding four days of two sessions each, on the following proposition: "Resolved, That the wicked dead will be raised to life from the state of death in the last day." C. C. Marston, of Elida, Ill., affirms; John Billings, of New Rutland, Ill., denies.

Elida in the evening. Also at Elida, Nov. 16 and 23, morning and evening.
Providence, Bureau Co., Temperance Hall, Nov. 26-30.
New Rutland, second and third Sabbaths in December. C. C. MARSTON.

MICHIGAN.

The second quarterly meeting of the Southern conference district of Michigan will be held at the Bell S. H., in Woodbridge, Hillsdale Co., Mich., commencing on Thursday eve., Dec. 11, 1873. A general attendance is requested. Come to work. Brethren coming by Railroad will stop at Reading, on the Ft. Wayne, Jackson & Saginaw R. R. C. FOX, Sec'y.

To the churches in Branch County, Michigan, I would say that my appointments for the year 1873 will be as follows:

East Gilead, Jan. 5, 10 a. m., and every two weeks after.

California, Jan. 12, 10:30 a m and every two weeks after.

Algansee, every Sunday 2:30 p m and evening. Prayer meeting every Wednesday evening.

Pt. Sanilac, Advent chapel, every Sunday morning, at 11 o'clock.
Lexington, Everett's Hall, every Sunday evening 7½ o'clock. GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.
Lexington Lake Shore Advent Chapel, 3 miles north of village, Sabbath, Jan. 26, at 3 p. m., and every two weeks after.
Lexington Ridge, White S. H., Feb. 2, at 3 p. m. and every two weeks after.
GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.

Woodbridge, Johnson S. H., 10:30 a. m.
Bell S. H., 2:30 p. m., Sunday, July 20, and every two weeks thereafter.
Brodock S. H., Tuesday eve., July 22, and once in two weeks.
WM. BRANCH.

There will be preaching in the Louis S. H., Almer, Sept. 7, 3 p. m., and every two weeks.
In the Delling S. S., Almer, Sept. 7, 10½ a. m., and every two weeks.

In the Graham S. H., Fairgrove, Sept. 14, 10½ a. m. Centre S. H., 5 p. m., and in the Hinron S. H. 8 p. m. and every two weeks.
E. H. DURAND.

The next quarterly meeting of the Northern District of Michigan will be held in the Decker S. H. at Millbrook, commencing Friday, Dec. 26, and continue over Sunday.
E. B. SCOTT, Sec'y.

Porter Centre, Mich., Sept. 21, 10½ a. m., and 3 p. m., and every four weeks.
JAS. FERRISS, Pastor.

INDIANA.

Meeting every Sunday at the Volga Church, commencing at half-past 10 o'clock, preaching alternately by T. V. Porter and the pastor,
LEMUEL RECORD.

Lavalle, Oct. 5, and every four weeks until further notice. Fairfield, Sept. 12, and once in two weeks. Baraboo, Sept. 12, and once in four weeks. Webster's Prairie, Sept. 28, and once in four weeks. Fisher Valley, Sept. 21, and once in four weeks. E. P. GRAVES.

WISCONSIN.

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.
Call upon Brn. Bracket or Reese, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.
A. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

Springville, May 4, and every two weeks until further notice.
Dudley S. H., May 11, and every four weeks until further notice.
Chaseburg, May 17, and every four weeks until further notice. JOB BROWN.

Arena, Nov. 16, and once in two weeks.
Cross Plains, Nov. 9, and once in four weeks until further notice. PHILO HITCHCOCK.
N. B.—I am at liberty one Lord's day in the month at present. P. H.
Montpelier, Sunday, July 13, at 10:30 a. m., and 7:30 p. m., and every four weeks following.
Bridgewater, Sumner S. H., Monday eve., July 14, and once in two weeks thereafter.
WM. BRANCH.

Preaching at the Cain S. H., Decatur Co., first Sunday in each month, at 11 a. m.
Duble S. H., 3 p. m., first Sunday in each month. J. F. ADAIR, Pastor.

Preaching in Thompson's Hall, Delmar, Clinton Co., Jan. 5, and every two weeks until further notice. O. W. PITCHER.

Manchester, the first and third Sabbaths of each month, at 11 a. m. and 2:30 p. m.
J. RIDLEY, Pastor.

MINNESOTA.

Ridgeway, Feb. 8 and 9, and once in four weeks.
P. MITSON.

The Lord willing, I will preach at Monticello, Wright Co., Minn., every Sunday at 10½ a. m.
Baily S. H., at Baily Station, near Elk River, Oct. 12, at 3 p. m. and every two weeks after until further notice.
Otsego Village S. H., Sunday Oct. 5, at 2½ p. m. and once in two weeks after, until further notice.
Lily Pond, Sunday eve., Oct. 5, at 7 p. m., and once in two weeks after, until further notice.
Preach at Big Lake Station, Sunday eve., at 7 o'clock.
S. C. WELLCOME.

P. S. Our Covenant Meeting is held the last Saturday, before the first Sunday in each month, at 2 p. m., at the Monticello Chapel.

Bailey S. H., Nov. 15.
Prairie Creek, Stone S. H., Sunday, Nov. 23.
Cottage Grove, Atkinson Corners, Sunday, Nov. 30. MRS. H. M. DURBY.

Utica, Winona Co., as the brethren, may arrange, November 22, evening, and over Lord's day.
If the friends farther West, North, or East, wish me to come to their place they can write to me before the 22d of November at Utica, Winona Co., care of D. Cheatham.
PETER MITSON.

NEW YORK.

Buffalo, N. Y., at 536 Eagle St., Nov. 30.
Warsaw, N. Y., commence eve. Dec. 1st, and continue over the 4th, if desired.
Wallace, Steuben Co., N. Y., at the quarterly conference to be held there the 5th.
JOHN T. ONGLEY.

Saratoga Springs; meetings every Sunday in the Lower Town Hall, corner of Broadway and Lake Avenue, at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday School and Bible class directly after morning service.
Prayer meeting every Thursday eve., at the residence of the pastors, 213 Broadway, nearly opposite Town Hall.
Saratoga Springs, N. Y., prayer meeting every Thursday evening, at the residence of the pastors, Van Dam street, first house east of Broadway.
WM. A. and M. L. DURAND, Pastors.

The Western District, New York State Conference will meet with the church at East Shelby, Friday eve., Nov. 28, and continue over Sunday, Nov. 30.
We hope for a good time at this meeting. Let every church within this District be represented, and do not forget the quarterly collection.
A. P. MOORE, Sec'y.
P. S.—There will be teams at Knowlesville on arrival of the accommodation train from the West, at 9:30 a. m. and from the East at 2:30 p. m. on Friday. Let all that come by cars come on that day. For the church.
E. SANDERSON, Clerk.

OHIO.

Christian Advent Church, Archibald, Fulton Co. Preaching every Sunday at 10 o'clock, a. m. and 7 o'clock p.m. Prayer meeting every Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock, Reynolds' S. H. Traveling brethren having a gospel sermon to preach, please give us a call and preach the word.
P. VOS, Elder.

PENNSYLVANIA.

In Quincy Hall, 127 Leacoc Street, Allegheny, Wednesday evening, Nov. 26, and over Sunday, the 30th, as the brethren may arrange.
G. W. STETSON.

The next quarterly meeting of the Advent Christian Conference of Northern Pennsylvania and Southern New York will be held with the church at Wallace Station, Steuben Co., N. Y., commencing Friday evening, Dec. 5, to continue over the following Sunday. Those coming by railroad will leave the cars at Wallace Station on the Rochester and Corning Railroad, and inquire for M. J. Brown. Those coming with teams, inquire for T. C. Armstrong. All are cordially invited. E. C. COWLES, President.
J. W. TAYLOR, Secretary.
Williamsport, Lycoming Co., Nov. 19, 20.
Waterford, Erie Co., Eve., Nov. 22, and over Sunday, as friends may appoint, Nov. 23.
Millers Station, Crawford Co., Nov. 24.
Rootville, Crawford Co., Nov. 26.
JOHN T. ONGLEY.

IOWA.

Edgewood (Methodist Church), Sunday, Nov. 23, at 11 a. m. and 7 p. m. J. RIDLEY.

Warsaw, third Saturday in each month, in the evening.
Chester S. H., Sunday following, 11 a. m.
Corydon, 2 p. m J. F. ADAIR.

Clinton, Iowa, July 1873. Gospel meetings held every Sunday. Prayer meetings on Thursday evening. S. B. MABEY, Pastor.

Broken Kettle S. H., the first and third Sunday of each month, until further notice.
HATTIE A. PLANK.

Preaching at Crook's School-house, Wayne county, Sunday, Aug. 24, at 3 p. m., and every three weeks until further notice.
A. A. DAVIS.

VISIT TO IOWA.—To the brethren in Iowa who requested me to visit them and hold meetings, I would say that my arrangements are to spend the month of February and perhaps longer in your State. Those desiring me to stop with them will please write to me at Elida, Winnebago Co., Ill. C. C. MARSTON.

There will be a meeting of the delegates of the Christian and Advent Christian Conferences of the State of Iowa for the purpose of organizing a general Union State Conference, and for the transaction of such business as may come before it, to be holden at Belle Plain, Benton Co., Iowa, commencing Jan. 2, 1874, and hold over the following Lord's Day. It is the earnest desire of many that this meeting be represented by every conference in the State. Let there be a general rally, and come with hearts full of love and unity, and then we shall be prepared to labor for the good of the cause, and shall not be ashamed of our work when it is done. C. C. RAMSAY,
Per order of Committee.

MISSOURI.

The first Quarterly Meeting of the Western M. O. Conference will be held with the Greenland Church for 1873, commencing on Friday, December 5, and will hold over Sunday. We shall look for a full delegation from all of the churches for there will be much important business.

Visiting brethren will find a cordial welcome. Try and come out largely. Our cause is one of immense interest. Don't delay.
J. M. BLEVEN, Sec'y.

CANADA.

The Advent church at Montreal, holds regular meetings every Sabbath, at Temperance hall, 6 Bleury St.
JOSEPH LUTRELL, Sec'y. 237, St. Joseph St.

Advertisements.

DO TRY IT 3 Months for 10 Cents; or with $3 Chromo for 50 cents; or 6 Months with "Flowers of Paradise," a first-class $6 Chromo, 15 1-4x21 inches, in eighteen colors, for $1.00 THE NATIONAL AGRICULTURIST is a sixteen page paper of 64 columns, handsomely illustrated in all its departments. One of the best AGRICULTURAL and FAMILY papers published. Only $1.00 per year, or $1.25 with best Bee-Book, or $1.50 with a beautiful CHROMO. THE BEE-KEEPERS' MAGAZINE a 32 page monthly, same terms or both for $1.75. Send for Sample Copies, and LIBERAL TERMS TO AGENTS, FREE. Write now to
H. A. KING & CO., 14 Murray St., New York.

GOOD NEWS FOR THE CHILDREN.

ST. NICHOLAS HAS COME!

CHRISTMAS comes but once a year, but ST. NICHOLAS, the beautiful new Magazine for Girls and Boys, just published by SCRIBNER & Co., of New York, comes every month.
It is full of good things, Pictures, Stories, Talks with Children

[redacted]

TO ALL. ST. NICHOLAS ... DEALERS and Subscriptions are received by all BOOKSELLERS, POST MASTERS and PUBLISHERS of NEWS PAPERS, and by SCRIBNER & CO., 654 Broadway, N. Y.

$20 SAVED!

To meet the urgent demand of the times the FLORENCE SEWING MACHINE CO. have determined to

REDUCE PRICES,

and will hereafter sell their $65 Machine for $45, and other styles in proportion.

THE FLORENCE

is the ONLY Sewing Machine that feeds the work backward and forward, or to right and left, as the purchaser may prefer. It has been greatly IMPROVED AND SIMPLIFIED, and is far better than any other machine in the market.

It is NOW the CHEAPEST.

Florence, Mass., Nov. 1, '73. Agents Wanted.
496-4t.

WHY NOT club for Washers and Wringers as well as papers. Colby Bros. & Co., Reading Mich. will send circulars for any one to get up a Club Order for their superior machines. Wholesale prices to all and a Washer free to the one who gets a club for one dozen—a Wringer for two dozen, and both, worth $12.50 for a club of three dozen. Farmers' Clubs and Granges supplied at wholesale price. Send your address, and say how many circulars you will distribute. You can thus save one third their cost by getting machines direct from the manufacturer. WHY NOT? 496-4t.

"DOMESTIC" PAPER FASHIONS.

Agents Wanted.
SEND FOR CATALOGUE.
DOMESTIC SEWING MACHINE CO., N. Y.
480-131.

HADES
OR
The Intermediate State of Man,
BY HENRY CONSTABLE, A. M.

Author of The Duration and Nature of Future Punishment. This work consists of twenty-four chapters, 167 pages, at $1.00 per copy, and can be had by addressing A. W. TUCKER, 27 McCormick Block, Chicago, Ill.

THE RAINBOW,
A Magazine of Christian Literature,
With special reference to the revealed future of the Church and the World.
Published Monthly, at $2.50 Per Year.
EDITED BY WM. LEASK, D. D.
Address, KELLAWAY & BROWN,
78 Newgate St.,
LONDON, E. C., ENGLAND.

SUBSCRIBE FOR
The Millenarian,
A
New Monthly Periodical.

THE MILLENARIAN advocates the Personal Coming of Messiah, the Restitution of all things spoken by the Prophets, the Resurrection of the holy dead at the commencement of the Millennium, the overthrow of all anti-christian systems, the literal fulfillment of prophecy, a life of purity, and trust as necessary to an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom of Jesus our Lord.
Terms, $1.00 per year.
Address, H. V. REED, Norwood Park, Cook Co., Illinois.
498

To every New subscriber paying for THE TIMES one year in advance, also to every Old subscriber paying ALL ARREARS and one year in advance, we will send a copy of one of the following valuable works:

DEBATE ON
"THE STATE OF THE DEAD,"
Field vs. Connolly, 300 pp.
BIBLE DOCTRINE of the SOUL,
By Prof. Ives, 110 pp.
NATURE AND DURATION OF
"FUTURE PUNISHMENT,"
By H. Constable.

We have a large number of these good works which we want placed in the hands of the reading public, thereby doing good to them, and largely increasing our list of subscribers. We desire that every reader of the TIMES to at once enter earnestly into this good work.

Anyone sending Four New Subscribers With eight dollars, will receive their choice of the above works in addition to the one to each subscriber.

Begin the work at once. Sample copies of the paper sent on application. Address,

A. W. TUCKER.

THE
American Bee Journal

Established by the late Samuel Wagner in 1861, at Washington, D. C., is now published at Chicago, Ill., and edited by

W. F. CLARKE,
...nt of the North American Bee-Keepers' Society.

The American Bee Journal.

...rgan of no man, party, patent hive, or selfish ... Its one aim will be to advance Apiculture.
...pect to give good value to all who subscribe, ... larger our hosts of readers the better value we ... able to give them.
...e a hearty Vigorous Co-operation, and we ... on our part to SPARE NO PAINS to make
...NTIFIC AND PRACTICAL JOURNAL OF APICULTURE IN THE WORLD.
...COPIES, TWO DOLLARS A YEAR IN ADVANCE.

CLUB RATES:

per year, in clubs of	two	or $3 50
" " "	three	" 5 00
" " "	six	" 9 00
" " "	ten	" 14 00
" " "	twenty	" 25 00

Specimen Copies sent on application. Communications and remittances to be addressed to

W. F. CLARKE,
AMERICAN BEE JOURNAL,
Room 27, McCormick Block Chicago, Ill.

Chicago & North-Western Railway.

THE ROUTE DIRECT

From CHICAGO to OMAHA,
From CHICAGO to MILWAUKEE,
From CHICAGO to SHEBOYGAN,
From CHICAGO to ST. PAUL.
From CHICAGO to MADISON,
From CHICAGO to GREEN BAY,
From CHICAGO to MARQUETTE,
From CHICAGO to SIOUX CITY,
From CHICAGO to YANKTON, DAK.
From CHICAGO to GENEVA LAKE,
From CHICAGO to FREEPORT,
From CHICAGO to DUBUQUE,
IS VIA THE

Chicago and North-Western
RAILWAY.

In Going North, North-West or West
You cannot go amiss if you buy your Tickets Via this Route.

See that Your Tickets Read via
Chicago & N.-W. Railway.

This is the Pioneer Route to and from
CALIFORNIA and the PACIFIC SLOPE.

Full information in regard to this Route will be cheerfully furnished by all Ticket Agents in the EAST, WEST, NORTH or SOUTH.

Running Through Five States,
This Great Railway Line, made up of nearly Two Thousand Miles of the best Railroad there is in the North-West, offers inducements to the traveling public second to none in the country, and superior to any offered by its competitors.

Steel Rail, Shortest and Quickest Route, Westinghouse Safety Air Brakes, Miller's Safety Platform, Pullman Palace Cars.

Speed, Comfort and Safety, are combined, and render this the Great Route for the People.

IT REACHES
North, North-West and West,
And Traverses the Garden Spot of the World.
ILLINOIS, MICHIGAN, IOWA, WISCONSIN, AND MINNESOTA,
ARE ALL TRIBUTARY TO THIS LINE.

Chicago Ticket Offices:
Corner LaSalle and Randolph Street.
Corner Canal and Madison Streets.
Kinzie Street Depot, cor West Kinzie and Canal Streets.
Wells Street Depot, cor. Wells and North Water Streets.
W. H. STENNETT, MARVIN HUGHITT,
Gen'l Passenger Agent. Gen'l Superintendent.

AGENTS. Terms Extra. "CYCLOPEDIA of Things Worth Knowing," 25,000 WANTS SUPPLIED. CHROMO The greatest RECEIPT BOOK FREE. of the age. Continental Pub. Co., St. Louis, Mo.

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. XI.---NO. 16. CHICAGO, NOVEMBER 25, 1873. WHOLE NO. 499

Advent Christian Times.
Published Every Tuesday by the
Western Advent Christian Publishing Society.
87, McCormick Block, Chicago.

Poetry.

No Room for Jesus.

O PLODDING life, crowded so full
Of earthly toil and care!
The body's daily need receives
The first and last concern, and leaves
No room for Jesus there.

O busy brain! by night and day
Working with patience rare,
Problems of worldly loss or gain,
Thinking till thought becomes a pain;
No room for Jesus there.

O throbbing heart! so quick to feel
In others' woes a share,
Yet human loves each power inthrall,
And sordid treasures fill it all!
No room for Jesus there.

O sinful soul! thus to debase
The being God doth spare!
Blood bought, thou art no more thine own,
Heart, brain, life, all are his alone;
Make room for Jesus there,—

Lest soon the bitter day shall come
When vain will be thy prayer
To find in Jesus' heart a place;
Forever closed the door of grace,
Thou'lt gain no entrance there.

The Midnight Coming.

At midnight the Bridegroom was announced. At midnight, when the festivities of the marriage had been postponed far beyond the usual hour,—for the Jewish weddings were invariably appointed to come off in the evening. "They usually began," writes Adam Clark, "at the rising of the evening star; but in this case there was a more than ordinary delay." This delay was long and singular, and to the waiting virgins it appeared unwarranted. They waited beyond all their calculations. The season was of his own fixing, and why did he not come for the celebration of the marriage rites? The virgins, as was the Hebrew custom, belonged to the bridegroom's household. Consequently, it would be disrespectful not to wait his coming with burning lamps. So they waited. But he chose his own time. All through the first watch they waited, but he came not. The second watch passed away, and he did not come. They, perhaps, began to wonder if they had mistaken the bridegroom's orders to watch and wait, and eagerly inquired of the passers-by, "Saw ye any tokens of his coming? We are weary and would see our Master, and enter in with him to the marriage feast." And now, as the third watch opened, and the midnight hour arrived, the cry echoed along the street, "He is coming! Go out, ye virgins, and meet him. You will know his escort by the flashing lights and the ringing music, and you will hear the voice of the bridegroom himself sweetly saying, 'Arise, come away!'"

While they were all astir, with hearts thrilling at this cry, and repeating the glad strain, "He is coming," suddenly,—even before the foolish could obtain oil to relight their dying lamps, or even the awakened ones were aware he was so near, the happy bridegroom came, and the marriage festivities began with closed doors. Even so shall it be when Christ, the heavenly bridegroom come back to the waiting household again.

The bridegroom came at midnight:—after a long period of suspense, and yet at the hour of his own choosing. There was no real delay, for it was on the previously appointed day, though at the still hour when slumber and darkness ruled, and the night was more than half spent. The virgins who loved their master, confided in the season set beforehand for his coming, though they sometimes chided his delay. They did not turn homeward, asserting that they had mistaken the day of the wedding, but they made all preparation to meet him when he came. They longed to go in with him to the marriage and enjoy the festal scene of gladness; and though he came not till patience had its perfect work in enduring, and waiting, and watching, they knew it was wiser to remain out doors with trimmed and burning lamps, on the alert for his approaching footsteps, than to heed the scorners' rude advice and go home again and put the wedding garments off. It was safe to wait with them on, though exposed to the taunt and jeer of every passer by,—safer than to be away, and run the risk of losing the feast, for if they were not ready when he came, they would miss his sweet smile and his happy greeting, and all the gladness of the bridal hour. He had fixed no other day, no other evening but this. They believed he would come at last, though the tarrying was long, and to their impatient hearts most unaccountable. They would have laughed to scorn any suggestion of a passing cynic that perhaps he would only come in some figurative manner, and that they would never truly see his face.

The night air was chill, but they waited. And though doubtless some may have been bold to whisper the bridegroom would never come, the virgins waited still. Perhaps during the long watches, they would for a moment be shaken, and imagine they had mistaken his orders as to their duty to wait and watch, or perhaps misapprehended the time, but then they remembered his faithful word, and their doubts passed away. That he would come was all their expectation. And then the joy that waited on his foot-steps the in mansion of the bridegroom and the bride, in which all who entered would participate, would make amends for all delay,—all weary, sleepless waiting. Even thus shall it be at the coming of the Son of Man.

He came at midnight. The people of the city had retired to their dwellings, and there was no stir abroad in the streets that indicated the bridegroom's nearness. Profound slumber sat over the great city, broken only here and there by the cry of the watchman on the walls. Of him they had ever and anon inquired the time of the night as the hours went slowly on. So eager were the virgins at first to see him, that every flash of a far-off torch, or faint sound of music in the distance, would put them on the alert, and they would spring to their feet and make ready, thinking he bridegroom near. Earnestly, and with strained eyes and ears intent, they had looked long and wistfully in the direction he would come, and asked for tidings, sadly inquiring, "Oh, when will he come?" At last, when all the busy multitudes who had crowded the streets in the broad daylight were away; some shut up in their dwellings in midnight revels, others in wanton dalliance with all manner of evil (for evil and sin love the darkness when no eye can see it): when the cold air had chilled their forms and dampened their faith; the virgins too, weary and faint, became drowsy, and setting down their lamps, which had so faithfully lighted the surrounding gloom, they slumbered and slept,—slept at the very hour when the festivities drew nigh, and the long looked-for bridegroom was close at hand! Asleep, and he so near! They knew he was coming; this hope was the reward of their toil. But they did not think he was coming just when he did come. "Sometime, and soon, he will come," they said drowsily, "but not now." Alas, they should have summoned all their strength to watch. This midnight was Satan's hour for the betrayal of Jesus; it was the hour when the intensity of the darkness culminated in deeds of sin. It was the hour of thieves and robbers;—how could the virgins sleep? But while the midnight cry found them asleep, yet the coming of the bridegroom found the wise virgins awake, and prepared to enter the door.

The bridegroom was on his way, but they knew it not. He had told them to watch, but they had not measured the weakness of nature, nor the strength of midnight gloom. Only the great outcry on the distant street aroused them. They had been agitated by false alarms, but there was no mistaking that cry. The attendants and heralds of the approaching escort of the bridegroom first sounded the cry. This was the true time of his coming, but it was entirely out of mind. All were taken by surprise. He came suddenly, and almost as suddenly the bridal mansion was opened and entered, and then the door was shut, and none could afterward pass in. And it will be even so when Christ comes the second time.

The bridegroom came at midnight. But why did he not come sooner? None could tell. Some of the virgins were so positive he would come early in the evening, at the time they first expected him, that they took with them only oil enough to last during the evening, and so by the time he came their lamps were dim, and their vessels empty of oil. They had left the work undone that should have been early performed. How fatal this needless neglect! The wiser virgins left nothing to be done in the last moments. They provided against any and all delay past the usual hour, for they were patient and provident, and not so sanguine of the bridegroom's coming at some hour which they themselves might imagine. To all concerned this marriage was singular, and quite unlike other weddings in the strange delay. But the well-filled vessels of the wise aided then to replenish their exhausted lamps, while the carelessness of the foolish proved their calamity. If he had come at the end of the first watch, every lamp might perhaps have been found burning, for there was great activity and zeal when they first went forth. But then there would have been no trial of watching and waiting. Ceaseless vigilance was the price of entrance to the marriage feast. And the sequel showed that they only waited who were truly ready, while the unready lacked preparation from the first.

He came at midnight. O solemn hour! And the foolish went not in. But how was their folly shown? By neglecting one little thing. They entreated admittance, but the door was shut. They knocked loudly, but none opened the door. A single, simple door shut the wise in and the foolish out. It was the turning point of the night's destiny. Only for lack of oil at the right time! Only for that shut door! They outside could hear within the music and the joyous greetings, but the dismal answer to all entreaty to be let in, was, "Verily I say unto you, I know you not!" They wondered much that the fair bridegroom could speak so sternly; they plead,—but no man could open the door. Their grief was terrible. "Let us in, that we may but kiss his feet," they cried. But the solemn answer came, "Too late!" Once these had lighted lamps and hope; now all hope fled.

How solemn was this midnight scene! Let those who wait for Chrst remember the striking and impressive moral it conveys. Christ will tarry beyond all human calculation. He will come very suddenly, while the darkness of midnight sits heavily on the world. When at last he comes, no one, not even the waiting virgins will dream he is coming just then. The cry of the descending angels will fall quickly on the ears of a startled church and world. The voice of wisdom bids all to wait, and watch, and pray: "lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping," and you are shut out of the kingdom of God forever. How fearful to discover the emptiness of one's profession and heart when it is TOO LATE!—D. T. Taylor, in "The Christian."

Immaterial Souls.

O. D. GIBSON.

Not long ago I listened to a sermon on what the preacher called the "burning of the world," in which he got the earth all burned up, and disappearing like some stars which astronomers say have flashed out into a blaze for a while and then disappeared altogether. Then before he closed he got it cleansed by fire for the saints to live in. But during the sermon he turned into the fire of hell, whether it were literal or not. He rather thought it was, but there was not room enough in hell for all the bodies of the wicked,—but there was for their souls, as many of them could occupy the same space at once. Surely this is immaterialism in earnest. But it is entirely false, never was anything more so. Occupy the same space at once? Impossible! for that which occupies space is material, and no two materials can occupy the same space; for if one is inside the other, it is because there is space there unoccupied by the other. This is a rule in philosophy. The truth is, that such souls do not exist only in vain imaginations; for if they do not possess identity and individuality sufficient to occupy space of its own, then by what means can it be proven that they are in being at all? Space is somewhere, and that which occupies it, is something. Hence, no space is nowhere and it takes nothing to occupy it. And that is what such souls are composed of, for being immaterial it must be, for that is only another word for nothing. From such an existence the Lord deliver us, for he has promised us that we shall be somebody and somewhere, for which I praise his name.

Miscellaneous.

AT HOME.

—The wages of employes of the Memphis and Charleston railway have been reduced 20 per cent.

—The little daughter of Barney McManus, of Cairo, Ill., was accidently burned to death on Wednesday evening of last week.

—Two large locomotive works at Patterson, N. J., have offered to resume work if their late employes will consent to a reduction of wages.

—A large number of men from other cities are at Cairo looking for employment; but they can get none. The Illinois Central has reduced the wages of employes.

—A prairie fire recently swept over a portion of Sumner county, Kansas, north of the Ninnescah river, burning 200 tons of hay, 800 bushels of corn, and a number of hogs.

—During the year now closing 152 lives have been lost in the Gloucester fishery, and twenty-four vessels, of the aggregated tonnage of 1,287 and $110,000 in value, have been swallowed up in the waves.

—Commodore C. Doerr has just completed the Niota dyke across Niota Slough, to the island opposite Fort Madison, Iowa, making the distance of ferryage now about one-third as far as heretofore. The Niota Belle makes regular trips every thirty minutes.

—The New York Aldermen have voted to give the departments of public works and parks $1,000,000 each, to furnish work for unemployed laborers. The recently elected members of the Legislature have appointed a committee to confer with the heads of departments about work for them.

—The Butte (Cal.) "Record" remarks: "This state has now about 8,000,000 head of sheep, which will be increased by at least 3,000,000 lambs the present season. The sheep are sheared twice a year, and, with a good season, the clip might be expected to average ten pounds per head. This would make the wool crop of California 80,000,000 pounds, or 15,000 000 more than the total product of the United States in 1871."

—The Sacramento "Bee" relates the following: "A lady called at the County Court House to-day to inquire the proper steps to take for the pardon of her son, who, at this present term of the county court met with the misfortune of sentence to San Quentin. She asked of an official in the building who has kept the run of things, and he, to be able to answer definitely, had to inquire: 'Which one of your sons, Madam, do you wish to get out? You have three there, I believe.' 'The last one,' she answered."

—An Omaha telegram says: "The St. Louis Globe of the 18th publishes a dispatch from Omaha stating that the officers of the First National Bank had published a card announcing that, in consequence of the severe financial crisis and heavy drafts upon them by depositors, they deemed it necessary to suspend payments upon all balances due from the bank to the 17th. This is a malicious libel. No such card has appeared. The whole thing is false from beginning to end. The bank has paid, and is paying, all demands in full."

ABROAD.

—General Schenck is making a tour through France with his family, and was recently in Brittany.

—One hundred and ninety-five thousand dollars in bullion was shipped from Liverpool for New York last week, by the steamship Egypt.

—The "Imparcial," of Madrid, particularly remarks the moderate tone of the protest of the British Government in regard to the Virginius affair.

—The French Assembly have adopted the report of the Commission recommending a seven years prolongation of President MacMahon's term.

—The Minister of War has ordered all members of the reserve of the army to report in person at the depots of their respective corps within a fortnight.

Captain Fry of the Virginius, previous to his execution wrote letters to President Grant, his wife, Father Hubert, of New Orleans, and to Walton Fry.

—The investigation of the steamer Bavarian disaster shows that the gear for lowering the lifeboats was inefficient, the crew undisciplined, and if any orders were given by the captain after the fire broke out, they were unheard or unheeded.

The Church.—No. 6.

C. C. MARSTON.

There are a number of additional thoughts concerning the local eldership which should be noted.

1. The elder may be a preacher or he may not be a preacher. There are instances of both. "The elder to the well-beloved Gaius," writes the apostle John in the introduction of his third epistle. Peter says, "the elders I exhort, who also am an elder." (1 Pet. 5: 1.) It is not every preacher who is fit to be elder over a church. He may be a good preacher, and yet not the proper person for elder. House keeping and house building are different callings. So there are some preachers good to build up a church, but mighty poor hands to keep it up after it is built. They will break everything to pieces in a year. They are not adapted to the work of the local eldership, and have no business with it. Others again do good service in this capacity. They can not only preach, but God has also given them the qualification of oversight over his flock. They can build a house, and then by judicious management and watchcare, they are able to keep it. Where this is the case it is proper to appoint the preacher to this office. But unless he is adapted to it he should not have it. Because he is a preacher gives him no right to the office. His fitness for the place is his only recommendation to it.

2. The preacher is not an elder unless made so by some local church.

The custom prevails in many denominations to-day of calling all their preachers, "elders." It is used as a ministerial title, by way of distinction; just as much as "Rev." and "D.D." are by others. My impression is that there is just as much authority in the New Testament for the one as there is for the other. Jesus admonishes his disciples not to be called Rabbi. (Mat. 23: 7, 8) There is great thirst among carnal men for distinction. They love titles. The believers in Jesus Christ are to be free from this. The apostles never called themselves elders unless they were elders. Peter calls himself an elder, and he was an elder made so by a local church. John calls himself an Elder on the same principle, being one of the elders of the church at Ephesus. But how was it with Paul, and Barnabas and James? Peter speaking of Paul calls him "Brother Paul," not "elder, or Rev. Paul." Paul in introducing his epistles does not say "Paul the elder," as John does, simply because he was not an elder. He never located at any certain place, but traveled constantly and preached the gospel, only during the intervals of his imprisonment, and was executed at Rome in the vigor of ripened manhood. So he was never appointed bishop or elder of any local church. Hence his salutation invariably is, "Paul the servant of Jesus Christ." It is unscriptural and antiscriptural to use anything as a title. Peter does not use elder in this sense. He simply refers to the name of his office and to the fact of his holding that office. To such as have an insatiable thirst for ministerial titles and the distinction that comes from having a handle before or after their names, I would recommend a careful and prayerful reading of the following instructive paragraph from one of the Saviour's familiar discourses to his disciples. Speaking of the Scribes and Pharisees, he says: "But all their works they do for to be seen of men; they make broad their phylacteries, and enlarge the borders of their garments, and love the uppermost rooms at feasts, and the chief seats in the synagogues, and greetings in the markets, and to be called of men, Rabbi, Rabbi. But be not ye called Rabbi: for one is your Master, even Christ; and all ye are brethren. And call no man your father upon the earth: for one is your Father, which is in heaven. Neither be ye called masters: for one is your Master, even Christ. But he that is greatest among you shall be your servant. And whosoever shall exalt himself shall be abased; and he that shall humble himself shall be exalted." (Mat. 23: 5–12.)

Humility and self-abasement are better in the long run than self conceit and self aggrandizement. If there's any exalting done let the Lord do it. He will do it in his own good time, and his time is always the best.

The humble, true minister of Christ needs no title. If he is known as a servant of God, that is enough. And the best way to publish one's self as such a servant is by being actively engaged in God's service.

3. The elder is made so by divine sanction. It isn't every man that will do for this place. It requires a peculiar class of talent. Paul, in his address to the elders of the church at Ephesus, declares that the Holy Spirit had made them such. (Acts 20: 28) God gives a man the adaptation for the work, and thus he is constituted by divine appointment in the work. The church soon discovers ability for the eldership in the man, and formally appoints him to the office. Thus the church simply endorses the previous work of the Holy Spirit.

4. There may be more than one elder in a church.

James says, "if any are sick among you let him call the elders of the church," etc. (Jas. 5: 14) This shows that there may be more than one. See also Acts 15: 4, 6, 23. Here we learn that the church at Jerusalem had elders in it. If the church is small, and consequently but little work that naturally belongs to the elder, one will be enough. But if it is large as at Jerusalem it will require several. The amount of work to be performed is the only rule to be governed by in this matter.

5. The elder's work is pastoral in its nature. He is to be a pastor. The pastor of a flock is its shepherd. Pastor and shepherd are both translated from the same word in the New Testament. Poimen occurs seventeen times; is sixteen times translated shepherd, and once pastor. The shepherd is the feeder and nourisher of the flock, having the oversight and watchcare of the same. But this is the identical work attributed in the Scriptures to the elder. The elder is therefore the shepherd or pastor of the church.

The 2300 Days.—No. 1.

T. S. THOMASSON.

"How long shall be the vision concerning the daily sacrifice and the transgression of desolation to give both the sanctuary and the host to be trodden under foot? And he said unto me, Unto two thousand three hundred days; then shall the sanctuary be cleansed." (Dan. 8: 13, 14.)

Do these days terminate at the second advent? I think they do, for the following reasons:

1. The sanctuary is to be trodden under foot to the end of this 2300 days. What sanctuary? The sanctuary at Jerusalem, of course, for that was the only sanctuary in existence at the time the vision was seen. As that sanctuary was located in Jerusalem it follows that the treading down of that sanctuary will cease when the treading down of Jerusalem ceases. The Saviour informs us in Luke 21: 24, that "Jerusalem shall be trodden down ["under foot"] of the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles are fulfilled." The times of the Gentiles are fulfilled when the Gentile dispensation ends, and as that ends just as soon as Christ leaves the mercy seat and human probation ends, so the 2300 days terminate at the second advent.

2. In v. 19, we are told that, at the "time appointed the end shall be." This language either refers to a specified period of time previously mentioned in the context, or else means that God has, in his purposes, appointed a particular time for the end to take place without revealing that time.

When Paul told the Athenians (Acts 17: 31), that God had, in his purposes, appointed a general judgment day, he used the indefinite article "a,"—"hath appointed a day," but Daniel was told that "at the time appointed" the end should be. When I say a horse, I mean no horse in particular, but when I say the horse, I refer to some particular horse previously mentioned, so when the angel told Daniel that at the time appointed the end should be, he had reference to the appointed period of time mentioned in the context. In other words, at the expiration of the 2300 days the end shall be.

The end of what? The end of the vision, evidently, and if we can ascertain that the vision ends at the second advent, we know that the 2300 days ends there too. The vision begins the pushing of the ram and ends with the breaking, "without hand," of a king of fierce countenance: therefore, if we can ascertain who is the king of "fierce countenance," and when he is broken without hand, we ascertain when the vision ends.

The king here does not mean a person, but, like the ram and goat, (v. 20,) symbolizes a kingdom, and this kingdom is distinguished by certain characteristics, among which are the following: viz., he is to destroy the holy people; stand up against the Prince of princes; he is to take away the daily sacrifice; magnify himself in his heart; and destroy wonderfully. (vv. 11, 24.) The Roman empire destroyed the holy people, the Jews, their city, Jerusalem, and the sanctuary, took away the daily sacrifice, (Dan. 9: 27,) stood up against, or crucified, the Prince of princes; destroyed wonderfully, in their wars for universal empire; magnified himself in his heart by holding as a principle that none but a Roman citizen had any right to life, etc., etc.

When is Rome to be broken "without hand"? When, in its divided state, it is to be smitten and destroyed, by a stone cut out "without hands." (Dan. 2: 34, 44.) Babylon, Medo-Persia and Greece were broken by human hands, but divided Rome in its Papal phase will be destroyed by "the brightness of his coming."

To sum up: The vision of 2300 days begins at some date in the history of Medo-Persia symbolized by the pushing of the ram, and ends with the smiting and breaking, "without hand," of divided Rome by the stone kingdom "cut out" or "set up" by the God of heaven, which smiting and breaking takes place at the second advent.

Where Are We?

A. ARMOUR.

"Then said Hopeful, "Where are we now?"

This was when Christian and he had strayed into the grounds of Doubting Castle, and Vain-Confidence had fallen into the pit. We may ask the same question. We profess to be pilgrims, looking for the celestial city. We are called Adventists, and this paper is the ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES. Formerly it bore this banner: "☞ Editorially THE TIMES will maintain the doctrine of the personal advent of Christ as an event 'nigh at hand.'" That is why we, and our paper, bear the Advent name. The Advent people looked for Christ to come in 1843 or '44, and again in 1867 or '68, besides at some less marked times. We did so look according to interpretations of the times of prophecy. The time was the cause of the Advent movement, and the life of it; without the definite time proclamations there could and would have been no such separate people as the Adventists. Where are we now?

Father Miller's '43 time argument has been met by the logic of facts. Brother Thurman's '68 argument is refuted by five of earth's revolutions round the sun, since he had calculated the Lord would descend from heaven and the dead in Christ arise. But still we bear the Advent name, and look for the coming of the Bridegroom. Why do we so? What ground have we to believe the Lord is coming soon?

Do you say, We have the signs? How do we know that we have the right signs, or that they may not increase, and intensify, indefinitely in the future? Or may they disappear, and again appear at some far future date? It seems to me that without the time we can not identify the signs.

Do you say, We have the events of consecutive prophecy, such as the image of Daniel second; we are in the last stage of that prophecy prior to the smiting by the stone: and, therefore, warranted in expecting that, as the next event; and in identifying the signs around us as those immediately to precede the advent? But, my brother, remember that the "iron" has been "mixed with clay" for some fourteen hundred years,—might it not stand for a few hundreds more? If time is to be given up, we may well ask. Where are we now?

But it is getting common not to believe in "definite time." I suppose they believe in indefinite time; but I confess I am ignorant of what that means. A day, to me, is definite time; so is a year; and so is a century. I know no other time than definite time. Soon, nigh at hand, or "quickly," may be 1800 years hence, as it was in the first century.

Where are we now? Are we at sea, without knowing either our latitude or longitude, or that of the port to which we are bound; and are we not content, or rather, a little proud, of our ignorance? If one ship-master made an error in his reckoning should another throw chronometer and sextant over board? If Miller, and Thurman erred in their reckonings, should no others be made? Or should we not, rather, seek to discover, and correct their errors? Five years have passed since '68, and still we stand on Thurman's chronological platform, if we have any; and that is proven in error somewhere, by the passing of '68; and the whole is so linked together by the jubilees, that if '68 was not the great, and last jubilee, the others also are wrongly placed.

Yet, so far as I know, no effort has been made to discover and correct Thurman's error. We know Thurman's chronology is wrong somewhere, we don't know where; yet we continue to accept it, and piece it out to reach '73, or '75. But the jubilees forbid this, as the jubilee is in '68, and if we move one we must move all, and the eclipses forbid this. So we have little confidence in definite time, and the prophecies are not much treated of; unless, perhaps, the "image," or something that can be treated in a general and indefinite way.

I think we are not going forward in this respect, we are not crying, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh!" as of old. We are not awakening people with the message, "The Lord is at hand." but, rather, are getting asleep ourselves.

We don't know exactly where we are, and many are getting so as they don't want to know. This is not right. We should learn by past failures, and we may learn by them, but not if we fold our hands in indifference, and get to sleep. Remember the prophecies are correct, it is our interpretation, or application, or calculation, of them that was wrong. We yet do well to take heed to the prophetic word, even until the day dawn. We must enquire and search dilligently what, and what manner of time, the Spirit has signified. We must run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased.

We must alter something. We must change our interpretation of prophecy, or our chronology, or give up that definite time testimony which has made us a people. But, if you choose the latter, another people will be raised up to proclaim prophetic truth. The light will shine.

The '73 time movement will soon be in the past. If it fails, as I expect it will, what is there to fall back on? There is no other time so probable in itself as '73 is, or was; and '73 was not so probable as '68 seemed to be.

I believe there is yet a light to shine on the prophecies; our danger is to give up to indifference because of past failures.

Whether definite time will ever again be generally received, I know not, in the sense of a particular year, or day, but I expect such definite knowledge as will enable us to know just where we have got to, on the prophetic chart; and just what landmarks are to be passed before we anchor in the harbor.

And yet, I cannot say that the Lord will not come to-day. What we look for before his coming may be after. Let me ask the question, Where are we now? in the sense of readiness for that day, Are we, as a people, all ready for the coming of the Son of man? As a people have we done our work? Have we warned the world of impending judgment as we ought? As individuals, is each one ready? Are all the lamps brightly burning?

There is more need of keeping a good look-out and having all hands at their post when the ship is in a fog, and when they cannot tell just where they are.

Is It True?

PHILO HITCHCOCK.

Is it true that all men are immortal, when the Bible says that "God only hath immortality"? (1 Tim. 6: 16, see also Rom. 2: 6–9.)

Is it true that man is conscious between death and the resurrection, when Paul says, "If there be no resurrection of the dead, they that have fallen asleep in Christ are perished." (1 Cor. 15: 13–18.)

Is it true that man is rewarded at death, when Christ says, "I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be"? (Rev. 22: 12.) And are men rewarded before they are judged? Paul says, "he shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom." (2 Tim. 4: 1.)

Is it true that death is but the "voice that Jesus sends to call them to his arms"? when the last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." (1 Cor. 15: 26.) Is the voice of Jesus an enemy? and will the Lord destroy his own voice?

Is it true that "death is the gate to endless joy?" when Jesus Christ, "through death, shall destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil." (Heb. 2: 14.) Are saints compelled to ride in Satan's chariots to their reward? And can not Christ reward his people without the assistance of "his Satanic majesty"?

Is it true that the wicked are to suffer eternal conscious life in misery, when the Bible says that "all the wicked will God destroy"? (Ps. 145: 20, see also Ps. 37; 104: 35) "Let the sinner be consumed out of the earth, let the wicked be no more; bless thou the Lord O my soul."

Is it true that "there is one God without body or parts," when the Bible says, "God formed man in his own image," out of "dust"? Is man without body or parts? And Paul says that "Jesus Christ is the express image of his Father's person." (Heb. 1: 3)

Is it true that Jesus Christ and his Father are one in person, when Christ prays that the church "may all be one as thou Father art in me and I in thee"? Is it not oneness in working to redeem a revolted world back to God?

Is it true that Christ comes at the death of a saint, or the conversion of a sinner, when angel voices proclaim the fact, that he would come back as he went away? "A cloud received him out of sight." John says, "Behold he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him."

Is it true that the wife loves her absent husband, and hates the thought of

The Church.--No. 6.

C. C. MARSTON.

There are a number of additional thoughts concerning the local eldership which should be noted.

1. The elder may be a preacher or he may not be a preacher. There are instances of both. "The elder to the well-beloved Gaius," writes the apostle John in the introduction of his third epistle. Peter says, "the elders I exhort, who also am an elder." (1 Pet. 5:1.) It is not every preacher who is fit to be elder over a church. He may be a good preacher, and yet not the proper person for elder. House keeping and house building are different callings. So there are some preachers good to build up a church, but mighty poor hands to keep it up after it is built. They will break everything to pieces in a year. They are not adapted to the work of the local eldership, and have no business with it. Others again do good service in this capacity. They can not only preach, but God has also given them the qualification of oversight over his flock. They can build a house, and then by judicious management and watchcare, they are able to keep it. Where this is the case it is proper to appoint the preacher to this office. But unless he is adapted to it he should not have it. Because he is a preacher gives him no right to the office. His fitness for the place is his only recommendation to it.

2. The preacher is not an elder unless made so by some local church.

The custom prevails in many denominations to-day of calling all their preachers, "elders." It is used as a ministerial title, by way of distinction; just as much as "Rev." and "D.D." are by others. My impression is that there is just as much authority in the New Testament for the one as there is for the other. Jesus admonishes his disciples not to be called Rabbi. (Mat. 23:7, 8) There is great thirst among carnal men for distinction. They love titles. The believers in Jesus Christ are to be free from this. The apostles never called themselves elders unless they were elders. Peter calls himself an elder, and he was an elder made so by a local church. John calls himself an Elder on the same principle, being one of the elders of the church at Ephesus. But how was it with Paul, and Barnabas and James? Peter speaking of Paul calls him "Brother Paul," not "elder, or Rev. Paul." Paul in introducing his epistles does not say "Paul the elder," as John does, simply because he was not an elder. He never located at any certain place, but traveled constantly and preached the gospel, only during the intervals of his imprisonment, and was executed at Rome in the vigor of ripened manhood. So he was never appointed bishop or elder of any local church. Hence his salutation invariably is, "Paul the servant of Jesus Christ." It is unscriptural and antiscriptural to use anything as a title. Peter does not use elder in this sense. He simply refers to the name of his office and to the fact of his holding that office. To such as have an insatiable thirst for ministerial titles and the distinction that comes from having a handle before or after their names, I would recommend a careful and prayerful reading of the following instructive paragraph from one of the Saviour's familiar discourses to his disciples. Speaking of the Scribes and Pharisees, he says: "But all their works they do for to be seen of men; they make broad their phylacteries, and enlarge the borders of their garments, and love the uppermost rooms at feasts, and the chief seats in the synagogues, and greetings in the markets, and to be called of men, Rabbi, Rabbi. But be not ye called Rabbi: for one is your Master, even Christ; and all ye are brethren. And call no man your father upon the earth: for one is your Father, which is in heaven. Neither be ye called masters: for one is your Master, even Christ. But he that is greatest among you shall be your servant. And whosoever shall exalt himself shall be abased; and he that shall humble himself shall be exalted." (Mat. 23:5–12.)

Humility and self-abasement are better in the long run than self conceit and self-aggrandizement. If there's any exalting done let the Lord do it. He will do it in his own good time, and his time is always the best.

The humble, true minister of Christ needs no title. If he is known as a servant of God, that is enough. And the best way to publish one's self as such a servant is by being actively engaged in God's service.

3. The elder is made so by divine sanction. It isn't every man that will do for this place. It requires a peculiar class of talent. Paul, in his address to the elders of the church at Ephesus, declares that the Holy Spirit had made them such. (Acts 20:28) God gives a man the adaptation for the work, and thus he is constituted by divine appointment in the work. The church soon discovers ability for the eldership in the man, and formally appoints him to the office. Thus the church simply endorses the previous work of the Holy Spirit.

4. There may be more than one elder in a church.

James says, "if any are sick among you let him call the elders of the church," etc. (Jas. 5:14) This shows that there may be more than one. See also Acts 15:4, 6, 23. Here we learn that the church at Jerusalem had elders in it. If the church is small, and consequently but little work that naturally belongs to the elder, one will be enough. But if it is large as at Jerusalem it wil require several. The amount of work to be performed is the only rule to be governed by in this matter.

5. The elder's work is pastoral in its nature. He is to be a pastor. The pastor of a flock is its shepherd. Pastor and shepherd are both translated from the same word in the New Testament. Poimen occurs seventeen times; is sixteen times translated shepherd, and once pastor. The shepherd is the feeder and nourisher of the flock, having the oversight and watchcare of the same. But this is the identical work attributed in the Scriptures to the elder. The elder is therefore the shepherd or pastor of the church.

The 2300 Days.--No. 1.

T. S. THOMASSON.

"How long shall be the vision concerning the daily sacrifice and the transgression of desolation to give both the sanctuary and the host to be trodden under foot? And he said unto me, Unto two thousand three hundred days; then shall the sanctuary be cleansed." (Dan. 8: 13, 14.)

Do these days terminate at the second advent? I think they do, for the following reasons:

1. The sanctuary is to be trodden under foot to the end of this 2300 days. What sanctuary? The sanctuary at Jerusalem, of course, for that was the only sanctuary in existence at the time the vision was seen. As that sanctuary was located in Jerusalem it follows that the treading down of that sanctuary will cease when the treading down of Jerusalem ceases. The Saviour informs us in Luke 21:24, that "Jerusalem shall be trodden down ["under foot"] of the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles are fulfilled." The times of the Gentiles are fulfilled when the Gentile dispensation ends, and as that ends just as soon as Christ leaves the mercy seat and human probation ends, so the 2300 days terminate at the second advent.

2. In v. 19, we are told that, at the "time appointed the end shall be." This language either refers to a specified period of time previously mentioned in the context, or else means that God has, in his purposes, appointed a particular time for the end to take place without revealing that time.

When Paul told the Athenians (Acts 17:31), that God had, in his purposes, appointed a general judgment day, he used the indefinite article "a,"—"hath appointed a day," but Daniel was told that "at the time appointed" the end should be. When I say a horse, I mean no horse in particular, but when I say the horse, I refer to some particular horse previously mentioned, so when the angel told Daniel that at the time appointed the end should be, he had reference to the appointed period of time mentioned in the context. In other words, at the expiration of the 2300 days the end shall be.

The end of what? The end of the vision, evidently, and if we can ascertain that the vision ends at the second advent, we know that the 2300 days ends there too. The vision begins the pushing of the ram and ends with the breaking, "without hand," of a king of fierce countenance: therefore, if we can ascertain who is the king of "fierce countenance," and when he is broken without hand, we ascertain when the vision ends.

The king here does not mean a person, but, like the ram and goat, (v. 20,) symbolizes a kingdom, and this kingdom is distinguished by certain characteristics, among which are the following: viz., he is to destroy the holy people; stand up against the Prince of princes; he is to take away the daily sacrifice; magnify himself in his heart; and destroy wonderfully. (vv. 11, 24.) The Roman empire destroyed the holy people, the Jews, their city, Jerusalem, and the sanctuary, took away the daily sacrifice, (Dan. 9:27,) stood up against, or crucified, the Prince of princes; destroyed wonderfully, in their wars for universal empire; magnified himself in his heart by holding as a principle that none but a Roman citizen had any right to life, etc., etc.

When is Rome to be broken "without hand"? When, in its divided state, it is to be smitten and destroyed, by a stone cut out "without hands." (Dan. 2:34, 44.) Babylon, Medo-Persia and Greece were broken by human hands, but divided Rome in its Papal phase will be destroyed by "the brightness of his coming."

To sum up: The vision of 2300 days begins at some date in the history of Medo-Persia symbolized by the pushing of the ram, and ends with the smiting and breaking, "without hand," of divided Rome by the stone kingdom "cut out" or "set up" by the God of heaven, which smiting and breaking takes place at the second advent.

Where Are We?

A. ARMOUR.

"Then said Hopeful, "Where are we now?"

This was when Christian and he had strayed into the grounds of Doubting Castle, and Vain-Confidence had fallen into the pit. We may ask the same question. We profess to be pilgrims, looking for the celestial city. We are called Adventists, and this paper is the ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES Formerly it bore this banner: "☞ Editorially THE TIMES will maintain the doctrine of the personal advent of Christ as an event 'nigh at hand.'" That is why we, and our paper, bear the Advent name. The Advent people looked for Christ to come in 1843 or '44, and again in 1867 or '68, besides at some less marked times. We did so look according to interpretations of the times of prophecy. The time was the cause of the Advent movement, and the life of it; without the definite time proclamations there could and would have been no such separate people as the Adventists. Where are we now?

Father Miller's '43 time argument has been met by the logic of facts. Brother Thurman's '68 argument is refuted by five of earth's revolutions round the sun, since he had calculated the Lord would descend from heaven and the dead in Christ arise. But still we bear the Advent name, and look for the coming of the Bridegroom. Why do we so? What ground have we to believe the Lord is coming soon?

Do you say, We have the signs? How do we know that we have the right signs, or that they may not increase, and intensify, indefinitely in the future? Or may they disappear, and again appear at some far future date? It seems to me that without the time we can not identify the signs.

Do you say, We have the events of consecutive prophecy, such as the image of Daniel second; we are in the last stage of that prophecy prior to the smiting by the stone: and, therefore, warranted in expecting that, as the next event; and in identifying the signs around us as those immediately to precede the advent? But, my brother, remember that the "iron" has been "mixed with clay" for some fourteen hundred years,—might it not stand for a few hundreds more? If time is to be given up, we may well ask. Where are we now?

But it is getting common not to believe in "definite time." I suppose they believe in indefinite time; but I confess I am ignorant of what that means. A day, to me, is definite time; so is a year; and so is a century. I know no other time than definite time. Soon, nigh at hand, or "quickly," may be 1800 years hence, as it was in the first century.

Where are we now? Are we at sea, without knowing either our latitude or longitude, or that of the port to which we are bound; and are we not content, or rather, a little proud, of our ignorance? If one ship-master made an error in his reckoning should another throw chronometer and sextant over board? If Miller, and Thurman erred in their reckonings, should no others be made? Or should we not, rather, seek to discover, and correct their errors? Five years have passed since '68, and still we stand on Thurman's chronological platform, if we have any; and that is proven in error somewhere, by the passing of '68; and the whole is so linked together by the jubilees, that if '68 was not the great, and last jubilee, the others also are wrongly placed.

Yet, so far as I know, no effort has been made to discover and correct Thurman's error. We know Thurman's chronology is wrong somewhere, we don't know where; yet we continue to accept it, and piece it out to reach '73, or '75. But the jubilees forbid this, as the jubilee is in '68, and if we move one we must move all, and the eclipses forbid this. So we have little confidence in definite time, and the prophecies are not much treated of; unless, perhaps, the "image," or something that can be treated in a general and indefinite way.

I think we are not going forward in this respect, we are not crying, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh!" as of old. We are not awakening people with the message, "The Lord is at hand," but, rather, are getting asleep ourselves.

We don't know exactly where we are, and many are getting so as they don't want to know. This is not right. We should learn by past failures, and we may learn by them, but not if we fold our hands in indifference, and get to sleep. Remember the prophecies are correct, it is our interpretation, or application, or calculation, of them that was wrong. We yet do well to take heed to the prophetic word, even until the day dawn. We must enquire and search dilligently what, and what manner of time, the Spirit has signified. We must run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased.

We must alter something. We must change our interpretation of prophecy, or our chronology, or give up that definite time testimony which has made us a people. But, if you choose the latter, another people will be raised up to proclaim prophetic truth. The light will shine.

The '73 time movement will soon be in the past. If it fails, as I expect it will, what is there to fall back on? There is no other time so probable in itself as '73 is, or was; and '73 was not so probable as '68 seemed to be.

I believe there is yet a light to shine on the prophecies; our danger is to [illegible]ve up to indifference because of past [illegible]ures.

Whether definite time will ever again be generally received, I know not, in the sense of a particular year, or day, but I expect such definite knowledge as will enable us to know just where we have got to, on the prophetic chart; and just what landmarks are to be passed before we anchor in the harbor.

And yet, I cannot say that the Lord will not come to-day. What we look for before his coming may be after. Let me ask the question, Where are we now? in the sense of readiness for that day, Are we, as a people, all ready for the coming of the Son of man? As a people have we done our work? Have we warned the world of impending judgment as we ought? As individuals, is each one ready? Are all the lamps brightly burning?

There is more need of keeping a good look-out and having all hands at their post when the ship is in a fog, and when they cannot tell just where they are.

Is It True?

PHILO HITCHCOCK.

Is it true that all men are immortal, when the Bible says that "God only hath immortality"? (1 Tim. 6:16, see also Rom. 2:6–9.)

Is it true that man is conscious between death and the resurrection, when Paul says, "If there be no resurrection of the dead, they that have fallen asleep in Christ are perished." (1 Cor. 15: 13–18.)

Is it true that man is rewarded at death, when Christ says, "I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be"? (Rev. 22:12.) And are men rewarded before they are judged? Paul says, "he shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom." (2 Tim. 4:1.)

Is it true that death is but the "voice that Jesus sends to call them to his arms"? when the last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." (1 Cor. 15:26.) Is the voice of Jesus an enemy? and will the Lord destroy his own voice?

Is it true that "death is the gate to endless joy?" when Jesus Christ, "through death, shall destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil." (Heb. 2:14.) Are saints compelled to ride in Satan's chariots to their reward? And can not Christ reward his people without the assistance of "his Satanic majesty"?

Is it true that the wicked are to suffer eternal conscious life in misery, when the Bible says that "all the wicked will God destroy"? (Ps. 145: 20, see also Ps. 37; 104:35) "Let the sinner be consumed out of the earth, let the wicked be no more; bless thou the Lord O my soul."

Is it true that "there is one God without body or parts," when the Bible says, "God formed man in his own image," out of "dust"? Is man without body or parts? And Paul says that "Jesus Christ is the express image of his Father's person." (Heb. 1:3.)

Is it true that Jesus Christ and his Father are one in person, when Christ prays that the church "may all be one as thou Father art in me and I in thee"? Is it not oneness in working to redeem a revolted world back to God?

Is it true that Christ comes at the death of a saint, or the conversion of a sinner, when angel voices proclaim the fact, that he would come back as he went away? "A cloud received him out of sight." John says, "Behold he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him."

Is it true that the wife loves her absent husband, and hates the thought of his return? Can the church, "the bride, the Lamb's wife," love the Bridegroom, and take no interest in his long promised return?

Is it true that the Christian's future state is to be an immaterial one, when Jesus Christ was the first-fruits of glorified humanity, and was material enough to wear the "mark of the spear and the print of the nails"?

"Sanctify them through thy truth, thy word is truth."

Long Prayers.

C. C. M.

No greater nuisance is known in public worship than that of lengthy prayers. I heard of a minister once that prayed one hour and ten minutes at the opening of his meeting, and no knowing how long at the close. As a general thing if a man has more praying to do than can be done in five minutes, he had better do some of it before he leaves home In the words of another I would say:

"Can no way be devised for shortening public prayers? In the public assembly, in the social meeting, and in the Sunday school, they often seriously diminish the enjoyment of all classes, They weary the poor children, they destroy good impressions made in the social meeting, and often rob good brethren of the time which belongs to them. These long prayers do not contribute to the interest of any occasion; we have sometimes thought they were the sign of very short prayers, or no ayers at all, in the closet.

"Dear brethren, you can not pray for everything at one time. Start right for the main thing at once, and when that is reached sit down and let somebody else ask for what you have omitted. It is lawful to make long prayers in the closet, but the enjoyment of the Sunday school and the social meeting hould not be marred by dull, cold, ifeless and tedious prayers—a string f common-places which a business nan would not tolerate in his store or itting room."

Long prayers are almost always dry; ad do more than any thing else to nake a congregation sleepy. Cultivate revity in prayer. Ask for just what ou want, and then stop.

Query.

Can any one state the reason why he American Bible Union Revised ersion of the New Testament renders ev. 16: 16 "And they gathered them," stead of "he gathered them to.... rmageddon," as the common version d the "received text" of the Greek ads?

No "various reading" of MSS. is ted in the Critical Greek and Engh Concordance, on the passage.

A. A.

Thou shalt be Hid from the Scourge of the Tongue."

R. A. GIBSON.

These words were spoken to comt one of God's children, one who ving suffered all the bitterness of o, and sorrow, and disappointment, t it was possible for the enemy of ls to heap upon him. Although he as a man of some wealth, yet, (as is not en the case,) he was an humble, deted servant of God. The Devil, ing this, and wishing to show to world the cunningness of his plans deceiving this good man, and not ing courage to confront the object his prey, (for we see SATAN always rks in disguise,) he began to feel ut Job in this way: First, he sends set of men, and stole away his oxen, l slew the servants; again he sends ther company, and they slew the vants, and carried away the camels n the field; then he calls fire from l to burn the sheep in the field; but ing all this was not enough to turn is one so devoted, he approaches the se of his children; and while they were eating and drinking, no doubt expecting long life, with a great storm, this wonderful worker of iniquity rushes in the walls of their dwelling, and they were crushed beneath its ruin, every one of them; and thus we see, step by step, did the enemy move around him till he is finally left desolate, penniless, and childless. Well, does he murmur? No! Does he rise up passionately, and say, (as mortal man is apt to do,) this is too much: I cannot see why I am dealt with thus: I would like to be a Christian, but this is more than I can bear? Nay, verily! But without complaint he fell down and worshiped, and sinned not, neither charged God foolishly. Then we find Satan afflicting his entire body with sores; thinking, if in the weakness of his mortal flesh, and suffering such deep anguish of body, he might be led to sin, and, thus lose his confidence in God.

Then, as he failed in all these points, (for he had left him nothing, but his miserable life to bemoan himself,) well, says Satan, I have one more great plea to make, and I've done with Job; so he sends his wife, and she uses words like these: "Dost thou yet retain thine integrity? Curse God and die." Ah! how like the devil! No wonder Job exclaims, foolish woman!" The very hour he most needs God's help, yet she the very one that should have stood by his side tenderly and prayerfully asking God to give him a little more grace: not to forsake him in the hour of so great trouble! yet she would dare to say, "curse God, and die!" Well, did not Job begin to see everything dark and gloomy? And mortal nature began to sink; yet he had friends, and now they come to him; if so be, they might show him, how God was just in dealing thus with man. Then Eliphaz spoke and told him to commit his cause unto God, and not to despise "the chastening of the Almighty: for he maketh sore, and bindeth up: he woundeth, and his hands make whole, that he would redeem him from death, and thou shalt be hid from the scourge of the tongue: Neither shalt thou be afraid of destruction when it cometh. So this (says he) we have searched it; hear it, for thy good." Well, now, may not we be encouraged by these words? What if we are buffeted, tempted and tried on every hand? The Devil has not forgotten to follow the children of God, down to this present generation: and here do we find him, clothed in all manner of hypocrisies and deceit. In all the various relations of life in which we are connected, do we meet with the scoffs and frowns of the world, and not only so, but we sometimes meet him in robes of (professed) Christianity, and with the tongue they scourge and abuse all that do not submit to the doctrines and commandments taught by them.

Then I say brethren and sisters, let us be encouraged, knowing that there is a day coming, and that soon too, when we shall be free from all these things; when the redeemed shall return to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads; when sorrow and sighing shall flee away, and God's own soft hand shall wipe away the tears from all faces. Then shall we be "hid from the tongue that scourgeth."

May the Lord hasten the day when peace and righteousness shall cover the earth; and let us be glad, and rejoice in these things, knowing that our redemption draweth nigh.

Pray for your unworthy sister in Christ, that with all the readers of this imperfect article, I may gain eternal life in the kingdom of God.

Pray and Pay.

"It requires considerable religion to pray, but still more to pay. There is hope for a man when he is reported, 'Behold, he prayeth,' but still more when it can be added, 'and payeth also.' The prayer meeting is called the pulse of the Church, the treasury is the test of its loyalty. We are commanded to honor, that is, to worship God with our substance, to bring tithes into his house to, give liberally; to lay aside our money on the first day of the week, as God has blessed us, and devote it to the service of the gospel. This is the most trying part of religion. Many are delighted with the whole of religion except its cost. That they dislike. They like free salvation, free preaching, free seats, [free papers] free fires, and free lights, and hate agents and all collectors of money."—Sel.

The Christian Life.

The Precious Boon.

One precious boon, O Lord, I seek,
  While tossed upon life's billowy sea;
To hear a voice within me speak,
  Thy Saviour is well pleased with thee.

Earth's [illegible] scoffs and scorns well pleased I'll bear,
  [illegible] though under foot I'm trod;
Nor mourn[illegible] may but share
If day by day [illegible] O my God.
  Thine approbation,

The friends I love may [illegible] me—
  Their words unkind may pierce me through;
But this my daily prayer shall be,
  "Forgive: they know not what they do."

Let me but know, where'er I roam,
  That I am doing Jesus' will;
And though I've neither friends nor home,
  My heart shall glow with gladness still.

To that bright, blest, immortal morn,
  By holy prophets long foretold,
My eager, longing eyes I turn,
  And soon its glories shall behold.

Then all the scoffs and scorn I've borne,
  For his dear sake who died for me,
To everlasting joys will turn,
  In glorious immortality.

Sel.

The Yoke of Christ.

Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly of heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls; for my yoke is easy and my burden is light.—CHRIST.

Many were the figures employed by the Master to illustrate the great truths he wished to impress upon the minds of those who sat under his teachings. The text affords us one of the most forcible and expressive of those metaphorical illustrations. Let us consider:

I. THE YOKE IS SYMBOLICAL.

1. It is symbolical of submission. How meekly the ox submits to have the yoke placed upon his neck. If he did not choose to place his neck under the yoke, no human strength could compel him to do it. His master could not compete with him for a moment if he should choose to exercise his great muscular strength in resistance. But he submits meekly, submits patiently, submits quietly. And so it must be with the Christian; he must submit to God's will. It is true he has the power to resist God's will, if he chooses to do so, but he must choose to submit rather that to resist. And the submission must be unqualified. It must be in meekness and quietness.

2. It is symbolical of obedience. When the yoke is placed upon the neck of an ox he is then ready to receive and obey any commands his master may have to give. If he is told to go straight forward in the road or furrow, he obeys by going forward. If he is told to turn to the right or left, he turns in the direction he is commanded; and if he is told to stop, he comes to a stand still till he is bidden to go forward. And thus it must be with the Christian. He must be ever ready to obey the commands of his Master. If he is told to go in this or that direction, he must go. Whatever that direction, he must go. Whatever God tells him to do, that must be done without any caviling or questioning.

3. The yoke is symbolical of restraint. No doubt if the ox could follow his natural instincts he would much prefer to go away from the yoke, and from the work, and lie down in the shade in the clover. But the yoke restrains him, and he plods on his weary way till the night comes on and the day's work is done. And how many Christians their are who, if they followed their natural inclinations, would go away from the path of duty and run into excesses that would prove their ruin; but the yoke of Christ restrains them, and they are kept in the path of duty till life's weary day's work is done, and they are released from further toil.

4. The yoke is symbolical of labor. The ox is not yoked for its pleasure, but for its labor; and to him the yoke means a long day's work or of hard pulling before the wagon, or the plow, or the harrow. And it is quite probable that these two ideas become so closely identified in even the mind of the ox, that he never sees the yoke without thinking of labor. But whether the ox has any such association of ideas or not, it is quite true that the Christian should always associate labor with the service of Christ. It is to be feared that there are those who look upon a religious life as a life of enjoyment, merely, whereas the great idea of religion is that of labor. Work while it is called to-day, for the night cometh, when no man can work.

5. The yoke is symbolical of education. It is only by having the yoke placed on his neck that the ox learns to draw. He never would learn any thing from under the yoke. And it is only in the service of Christ that we learn those great truths that are essential to our salvation. It is only in the service of Christ that we learn correct doctrinal truths. Says Christ "If any man will do his [God's] will, he shall know of the doctrine," etc. And it is also by doing the will of God that we obtain a knowledge of the experimental part of Christianity; for we also hear Christ saying, "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." It is by serving Christ, that we obtain a knowledge of Christ.

6. The yoke is symbolical of union with Christ. Two oxen are yoked together in order to obtain their united strength. And so Christ says, "Take my yoke upon you." By taking Christ's yoke, we join our poor weakness to his almighty strength. And that union must be effected if we would accomplish anything, for he told his disciples, when about to leave them, they must abide in him, for without him they could accomplish nothing. And then on a certain occasion we [illegible]r Paul exclaiming, "I can do all things through Christ who strengtheneth me." Yes, the strength of Christ is an absolute necessity for the Christian to have if he would overcome his foes, and this strength can only be obtained by taking on us the yoke of Christ.

II. LESSON LEARNED.

Meekness. "And learn of me, for I am meek and lowly of heart." Oh how important it is to learn this lesson. It is only with the meek and quiet spirit that God can dwell. Although he dwells in the high and holy place, yet he has also promised to dwell with him who is of a contrite and humble spirit. God cannot make it his home in a heart where pride is allowed to dwell. And what can be more effectual to teach man his dependence upon God, and thus take from his heart this offensive pride, than to place his neck under the yoke of Christ, and learn these lessons of submission, obedience, restraint, industry, knowledge, union with Christ, etc.

III. RESULTS.

Rest to the soul. Oh how weary we become after life's burdens! often not weary in body merely, but in soul. It is onl [illegible] joined to Christ under [illegible] Gospel yoke, and then transferring these wearisome burdens from ourselves over unto Him that we can obtain any rest to our weary souls. And how divinely compassionate is the Master to walk along side by side with us, poor sinful, erring creatures, and not only willing to sustain us, but also willing to carry all our burdens for us, and allow us to obtain rest for our burdened, weary souls. Oh, will we bear the yoke of Christ and obtain this sweet rest?—REV. L. HAWKINS, in the Golden Censer.

To every New subscriber paying for THE TIMES one year in advance, also to every Old subscriber paying ALL ARREARS and one year in advance, we will send a copy of one of the following valuable works:

DEBATE ON
"THE STATE OF THE DEAD,"
Field vs. Connolly, 300 pp.
BIBLE DOCTRINE of the SOUL,
By Prof. Ives, 110 pp.
NATURE AND DURATION OF
"FUTURE PUNISHMENT,"
By H. Constable.

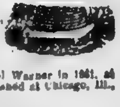
We have a large number of these good works which we want placed in the hands of the reading public, thereby doing good to them, and largely increasing our list of subscribers. We desire that every reader of the TIMES to at once enter earnestly into this good work.

Anyone sending Four New Subscribers With eight dollars, will receive their choice of the above works in addition to the one to each subscriber.

Begin the work at once. Sample copies of the paper sent on application. Address,

A. W. TUCKER.

THE
American Bee Journal



Established by the late Samuel Wagner in 1861, at Washington, D. C., is now published at Chicago, Ill., and edited by

W. F. CLARKE,
President of the North American Bee-Keepers' Society.

The American Bee Journal,

is the organ of no man, party, patent hive, or selfish interest. Its one aim will be to advance Apiculture.

We expect to give good value to all who subscribe, and the larger our hosts of readers the better value we shall be able to give them.

Lend us a hearty Vigorous Co-operation, and we promise on our part to SPARE NO PAINS to make this the

BEST SCIENTIFIC AND PRACTICAL JOURNAL OF APICULTURE IN THE WORLD.

SINGLE COPIES, TWO DOLLARS A YEAR IN ADVANCE.

CLUB RATES:

$1 75 per year, in clubs of	two	or $3 50
1 67	three	5 00
1 50	six	9 00
1 40	ten	14 00
1 25	twenty	25 00

Specimen Copies sent on application Communications and remittances to be addressed to

W. F. CLARKE,
AMERICAN BEE JOURNAL,
Room 27, McCormick Block Chicago, Ill.

Chicago & North-Western Railway.

THE ROUTE DIRECT

From CHICAGO to OMAHA,
From CHICAGO to MILWAUKEE,
From CHICAGO to SHEBOYGAN,
From CHICAGO to ST. PAUL,
From CHICAGO to MADISON,
From CHICAGO to GREEN BAY,
From CHICAGO to MARQUETTE,
From CHICAGO to SIOUX CITY,
From CHICAGO to YANKTON, DAK.
From CHICAGO to GENEVA LAKE,
From CHICAGO to FREEPORT,
From CHICAGO to DUBUQUE,

IS VIA THE

Chicago and North-Western
RAILWAY.

In Going North, North-West or West
You cannot go amiss if you buy your Tickets Via this Route.

See that Your Tickets Read via
Chicago & N.-W. Railway.

This is the Pioneer Route to and from
CALIFORNIA and the PACIFIC SLOPE.

Full information in regard to this Route will be cheerfully furnished by all Ticket Agents in the EAST, WEST, NORTH or SOUTH.

Running Through Five States,

This Great Railway Line, made up of nearly Two Thousand Miles of the best Railroad there is in the North-West offers inducements to the traveling public second to none in the country, and superior to any offered by its competitors.

Steel Rail, Shortest and Quickest Route, Westinghouse Safety Air Brakes, Miller's Safety Platform, Pullman Palace Cars.

Speed, Comfort and Safety, are combined, and render this the Great Route for the People.

IT REACHES
North, North-West and West,
And Traverses the Garden Spot of the World.
ILLINOIS, MICHIGAN, IOWA, WISCONSIN, AND MINNESOTA,
ARE ALL TRIBUTARY TO THIS LINE.

Chicago Ticket Offices:
Corner LaSalle and Randolph Street.
Corner Canal and Madison Streets.
Kinzie Street Depot, cor West Kinzie and Canal Streets.
Wells street Depot, cor. Wells and North Water Streets.

W. H. STENNETT, MARVIN HUGHITT,
Gen'l Passenger Agent. Gen'l Superintendent.

AGENTS Terms Extra. "CYCLOPEDIA of Things Worth Knowing" 25,000 WANTS SUPPLIED. CHROMO The greatest RECEIPT BOOK FREE of the age. Continental Pub. Co., St. Louis, Mo.

Advent Christian Times.

WM. SHELDON, - EDITOR.

All matter for publication in THE TIMES, whether articles, letters, obituaries, or appointments, should be directed to

WM. SHELDON,
27 McCormick Block, Chicago, Ill.

Give your Name, Postoffice, County and State every time you write.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, November 25, 1873.

FIFTEEN HUNDRED DOLLARS.

We wish to call the attention of our friends to the fact that we need fifteen hundred dollars by the 15th of December, to meet an obligation which cannot be put off longer than that time without impairing the honor and credit of our Society and people. Every friend of the cause should be interested in raising this amount, either by paying subscriptions, pledges, accounts, or by donations or loans. With a little individual effort this amount can be raised. We shall expect a hearty response. A. W. TUCKER, Agent.

BR. J. F. ADAIR reports successful meetings under the recent labors of Eld. S. K. Gibson, in southern Iowa.

"PASSED to spirit life" is the Spiritualists' style of announcing the death of a person. How unlike the style laid down in the Bible: "And he died." Both cannot be right. Either the Bible is wrong, or Spiritualism is wrong.

THE November number of the Bible Banner appears with about a dozen new editors—well supplied, surely, for a monthly. It is one of the best papers of its kind in the wide world. We wish it abundant success.

OUR country has been very much exercised over the Cuban question. Whether it will culminate in a war, or be compromised, remains to be seen. This excitement on the one hand, and the financial stringency on the other hand is producing a state of quandary in all minds.—What is coming out of all this?

ELD. J. T. ONGLEY, in sending a sister's dues on THE TIMES, remarks: "Her year is not quite up, but would rather pay a little in advance than run behind. I wish all would do so."

If all would act on brother Ongley's suggestion, it would make a wonderful change in the finances of the office. And, indeed, our rule is payment in advance. We fear this point is forgotten by too many, and they wait till they are indebted to the office before they remit. Please keep paid in advance if possible.

THE general impression that the holy land, once so fruitful, is now a land of barrenness, was recently called in question by Dr. J. V. C. Smith, who has visited that region. These are his words: "I desire to correct one impression in regard to the barrenness of the holy land. I have traveled all over it, and know it to be one of the most fertile countries on the globe. Its apparent barrenness is owing to the bad management of the ignorant people there. The land there is to-day just as fertile as it was in the days of David and Solomon."

Saints in Heaven.

While one class insist that heaven is peopled with disembodied saints, another class set up the claim that the 144,000 spoken of in the book of Revelation have ascended to heaven in their resurrected state, they having been raised from the dead at the time of Christ's resurrection. We regard this view as untenable, being both in conflict with the statements of the Bible, and predicated upon inferences drawn from unsound premises.

We will first cite some of the reasons why we deem this view antagonistic to the teachings of inspiration:

1. According to Paul, Christ, our High Priest, was to enter "alone" into the "holy place," which, he affirms, is "heaven itself," instead of having 144,000 enter with him. (Heb. 9: 7, 24.) This one fact is enough to negate all the inferences that are relied upon. But there are others like it.

2. It is clearly shown in the type that "no man" could enter while the High Priest remained in the "holy place"; and this prohibition holds good in the anti type, and consequently would debar the entrance of the 144,000. (Lev. 16: 17.) This is a consideration too prominent to be trifled with.

3. John expressly affirms: "No man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of man which is in heaven." (John 3: 13) This statement is too strong to be twisted into harmony with the claim that 144,000 have bodily gone up to heaven. Though Enoch and Elijah were taken up into the atmospheric heaven, even they never went to the heaven of Christ's abode, for "no man" has gone there, but they were transported to some locality not specified, for some purpose not explained.

4. In speaking of the Divine Potentate, Paul affirms that he is "dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto." (1 Tim. 6: 16.) This statement is widely out of harmony with the claim that 144,000 have approached that light, and are now dwelling in it. As our High Priest, Christ is dwelling there, in which capacity he has never been seen by man, and never will be; for his priesthood will terminate before his judgeship begins, in which relation "every eye shall see him."

5. The sealing of the 144,000 is located "after" the opening of the sixth seal, which ushers in the "day of wrath," and the passing away of the heavens, at which time the resurrection is due. Not till that time arrives will they be "redeemed from the earth" by a resurrection, or be sealed with immortality, being distinguished from the great multitude for a specific purpose. (Rev. 7 and 14.) As they remain unsealed till this epoch, they certainly could not have gone to heaven hundreds of years ago, and that, too, in an unsealed state, to wait till the opening of the sixth seal to be sealed.

6. In addition to the foregoing considerations the Scriptures nowhere affirm that 144,000 went to heaven with Christ; and an event of this magnitude could not have been overlooked by every inspired writer subsequent to the time the event is alleged to have transpired.

7. No person ever witnessed the ascension of 144,000 with Christ, for if they had seen such a grand army go up they would have told of it, instead of keeping it secret. And it would have been as easy for human eyes to have witnessed this scene, as to have seen Jesus ascend. It will avail nothing to say they might have ascended with Jesus early on the morning of the resurrection of Christ, for (1) if they rose from the dead with Christ, there was not time for them to have gone into the holy city and appeared unto many, and then return and rise to heaven with Christ, unless he left the tomb before the "three days and nights" were out; and (2) the angels said to his friends early in the morning that he had gone to Galilee, and it is not at all likely that they mistook heaven for Galilee; and (3) if Christ really led 144,000 from earth to heaven on the morning of his resurrection, and returned to earth again before day-light, it would not only be making good time, but it would make his return to earth his second coming, and thus deny that his second coming is still future, in opposition to Paul's subsequent statement: "Unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation." (Heb. 9: 28.) If Paul was right in placing the "second" coming of Christ in the future when he wrote, it is not true that Christ personally descended from heaven on the morning of his resurrection, and if he did not thus descend, he certainly did not then pilot 144,000 persons to heaven. The foregoing considerations will not be easily removed.

The theory which we are treating upon, like many other incorrect dogmas, claims Bible proof, which we will now examine and find whether it consists of anything more than illegitimate inferences.

1. We are referred to the following statement: "And the graves were opened, and many bodies of the saints which slept arose, and came out of the graves after his resurrection, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many." (Matt. 27: 52, 53.) Let it be noticed (1) that not a word is here said about 144,000; that is simply guess work; (2) not a word is said about their going to heaven; that is assuming just what lacks proof; but they "went into the holy city," Jerusalem; and though it is sometimes argued that Jerusalem cannot be meant by "the holy city," it is nevertheless true that Christ called it the city of the great King; and (3) if they really went to heaven, they must have gone before being judged, which would be an infringement on the Divine plan; and if 144,000 could get their passport to glory before the judgment day, why may not all? As to what became of these resurrected saints we are not told, any more than in the case of Lazarus and the widow's son; but the Scriptures nowhere affirm that they went to heaven.

2. The next text relied on as proof of this theory, reads: "Wherefore he saith, When he ascended on high, he led captivity captive," or, as the margin reads, "a multitude of captives." (Eph. 4: 8) He did not lead a part of captivity captive, but captivity entire; he did not lead a part of the "multitude of captives," but the whole multitude—all that were in captivity to death—but in what sense? Simply in the sense of a general capitulation of death's captives to him, he being "the first fruits; afterward they that are his at his coming." These captives are turned over to Christ, the conqueror, and he holds the "keys," and will liberate the prisoners at his return. It is not said that he liberated a multitude of captives, but he led them captive, he took them into his own charge. There is no intimation here given that "captivity" held only 144,000, or that the "multitude of captives" were only 144,000 in number, but the facts in the case show that the number was vastly larger, including all the sleeping saints. In the capitulation they were all turned over to him, in which sense he carried them captive. Every captive is spoken of, and not a part only.

3. The following language is also claimed as proof of this theory: "For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the first-born among many brethren. Moreover, whom he did predestinate, them he also called; and whom he called, them he also justified; and whom he justified, them he also glorified." (Rom. 8: 29, 30.)

Before this text can be twisted into a support of the theory under consideration, the question will arise, Did God foreknow only 144,000? Are only 144,000 to be conformed to the image of his Son? Are the 144,000 the sum total of Christ's "many brethren"? God's foreknowledge is not restricted to 144,000 brethren, but includes all the saints, and the "many brethren" include the entire redeemed throng, and Christ is the "first born" among them all, or the first born from the dead to an immortal life; hence, born before any of them, but not contemporaneously with any of them. But it is said some are "glorified." How many? Not merely 144,000, but all "whom he did foreknow," let that include as many as it will—them he did "predestinate," them he "called," "justified," and "glorified," prospectively in the plan of salvation; but that plan existed before any of it was executed, and many still are not "justified" in reality who will hereafter be saved, and none are yet glorified in reality. If 144,000 were glorified 1,800 years ago, why could not all saints be glorified without a judgment just as well? Prospectively God has called, justified, and glorified every saint, but part of this work is yet to be executed. There is no such thing as restricting this text to 144,000; it includes all "whom he did foreknow," and not a mere fractional part; and as it is admitted that the calling and justification are prospective, seeing the race were not as a whole in existence at the commencement of this plan, the glorification must as really be prospective, and is still future.

"Haunted Houses."

While superstition has magnified many trivial things into evidence of haunted houses, we are nevertheless convinced that in many instances, like those narrated by John Wesley, superhuman agencies often have something to do with the matter; but instead of attributing it to disembodied dead men, we believe demons are the actors.

The Spiritualist journal of Chicago publishes the following statement from L. C. Best, New Haven, Wis., concerning a transaction in Dunn county:

"The strange things of which I write, are happening at the house of Mr. Lynch. His family consists of himself, his second wife, and five children. The manifestations commenced slightly, two years ago, and consisted of hiding things, and cutting garments with shears. The mischief at that time was laid to a little seven year old boy, but of late the manifestations have become more demonstrative—furniture, axes, smoothing irons, fragments of lumber, hand-spikes, dishes, knives, forks, spoons, etc., are thrown by an invisible agent in and about the house, with great force. Dishes are broken, beds turned upside down, soap, flour and salt taken out of barrels and thrown on the ground.

This phenomenon is evidently directed by an intelligence. A case in point: A good old Christian came with his Bible, as he said, to put a stop to it. He laid his Bible down by his side, and kneeled down to pray. While praying the demonstrations ceased; but he had scarcely said amen, when a broad axe from an out-house struck on the porch-floor with a startling slam, went in front of the door, turned a right angle, proceeded into the door, made straight for the man of the Bible, turning over like a wheel, first on the end of the handle, then on the opposite end of the axe, until it fell at the professor's feet, who was retreating backwards. The axe was picked up by the woman of the house and carried out. The old man looked for his Bible, but it was gone. The house was searched, and the Bible was finally found in the bed room, torn to pieces. The old gentleman put the pieces in his pocket and left the premises, fully persuaded that he had seen the works of the devil.

I visited the family last week, and would here say, these things are true, and can be proved by scores of eye-witnesses."

These spirits are regular Bible haters. Sometimes they feel as they did in the days of Jesus, when they cried out: "Art thou come to torment us before the time?" At other times they flatter as they did in the days of Paul, through a medium, saying: "These are the servants of the Most High God." Then, again, they will deny the existence of a God in toto.

The Spiritualist journal also copies the following from a German magazine:

"The following morning he (Gœthe) tried to walk a little up and down the room, but after a turn he found himself too feeble to continue. Reseating himself in an easy-chair, he chatted cheerfully with Ottilia on the approaching spring, which would be sure to restore him. He had no idea of his end being so near. It was now observed that his thoughts began to wander incoherently. 'See,' he exclaimed, 'the lovely woman's head—with black curls—in splendid colors—a dark background!' Presently he saw a piece of paper on the floor, and asked how they could leave Schiller's letter so carelessly lying about. Then he slept softly, and awakening, asked for the sketches he had just seen. They were sketches in a dream. His speech was becoming less and less distinct. In silent anguish the close, now so surely approaching, was awaited.

"It was during these solemn moments that a fearful whistling was heard around the house, sending a thrill of terror to the hearts of those gathered to watch the closing scene of so marked a life. Thereupon a noise was heard proceeding from the rear of the premises, in the direction of the wood house. A few of the most courageous of those present wended their way thither to discover, if possible, the cause of the disturbance. On approaching the wood-house or shed, a splitting of wood was distinctly heard within, though the door was secured by a padlock. This was unlocked and the search began. There were the axe and the wood, everything in order, but the noise ceased. Scarcely had the door been closed again when the noise was repeated more audibly than before. The investigators were awe-struck by the repetition, and silently returned to the mansion. Upon arriving at the main entrance they experienced another startling manifestation. It seemed as if a whole regiment of troops was marching up and down the great stairway, with a steady and a loud tramp and yet not a living soul was to be seen. This noise continued for some time, gradually dying out, and apparently giving place to another occurrence still more marvelous.

"It seemed as if, in a less frequented part of the house, a door, either unknown or long forgotten slowly opened, creaking on its rusty hinges. Then a beautiful female spirit-figure appeared, bearing a lamp burning with a light blue flame; her features were surrounded by a halo of glory. She gazed calmly upon the terror-stricken witnesses, sang a few stanzas of some angelic melody, and then disappeared; the door closing behind her, presenting the same sealed appearance as before. In solemn silence the observers retraced their footsteps to the chamber of mourning, and there learned that the spirit had returned to God, who gave it. The last words audible were: "More light!" The final darkness grew apace, and he whose eternal longings had been for light, gave a parting cry for it as he was passing under the shadow of death.

"Other noises were heard, and many strange sights were seen in various parts of the house by the visitors and members of the family."

Do we not read that Satan even "transforms himself into an angel of light"? And is this not an instance of it? The question is not with us, "Are there spirits in existence?" This we have no doubt of. But the query arises, Are these spirits what they purport to be? When we obey the injunction, "Try the spirits," they appear in their true character—"spirits of devils working miracles."

Much that is attributed to spirits can be accounted for by the power of mind acting on mind, as in magnetism, but this only illustrates the principle on which demons can do greater deeds. The devil and his angels are not myths. They exist to deceive men, even by miracles.

"Blessed are the Dead."

Not unfrequently do we hear the following text quoted to prove disembodied blessedness: "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord from henceforth: yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them." (Rev. 14: 13) This text is pressed into the service of theologians by applying this blessedness to the soul, and the dying to the body. This is certainly a perversion of the testimony. Who are the "blessed"? Those that "die in the Lord." If the class here pronounced "blessed" are disembodied souls, the text is made to say: "Blessed are the souls that die in the Lord," &c. What, do souls die? The blessing here spoken of comes only on "the dead that die in the Lord." If the soul does not die this text does not pronounce it "blessed," for this blessing is for a class who die. It would militate against the doctrine of soul-immortality to read the text: "Blessed are the dead souls that die in the Lord." That would sound quite unlike deathless souls. But if the text is left to affirm: "Blessed are the dead ersons that die in the Lord....that hey may rest from their labors," all is lain. They "rest in hope." Said David: "My flesh also shall rest in ope." (Ps. 16:9) What shall "rest"? Not the disembodied soul; but the 'flesh." "Dead" men, men of "flesh," are spoken of, and not spirit-men. Dead men, or men of flesh can "rest"—"rest in hope"; and "their works do follow them." In death's domain "the weary are at rest." But the long promised rest that remaineth for the people of God lies beyond the resurrection, after this rest in the grave closes; for Paul says of ancient saints: "They without us should not be made perfect." In view of the final gathering, "The righteous hath hope in his death"; and his "flesh shall rest in hope."

Will Fire Burn Immortal Spirits.

Theologians apply the threatenings against the sinner, found in the Bible, to disembodied spirit men. Fire is supposed to be the agent that will give them pain. If this were really true, it would prove too much for theologians; for that which is deathless, is as really painless, as pain intensified culminates in death. Fire that would inflict no pain, would be no detriment or terror to the sinner; and, hence, no punishment: and fire that would inflict pain would ultimately bring death, thus disproving soul-immortality.

But will fire inflict pain on spirit-men? Let us look the matter in the light of facts. The claim is made that death unclothes the spirit-man, and it is also claimed that the spirit-man is in the exact form of the flesh man in which it once dwelt, having eyes, tongue, and limbs; that the fleshly arm is the clothing for the spirit man's arm, that the fleshly leg is the clothing for the spirit-man's leg, and so with other members. If this is the case, it follows that when the fleshly leg is amputated, the spirit leg is disembodied or unclothed. On this hypothesis we can decide whether fire will give pain to a disembodied spirit-man by experimenting with the disembodied leg. It that will not suffer pa coming in contact with the fire, n would the whole spirit man whe embodied.

Experiments indicate that no p caused by the application of fire supposed protruding spirit limb that kind of a disembodied man feel no inconvenience by being merged in the fire.

The difficulty cannot be obviat assuming that a different kind will be employed to punish the w with, for the burning of the Sod with "eternal fire," which reduced those cities of the plains "to ashes," is set forth the God-given "example"; and God will never repudiate his own example. That fire consumed.

In the future display of wrath against impenitent men, it will just as really consume, and not preserve. It is not due, however, at death, but at the coming of Christ; and it will be visited therefore, not on spirit-men, but on physical men: "But the same day that Lot went out of Sodom it rained fire and brimstone from heaven, and destroyed them all. Even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed." (Luke 17:29, 30) God's fire will destroy in the future, as it did in the past. It is not due till the resurrection, and consequently will not be visited upon spirit men, for there will then be no disembodied state, even if there had been previously.

The Pit of Corruption.

BR. SHELDON: You will please explain the following through the TIMES, and you will confer a great favor:

"Behold, for peace I have great bitterness, but thou hast in love to my soul delivered it from the pit of corruption; for the grave cannot praise thee; death cannot celebrate thee; they that go down to the pit cannot hope for thy truth: the living, the living, he shall praise thee as I do this day." (Is. 38:17-19.)

WM. BAKER.

Isaiah had been sent to king Hezekiah with this announcement: "Thou shalt die, and not live." Not thou shalt appear to die, but still be alive; but "die and not live." This led the king to agonize in prayer for a prolongation of life. God heard his plea, and added to his days fifteen years. Then the king uttered the words above quoted: "Thou hast delivered my soul from the pit of corruption." Doubtless the signification of "my soul" is equivalent to myself. But let it mean whatever it may. Hezekiah expected that had he died, instead of going to heaven, his soul would have gone to the "pit of corruption"; so it is evident that Hezekiah did not expect that death would have wafted him to heaven. Death to-day carries people to the same place that it did in Hezekiah's day—to the "pit of corruption." This fact augments the importance of the resurrection, which will release the captives of the pit, which pit is a "land of darkness, as darkness itself"—"the land of the enemy."

Many Bodies of the Saints.

DEAR BR. SHELDON: What is your opinion of Matt. 27:52, 53? "And the graves were opened: and many bodies of the saints which slept, arose, and came out of the graves after his resurrection, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many."

Is it not singular phraseology to say "many bodies of the saints which slept," instead of saying many saints? And are not these two verses an interpolation, instead of genuine inspiration?

Yours, in love of the truth.

A. J. MARSH.

We regard the text genuine, and literally true. We think there are no good reasons for looking upon these verses as an interpolation. They are found in early manuscripts. The phraseology does not seem any more peculiar to us, than that employed by Isaiah: "Together with my dead body shall they arise"; or that used by Paul: "With what body do they come"? "Shall also quicken [make alive] your mortal bodies"; "The redemption of our body."

struction of nasal passages, discharge
g into throat, sometimes profuse, watery, or thick and tenacious, mucous, puru-bloody, putrid, offensive, etc. In others ness, weak or inflamed eyes, ringing in deafness, ulcerations, scabs from ulcers, altered, nasal twang, offensive breath, red smell and taste, etc. Few only of symptoms likely to be present in any t one time.
cure—take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical very earnestly, to correct the blood and n, which are always at fault, also to act cally, as it does, upon the diseased and lining membrane of the nose and municating chambers. The more I see odious disease, the more positive is ief that if we would make treatment y successful in curing it, we must use tional treatment to act through the s well as soothing and healing local tion. Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, guademp-

Tion of ly fl: ways
as at, and all t:d not disagis es-and ;raves pleasits or holdsaints vege
Th
to di as so throu estine terw to be amon in the land. It is large—36x54 inches—accurate and reliable, being compiled from the latest sources and beautifully executed. Besides showing the geography of the holy land in a clear and correct manner, the geological formation, the mineralogy, topography and botany are noted in well arranged tables, including the months, changes of seasons, etc. A chronological scale of 6,000 years, showing the principal events of the past and the prophetic periods, terminating in 1875, is given. Jerusalem and its environs, Paul's travels, journeyings of Israel, plans of Herod's temple and Ezekiel's for comparison. Profile section of the land from Joppa to the mountains of Moab, showing on a regulated scale the elevations and depressions of the valley of the Jordan and the Dead Sea. A synopsis of the things concerning the kingdom of God and the signs of the times are given in printed columns. The whole forming an invaluable aid to the study of the Holy Scriptures and an ornament to any study or parlor. To be appreciated the map must be seen, and we would recommend to our brethren everywhere to order at once. For further particulars see the advertisement by brother Wilcox, the compiler and author, in another column.

A. W. T.

Stubborn Facts that all Should Duly Heed.

A. N. SEYMOUR.

From the creation of the world, up to the exodus of the children of Israel out of Egypt, some 2,500 years, is—

1. No command of God to keep holy the seventh day Sabbath.

2. No example of any one keeping that seventh day.

3. No rebuke for violating any such commandment.

4. No sin of Sabbath-breaking mentioned during that time.

5. No penalty attached to the transgression of any such commandment.

6. No prophet or apostle, or the Holy Spirit, or Jesus Christ ever refer back to that period and say that it was observed. "The whole counsel of God" is just as silent as death and darkness touching such a requisition. Now precisely the same facts stand connected with the gospel dispensation, save one, that is, example; but a definite reason is given why this was done. "This I do for the gospel's sake." (See 1 Cor. 9:19-23.) The problem then solved, is demonstrated to be this, that the seventh-day Sabbath is wholly confined to the Jewish people, and those within their borders, and to the Jewish dispensation. God gave that day to this people as one absolute memorial of their deliverance from Egyptian bondage, and there is no evading this fact by the cunning craftiness of human genius.

Moses stood pre-eminently at the head of the Jewish people, or house. (See Heb. 3:1-6) But now his leadership and government has entirely ceased—ended; and the whole world is delivered over into the hands of his successor, our Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of the Highest. The prophet of God (Isaiah) when speaking of him, says: "For unto us a child is born, a Son is given, and the government shall be upon his shoulders; and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, the mighty God, the everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace." Paul, when speaking of this same being, says: "God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name. That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven and things in earth, and things under the earth, and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord (ruler, governor), to the glory of God the Father. (Phil. 2:9-11.) Peter, when referring to him, states the same fact: "The God of our fathers raised up Jesus, whom ye slew and hanged on a tree. "Him hath God exalted with his right hand to be a Prince and a Saviour for to give repentance to Israel and forgiveness of sins." (Acts 5:30, 31.) Now God says of him: "He shall speak all that I shall command him." (Deut. 18:18.) "This is my beloved Son, hear ye him." "Him shall ye hear in all things, whatsoever he shall say unto you." (Matt. 17:5; Acts 3:22, 23.) Why hear him? Ans. Because "In him are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge." (Col. 2:3.) "In him dwelleth all the fullness of the Godhead bodily." (Col. 2:9.)

Now for another catalogue of facts:

1. There is no seventh-day Sabbath in Christ, "who of God is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification and redemption."

2. There is no seventh-day Sabbath "in the gospel of Christ," "which is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth."

3. There is no seventh-day Sabbath in the "ministration of the Spirit."

4. There is no seventh-day Sabbath "written by the Spirit on the fleshly tables of the heart."

5. There is no seventh-day Sabbath contained in the "treasures of wisdom and knowledge hid in Christ."

6. There is no seventh-day Sabbath embodied in the "word of reconciliation."

7. There is no seventh day Sabbath in the "law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus."

8. There is no seventh-day Sabbath in the second "will" (testament) "by the which" will "we are sanctified."

9. There is no seventh day Sabbath in the marriage "covenant" between Christ and the church, "married to Christ."

10. There is no seventh-day Sabbath in the "all spiritual blessings in Christ."

11. There is no seventh-day Sabbath in the "unsearchable riches of Christ."

12. There is no seventh day Sabbath in the "commandments of God given by Christ."

13. There is no seventh day Sabbath in the "new covenant."

14. There is no seventh-day Sabbath in the "law of faith."

15. There is no seventh-day Sabbath imposed on the "new man" formed by the union of the Jews and Gentiles.

16. There is no seventh-day Sabbath embraced in the "yoke of Christ."

17. There is no seventh-day Sabbath taught or enforced in "the dispensation of the gospel," or "dispensation of the grace of God."

18. There is no seventh-day Sabbath in the "record that God has given of his Son."

19. There is no seventh day Sabbath in the "wisdom and knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ."

20. There is no seventh-day Sabbath in "the faith of Jesus."

Now if any critical, sharp-sighted seventh-day Sabbath keeper will give us the chapter and verse—the definite evidence from any of the above twenty references to Scripture facts, for Christians in this age to keep the seventh-day Sabbath, I will pledge myself to keep the decalogue Sabbath, and commence publishing it to the world at once.

But what must we do to be saved? is a very important inquiry. Our Lord Jesus Christ chose twelve and seventy apostles and said to them: "Go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature; he that believeth (what, the gospel?) and is baptized, shall be saved; and he that believeth not shall be damned." "Hear ye him." "Whosoever hath ears to hear, let him hear"; "and whosoever will not hear that prophet shall be destroyed from among the people."

Now another question: What does the gospel embrace?

1. "The power of God unto salvation." (Rom. 1:16.)

2. "The manifold wisdom of God." (Eph. 3:10.)

3. "The knowledge of God." (Col. 1:9, 10.)

4. "The government of God." (Is. 9:6)

5. "The righteousness of God." (Phil. 3:6-10; Rom. 10:1-4.)

6. "The truth of God." (Rom. 3:7.)

7. "The riches of God's goodness." (Rom. 2:4.)

8. "All spiritual blessings," &c. (Eph. 1:3.)

9. "The light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ." (2 Cor. 4:1-7.)

10. "The unsearchable riches of Christ." (Eph. 3:6-8.)

11. "The gospel of God." (1 Thess. 2:8, 9.)

12. "The commandments of God" "given by Christ." (Rev. 14:12; Thess. 4:12.)

13. "The message of God." (1 John 1:4, 7.)

14. "The law of liberty." (James 1:25.)

15. "The new covenant." (Heb. 8:8, 11.)

16. "All the fullness of God." (Eph. 3:17, 19.)

17. "The perfect will of God." (Rom. 12:12.)

Jesus Christ, the head of the body, the church, is God's plenipotentiary minister, "in whom are hid" all "the the above principles," or "all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge." Hence God has highly exalted his Son, &c. (See Phil. 2:9-11.) This very same "counsel," "gospel," "message," "will," "law," "government," "wisdom," "knowledge," "covenant," &c., &c., was delivered to the apostles by the Holy Spirit, to publish to all nations, beginning at Jerusalem. (John 17:7, 8.) "Now they have known that all things whatsoever thou hast given me are of thee. For I have given unto them the words which thou gavest me, and they have received them," &c. (John 16:13.) "Howbeit when the Spirit of truth is come, he will guide you into all truth." Hence we find the apostle saying while in the discharge of his duty: "I have fully preached the gospel of Christ." (Rom. 15:19.) "I have not shunned to declare unto you all the counsel of God." "I have kept back nothing that was profitable unto you." (Acts 20:20, 27.) "Hear what the Spirit saith to the churches." (Rev. 2:7, 11, 17, 29, and 3:6, 13, 22.)

If all follow this good, heavenly counsel you will walk in the light of truth, and the "blood of Jesus Christ will cleanse you from all sin."

Will the Crisis and other papers copy?

The Last Conflagration.

The Apostle Peter's comparison between the destruction of the old world by water and the present world by fire, proves that one event is just as literal as the other. It is a literal fact that the old world perished by water; It is a literal fact that the heavens and earth which are now are kept in store, or treasured up, so as not to be destroyed by another deluge; and it is a literal fact, if there is any established meaning in language, that the same world which is thus kept "standing out of the water and in the water, is reserved unto fire, against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men." This is the apostel's most unequivocal assertion. He spoke of the old world literally, of the heavens, and earth which are now literally, of the water literally, and consequently of the fire literally. His argument may be thus put: "If the old world was overwhelmed with water, literally, so that the inhabitants were drowned and the world perished, then, no less literally, must we expect that when the day of judgment comes, this present world, now standing out of the water and in the water, shall again be destroyed, not by water but by fire."

The prediction of the new creation, which is to follow the conflagration, corroborates this view of the subject. The state of the things following the destruction of Jerusalem, if we have any conception of the facts or of the meaning of words, cannot possibly be taken as the "new heavens and new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." The disorder and general profligacy that ensued were rather proofs of moral degeneracy. But our figurative interpreters will tell us that the old world that passed away was Judaism, and that the new creation was the Gospel dispensation. But the Gospel dispensation came long before Jerusalem was destroyed. Its morning beams shone brightly on Pentecost, and its brightest rays of glory cheered the apostles in their personal toils. If the Gospel kingdom was the new heaven and earth, the new creation preceded the figurative passing away of the old. But sober-minded thinkers can not allow this preposterous assumption. The order of events is too plainly described in the chapter to admit of such perversion of truth, except by those who are "willingly ignorant;" and it was not without foresight of special occasion, that the solemn discourse on the judgment was followed immediately by a warning against those who "wrest the Scriptures to their own destruction."

We now submit that it is as clear as language can make it, that the grand description of "the day of the Lord," including the burning up of the earth and the works therein, must be taken literally, without the speculative refinements of modern "liberalism." Such was the faith of the early church, and such has been the faith of the followers of Christ through all the ages, while "scoffers" have never ceased to ridicule it, contemptuously, saying, "Where is the promise of his coming?" But despite the scoffs of infidelity and the sneers and sophistries of the "liberalism," the doctrine of a future judgment rests upon the sure foundation of the infallible Word, and one of the sublime incidents of the day of the Lord will be the conflagration of this sublunary world.—Western Christain Advocate.

Correspondence.

Address to the W. Va. and S. O. A. C. Conference.

Dear brothers and sisters, who are members of the different churches composing the West Virginia and Southern Ohio Advent Christian Conference, we see by the fourth annual session of our conference that there are two hundred and twenty-one members belonging to the different churches of this conference. Those two hundred and twenty one persons profess to be Christians. They do not only profess to be Christians, but they profess to believe in the speedy coming of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. Now if a person believes that Christ is coming soon, they surely will use every means to advance his cause. Well, says one, what can I do? I will tell you, my brother or sister, what you can do. You see by the report that there has been $35.25 collected on tent account; now a tent to be any account should cost $300; now take $35.25 from $300 and you will have $264.75; now divide $264.75 by 221 members that belong to this conference, and the quotient will be the amount that each member should pay, which is $1.19. Who is it that cannot pay that amount in 6 months? Now I told you I would tell you what you could do: Just put your hand in your pocket and draw out $1.20 and hand it over to the treasurer, and let us have a tent in six months. Let the preachers go to work and do all they can to get the money, so that we may send on and get our tent, and then we will have no trouble to get a place to hold our meetings. This is one of the duties you owe to the cause of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. But does this constitute a Christian? No; but this with other duties does. Another duty is, you should not neglect to pray; and why? Christ said to the disciples: "Pray lest ye enter into temptation." The apostle Paul said: "Pray without ceasing"; and Christ said: "Pray always, that you may be accounted worthy to escape all these things, and to stand before the Son of man." Is this all? No. Love one another. "Live peaceably with all men as much as lieth in you." Is this all? No. "Pray for your enemies; do good to them that hate you."

Dear brethren, work for the cause of Christ. Time is short, and we should aim to do our duty. What next? Let our preachers preach the word, and give God thanks that they are counted worthy to suffer for his name's sake. Some preachers can't stand persecution. What did Paul say? "Those who live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution"; and when they can't stand persecution, they can't stand it to preach without a big salary; (says one, "I wont preach unless they support me.") Look here. Who employed you to preach? You are ready at once to say "The Lord called me into the field to labor." Well, if the Lord called you out to work, he is paymaster, and whenever he don't pay you it is evident there is something wrong. So I would say, be strong in the cause; work, preach, pray and suffer for the name of Jesus; look and pray for his coming and the establishment of his kingdom. Let us have on the whole armor of God, that "we may be able to stand in the evil day, and having done all to stand," adding the shield which is faith, and the sword of the Spirit which is the word of God, and for an helmet the hope of salvation. May the Lord soon come and receive us to himself, that we may be present with the Lord, is my prayer, for Christ's sake. Amen.

DELANY HAMMACK.

From Eld. A. N. Seymour, Mich.

BR. SHELDON: Some weeks since I attended a seventh-day Advent tent-meeting at Quincy, Mich., and listened to two discourses by Eld. Vanhorn, on the Sabbath and law, after which, I, by the permission of the tent managers, was allowed to speak on the same question. As the public were duly notified, all classes came out to hear, and well filled the tent, and we spoke over two hours to a very attentive and deeply interested audience; and as Mr. Vanhorn, in noticing my effort in the organ of Sabbath-keepers, for August 26, very unkindly misrepresents me, I will quote his language, and then reply in the language of the editor of the Quincy Times, who was present to hear Mr. Vanhorn's statements:

"On Sunday, the 3d instant, A. N. Seymour gave a discourse of more than two hours length, against us, on the law and Sabbath. He traveled closely in his track of fifty unanswerable arguments, which has been so faithfully reviewed and exposed in pamphlet form by J. M. Aldrich. If boasting and assertion were argument, then his array against the Lord's Sabbath would have been formidable. The people, almost to a man, were displeased with his effort. He took away from them the Sabbath, Sunday, and all."

Reply by the editor of the Quincy Times:

"Mr. Seymour came on the stand promptly on time, and labored diligently and learnedly; culling from the Bible the texts, sentences and paragraphs here and there, which seemed to furnish the authoritative evidence underlying the Sunday, or 'first day' theory, interlarded occasionally, with arbitrary revelation and dogmatic assertion. Mr. Seymour is a very good speaker; is well posted in the material elements having a bearing on the question at issue, and his argument of two hours or more of rapid utterance was listened to by the large and interested crowd in attendance with breathless and anxious attention; and, finally, leaving an unexhausted reservoir, he closed, evidently carrying with him all the Sunday worshipers present.

"In our estimate of the effort, we were impressed as was the Dutch justice, "that he had got his case."

As to the Lord's day, we left the decided impression that it was the duty of all Christians to observe the first day of the week in commemoration of the resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ from the dead.

A cause that has to be sustained by glaring misrepresentation cannot win my sympathy or support. May the ever-blessed God pardon our erring brother of this digression, so untruthful; and, for the future, may he learn more of the "Royal Law" that says, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

Mr. Vanhorn, in his statements, refers to J. M. Aldrich's review of my fifty unanswerable questions, and desires to impress all with the idea that those questions have been thoroughly exposed and refuted, but I fail to see that even one of them have been demolished or rendered useless by all the sarcasm, witticism, ridicule, mysticism and vain philosophy of the reviewer. His desperate effort to cast dust and smoke into the eyes and ears of men of sound judgment and intelligence, makes but little or no impression, for such men weigh facts instead of dust and smoke. This kind of argument may move personalities who are carried by every wind of doctrine, but not otherwise.

From Br. T. R. Way.

Elds. Sweet and Ongley held tent-meetings two weeks at Waterford, and I was one of four that came out on the Lord's side by baptism, and now feel as if I wanted the TIMES more than ever, for I do like this doctrine, and desire to get all the light upon it I can. I have a good deal to learn yet, but want the truth and nothing but the truth. Advent doctrine is sneered at a great deal here, but it is a doctrine good enough for me, and I sometimes think it is too good; and if Jesus had not said "He that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out," I should not dare to hope; but such is the glory of his grace that I, even I, can dare to accept the promises, and I know that if I hold fast the beginning of my confidence steadfast unto the end, I shall, with Paul and all others that love his appearing, receive a crown of everlasting life that fadeth not away, for he is faithful that has promised who also will do it.

I have met with a good many difficulties and hard texts since I commenced to study Advent doctrine, but I have had light on most of them, yet there are some that perplex me a little yet; one point is, what was the nature of Christ's existence with the Father before the world was? And was Christ the creator of all things? John 1:10 reads: "He was in the world, and the world was made by him, and the world knew him not." I believe they are as much two distinct persons as an earthly parent and son, and I believe they have corporal bodies. Paul says: "There are bodies celestial and bodies terrestial." If Christ had a celestial body in heaven, what did he do with it when he came down to this terrestial sphere? And again he says: "Glorify me with the glory which I had with thee before the world was." Now the question with me is, did Christ really exist before he was conceived by the Holy Ghost? The old saying is, "It takes a fool to ask questions and a wise man to answer them," but I ask for no other reason than because I want information. Can you not give us an article in the TIMES on these subjects?

[We regard the doctrine of the pre existence of God's Son one of the plainest in the Bible: "I came down from heaven." Though it would require a miracle to merge a celestial and a terrestial body in one, it is not a greater miracle or mystery than the supposition that Divinity was propagated at Christ's conception. We cannot get rid of one mystery by plunging into another. We may speak more on this theme hereafter.—ED. TIMES.]

From Eld. P. W. Hough, Mindora, Sax Co. Wis.

BR SHELDON: After leaving Arena I was privileged to tarry at Cross Plains three days, and preach to them four discourses: the audience was full and attentive. I was glad to greet old and tried friends of the cause, and form an acquaintance with the people in that section. Most of them are well-to-do farmers; very busy threshing, and finishing up their fall ploughing; yet they had time to come out and hear the gospel of the kingdom. I was sorry I could not stay longer. This church has had the labors of Br. Philo Hitchcock, who is beloved by them all. They regret his leaving them, but as he has decided to go to Arena, they commend him to the work the Lord has called him to; and look elsewhere for an under shepherd to break to them the bread of life. Br. Mabey is expected: he is a man of God; hope he may be pleased to accept the charge.

There is one fact connected with their Sunday School which is worthy of note, and minus this fact perhaps I should not have burdened the columns of our excellent paper with this notice It is this: Sr. Weston is Superintendent of S. S.; lives five miles away, yet always meets her school in time; is master of that position, and is much esteemed for her labors of love. God bless her little charge.

I see by TIMES that Br. Sheldon has misunderstood me by saying I have decided to leave this State next spring. It should have been this fall or spring; where my field of labor will be after next spring (supposing time continues) I cannot say. I leave it with the Master to decide, so I may be privileged to preach the unsearchable riches of Christ.

Before leaving you, dearly beloved brethren and sisters of like precious faith with us, we wish to tender you our sincere gratitude for your hospitality and kindness bestowed You have promptly remembered our wants.

It has been the highest object of my Christian efforts, while with you, to build you up on our most holy faith, and to increase the unity of the Spirit in the bonds of peace, that you might be presented to Christ (at his coming) without spot, and blameless. In this labor we have been encouraged by the worthy example and efforts of your conference, who have been pioneers in this glorious cause before we came among you. With the ministry and membership in this State we have been favored with a cordial and Christian reception and co-operation and hospitality.

I cannot believe you have been ignorant of my weakness and faults, but your Christian charity, like a mantle, has covered them. Suffice to say: I love you; the remembrance of past meetings with you will only intensify my Christian solicitude in prayer for you, that you and I may be preserved blameless until the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, when the whole family will be present. Will you pray for me, your brother in labor?

And now I will close with the language of Paul on two occasions: "And now brethren, I commend you to God and the word of his grace, which is able to build you up and give you an inheritance among all them which are sanctified." (Acts 20:32.)

"Finally, brethren, farewell: be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace; and the God of love and peace shall be with you." (Cor. 13:11.)

Will you write to me, brethren and sisters? Shall be glad to hear from you. Among other things, let me hear how you prosper in divine life.

My address, after Nov. 1, '73, will be Fairbank, Buchan County, Iowa.

My friends in Iowa who may wish a visit from me can correspond with me.

From Eld. W. W. Cate, Hamburg, Iowa.

BR. SHELDON: Suffer me to say through your excellent paper, that I have been about two months on a mission out here in Northwestern Missouri and Southwestern Iowa, among the destitute churches, endeavoring to strengthen the things that remain, and to enlist those out of Christ in his service. We had a meeting of some twelve days at Arbor Hill, Iowa.

The church here that we organized over three years ago of eight members, has since been greatly blessed under the labors of Eld D. S. Clark; yet they have recently been called to pass through serious trials. We left them encouraged and strengthened to persevere: two enlisted anew in the service. They are without a pastor. May the Lord bless them and send them a faithful shepherd.

We had a meeting of days at Pen Center, Madison county. We found many warm and faithful hearts here: two new enlistments. May the Lord help them all to persevere.

We find a small, but tried and faithful band here in Hamburg, enduring much opposition: two additions yesterday. We spent two days here, and then, after visiting Quitman and the Greenland church in Missouri, we returned home to Hudson, Bates Co., Mo.

More ministerial help is much needed in this great field. Who will come, filled with love and zeal for the Master, and gather sheaves for the harvest? What we do must be done quickly.

Yours, expecting redemption when Jesus comes.

From Br. B. J. Goodwin, Iowa.

BR. SHELDON: During the past season the seventh-day Adventists have held three tent-meetings within fifteen or twenty miles of me: as a consequence my mind has been much exercised on the Sabbath question.

I think the TIMES should give us "line up on line" on this question, that its readers may know "that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ....for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified." (Gal. 2:16.)

They ask, "Which of the Father's commandments can we break and be guiltless"? I answer: we cannot break a commandment after it is established. But who say they can abolish one of God's commandments? I answer: "For the priesthood being changed, there is made of necessity a change also of the law....For there is verily a disannulling of the commandments going before, for the weakness and unprofitableness thereof. For the law made nothing perfect, but the bringing in of a better hope did; by which we draw nigh unto God." (Heb. 7:12, 18, 19.)

"But if the ministration of death, written and engraven in stone (which could be none others than the ten commandments) was glorious....which glory was to be done away: how shall not the ministration of the spirit be rather glorious? For if the ministration of condemnation be glory, much more doth the ministration of righteousness excel in glory. For if that which is done away was glorious, much more that which remaineth is glorious ....the children of Israel could not steadfastly look to the end of that which is abolished." (2 Cor. 3:7-13)

Respecting the change in the administration, the Lord did not leave us in the dark until the change was made, but some 1,400 years before Christ became "the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth." (Rom. 10:4.) The Father said through Moses: "The Lord thy God will raise up unto thee a prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren, like unto me; unto him shall ye hearken." (Deut. 18:15.) In Acts 2:23 we read respecting this same prophet, "And it shall come to pass that every soul which will not hear that prophet shall be destroyed from among the people." Some 600 years before we were "delivered from the law" (Rom. 7:6) the Lord by the mouth of Jeremiah (ch. 31:31) said: "Behold, the days come....that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah."

I understand by the above language that the Lord never designed that the law should be in force throughout all time. The apostle Paul understood it so; for he says in Gal. 3:16: "Wherefore serveth the law? It (the law) was added because of transgression, till the seed (Christ) should come, to whom the promise was made." "Wherefore the law was our school-master to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith. But after that faith is come, we are no longer under a school-master." (vv. 24, 25) "Christ is become of no effect unto you, whosoever of you are justified by the law; ye are fallen from grace." (ch. 5:4.)

Yours in the hope of life when Jesus comes.

We are doing what we can in the gospel field. Have just returned from Colesburg, where we held three meetings. There was a good interest to hear the truth. This is a new field; they desire to hear more.

Yours, fraternally, J. R.

little seven year old boy, but of late manifestations have become more demonstrative—furniture, axes, smoothing irons, fragments of lumber, hand-spikes, dishes, knives, forks, spoons, etc., are thrown by an invisible agent in and about the house, with great force. Dishes are broken, beds turned upside down, soap, flour and salt taken out of barrels and thrown on the ground.

This phenomenon is evidently directed by an intelligence. A case in point: A good old Christian came with his Bible, as he said, to put a stop to it. He laid his Bible down by his side, and kneeled down to pray. While praying the demonstrations ceased; but he had scarcely said amen, when a broad axe from an out-house struck on the porch-floor with a startling slam, went in front of the

From Br. W. C. Stone, Boston.

We are near the everlasting kingdom. Rome is almost in the past. The stone will come, certain and sure, to hit on the feet of the image. It will come sudden. The first we shall know is the heavens will light up with the glory of God. Attending his glorious Majesty will be an escort more grand than any earthly potentate has ever had—armies of heaven and armies of earth—the saved ones through the mercy and goodness of our God. Tongues that now lay in dust will soon be reorganized again, with mouths made new, eyes to see the King in his beauty, ears to hear the heavenly sounds, feet to walk on the new earth with Abraham of old, after his long sleep.

Where are the men who profess to be called of God, who are now almost asleep on this glorious subject? May God move them mightily to do his bidding.

Yours in hope.

From Eld. Wm. McCulloch, Johnson Co., Ill., Nov. 10, 1873.

BR. SHELDON: The good work of the Lord is progressing here in Southern Illinois. Myself and wife came to this county in company with Brn. Lawver and Childs. We commenced a meeting in Friendship church (Baptist), and friendship has prevailed ever since we began our work, and the good Lord has blessed the effort. At this writing some twenty have already expressed their desire to follow the Saviour. Yesterday, Nov. 9, was a good day to the little church in Johnson Co. Nine were added to their number, and received the right hand of fellowship by Br. F. A. Childs, their pastor; and the prospect is now good for as many more. Sinners are inquiri what they must do to be saved. Praise th Lord.

We expect to go into Union County ne week to commence a protracted meeting the Union chapel, eight miles east of Anı Pray for the success of truth in every field our labor. The Judge standeth at the doo God help us to be faithful.

Yours for truth, justice and mercy.

From Br. D. O. Ames, Kansas.

DEAR BRETHREN: There is great need more laborers here to share the privations a western life. There is great need of th gospel in its purity to be preached her many have not heard of the glorious trut Perhaps news from my field of labor wou be of some interest to those that have labore in the West. Through all our hardships an privations we feel we are amply paid when w meet dear brethren and have a glorious seaso in the worship of the Lord. If we forsake al and follow him, we are not only paid here i this life, but we have hope that we will ob tain a better resurrection and receive a home in the kingdom.

My short labors in Bourbon county was at tended with very good interest, though muc opposition was met; but the seed sown i good ground will bring forth fruit. May th Lord uphold the truth.

Monday, Oct. 27, came to Girard. Did no receive the privilege of preaching in town but doors were opened two miles southeast c town, and I fulfilled an appointment, preach ing from the words "Worship God." (Rev 22:9.) A good interest was manifested; one brother, formerly a Methodist, has accepted the faith. May God be with him.

Found the enemy sowing his seed through a Spiritist lecturer. "There shall arise false teachers" in these last days, if possible to deceive the very elect. Beware of those false christs, lest ye be drawn away from the true faith.

Oct. 29. Rode nine miles southwest of Girard; found a comfortable home with Br. and Sr. Freede. Preached in their school house. Br. John Fore (Church of God) has raised up a few followers in the faith looking for the coming kingdom. May the time soon come when there will not be faith of different names, but we will be united together, "even as I and my Father are one."

Friday, Oct. 31. Came to Br. Nichols'. Found them strong in the faith of the coming kingdom. Went to Jacksonville, where there has been a few followers raised up through the labors of Br. Smith, and Br. and Sr. Clark. Left for evening appointment, and when I came found the school board had voted to not have meeting, and we had to return, not as we had come, with bright anticipations of a bright session together, but in sorrow, thinking that men in the last days are following the pernicious ways of Baalam; for which they shall be judged.

Nov. 1. Came to Sherman. Spent the night with a friend, not a believer. Political questions are raging here, and people do not hear the warning voice of the fulfilling of the prophecies.

Sunday, Nov. 2. Started for Bero, and in due time found the brethren faithful in discharging their duty. May the Lord bless them, and may we all meet in the kingdom together Found the brethren still holding their Sabbath prayer meetings at Br. Dunbar's. Found a pleasant home and greeting among the brethren. Had preaching at early candle-light. A good interest manifested, and through the request of the brethren, appointed a meeting during the week. May the light still shine that others may come in with this people of the true faith. Pray for us that we may be kept humble, and have a good season together.

Monday, went to Columbus; had a kind welcome at Br. and Sr. Sanford's. Had a pleasant interview with them; we always deem it a great pleasure to talk with those that are in the faith of the coming kingdom. Returned and found a good number waiting on the Lord. Had a good interest.

Friday, Nov. 7. Had a pleasant season together in a conference meeting before preaching. How cheering it was to see so many rise and tell of their faith and hope of the redeeming blood of our dear Saviour. It was a season long to be remembered; after which I spoke from 1 Sam. 2:35, "And I will raise me up a faithful priest that shall do according to that which is in mine heart," showing that Christ is our high priest, and we must offer our petitions through him that they may be accepted of the Father. A good interest. After service I gave liberty to all that wanted a home in the kingdom, to rise, and many rose immediately. Pray for us, dear brethren.

Nov. 10. Meeting closed last evening; had a large attendance and good interest. Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was attended to; twenty-four partook with us. It was a beautiful sight to behold, and I trust many minds were brought back to the time when the last supper was eaten by our Lord with the beloved disciples, and when they sat around the table the question passed, "Is it I?"

Dear brethren, do we appreciate those words

, "As oft as ye do it, do it in f me?" "I will eat and drink I eat and drink it anew in my om." We had a happy season was sorry to part with many May God bless the dear brethsat Bern, and may we all meet n to part nevermore.

will be Chetopa, Labbett Co., rther notice.

Retrospect.

ll remember all the way which the ed thee, these forty years in the ble thee, and to prove thee, to know e heart, whether thou wouldst keep nds, or no." (Deut. 8 : 2.)

re the children of Israel reok back, and remember all ich the Lord their God had w he brought them out of ing them by a cloudy pillar a fiery pillar by night? lothes and shoes were prethose forty years, did not grow old? How he sent em for meat, and manna for w he caused water to gush rock to quench their thirst? livered them at the Red Sea, was no possible way of low he caused the Syrian ar the noise of chariots and en no one was near, causing e in haste, leaving every d, supposing the Israelites numerous kings to join them? they required to often look referring to the strait places Lord fought for them, and them? Was it not to strength ith, cause them to trust him ? So it strengthens our faith ck and remember how the ught out deliverance for us were completely hemmed in, e Red Sea, could do nothing still till the Lord opened the r escape; could not see to tep ahead, neither could we 's hand holding on to ours. evers back, and we cry out ress,—well, away back there st as strait a place, and the deliver me in his own good eliverance will come; so we om sinking, take courage, and on.

we are perplexed in temporal d are ready to cry out, Jacob these things are against me." privilege to take it to the prayer. Says little faith, n idea! to ask for money when t," and still believe all the silver, and cattle on a thoubelong to the Lord, and not e creatures he has made are d by him, feeding even the othing the grass of the field, even such little things; and versight of our temporal affairs. faster says, "O ye of little But we must go about these nderstandingly; ye ask and ot, because ye ask amiss, that consume it upon your lusts. es. We must aim at the glory n asking; he does hear prayer, to his name. But Oh for grace om the very depth of our hearts, vill; Father thou knowest best; ll be done." An unworthy e least of all saints.

C. Case.

regret that one page of this as so badly torn in opening lope that it could not be printope to hear from our sister Ed. Times.]

The Word of God.

word of God is a sure support n in trouble. Man's word may nable, wise, consoling, but it orms a solid foundation in trias, like that which comes from God's word comes with an ; it falls upon the heart like the unlight upon the mists of night, ing the doubts, illuminating hway, and inspiring the courage for the struggle unto victory. e end of all controversy. What one may doubt, he may not doubt the immutable word of God. Whatever else may fail, this word will abide. Heaven and earth may pass away but this word remaineth. No man who puts his trust in that word, and who shapes his life in the filial obedience to it, need fear the opening future either of this life, or of that to come. Respect unto the commandments excludes fear and shame. It emboldens the heart, and strengthens the hands for all good deeds and gives assurance to the coming victory and reward.—Vermont Chronicle.

River Whirlpools.

Among the many phenomena of the Colorado River are "swirls," so called. They occur everywhere, but only at high stages of water. A bubble rises from the bottom and breaks with a slight sound upon the surface. The water at the point begins a rotary motion, so small that an inverted teacup might cover it. Larger and larger grows the circle, till a surface forty feet in diameter is in motion, spinning round a funnel shaped hole in the centre, two or three feet across at the top, and coming to a point somewhere in the depths below. Often a large tree, floating down the stream, is caught, and its foremost end thrust up in the air twenty or thirty feet, while the other passes underneath—the exposed end to be slowly drawn down again, and to disappear. Three soldiers—deserters from Camp Mohave—passing in a skiff through the ravine immediately below the fork, suffered their craft to run into a swirl. One of the crew, at the first intimation danger, threw himself overboard far beyond the charmed circle; and as he swam away, he saw the boat spin round and round, until one end being drawn into the vortex and the other upheaved in the air, it slowly sank as it revolved, into the turbid besom of the river, its human freight to be seen no more, for the Colorado River does not give up its dead—no corpses lodge on its shore.—Intelligencer.

Symptoms of Catarrh.

Obstruction of nasal passages, discharge falling into throat, sometimes profuse, watery, acrid, or thick and tenacious, mucous, purulent, bloody, putrid, offensive, etc. In others a dryness, weak or inflamed eyes, ringing in ears, deafness, ulcerations, scabs from ulcers, voice altered, nasal twang, offensive breath, impaired smell and taste, etc. Few only of above symptoms likely to be present in any case at one time.

To cure—take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery earnestly, to correct the blood and system, which are always at fault, also to act specifically, as it does, upon the diseased glands and lining membrane of the nose and its communicating chambers. The more I see of this odious disease, the more positive is my belief that if we would make treatment perfectly successful in curing it, we must use constitutional treatment to act through the blood, as well as soothing and healing local application. Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, when used warm and applied with Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche effects cures upon "common sense," rational and scientific principles, by its mild, soothing and healing properties, to which the disease gradually yields, when the system has been put in perfect order by the use of the Golden Medical Discovery. This is the only perfectly safe, scientific and successful mode of acting upon and healing it.

So successful has the above course of treatment proven that the proprietor offers $500 reward for a case he cannot cure. All the medicines sold by Druggists. R. V. Pierce, M. D., Proprietor, Buffalo, N. Y.

Our Young Folks.

Pride.

'Tis a curious fact as ever was known—
But often in human nature shown,
Alike in castle and cottage—
That pride, like pigs of a certain breed,
Will manage to live and thrive on food
As poor as a pauper's pottage.

Of all the notable things on earth,
The queerest is the pride of birth,
Among our "fierce democracy!"
A bridge across a hundred years,
Without a prop to save it from sneers,
Not even a couple of rotten piers,
A thing of laughter, flings and jeers,
Is American aristocracy!

Depend upon it, my snobbish friend,
Your family thread you cannot ascend,
Without good reason to apprehend
You may find it waxed at the other end
By some plebeian vocation;
Or, worse than that, your boasted line
May end in a loop of stronger twine,
That plagued some worthy relation.

Because you flourish in worldly affairs,
Don't be haughty and put on airs,
With insolent pride of station,
Don't be proud and turn up your nose
At poorer people in plainer clothes;
But learn, for the sake of your mind's repose,
That all proud flesh—wherever it grows,
Is subject to irritation.

Saxe.

The First Potato Feast.

There is a story connected with the introduction of this useful and nutritious vegetable to English soil, which will interest all who derive both profit and pleasure from it now.

It is known to the great mass of readers that it was first sent to England by that half gentleman and half pirate, admiral Sir Francis Drake, the terror of the Spanish and the pride of the English sailors.

While absent on the American coast, Drake sent to a warm friend and admirer in England some seed, explaining in a letter that it was a pleasant and nutritious article of food, and, he thought, destined to become a very important contribution to human subsistence by transplanting it in their fertile island.

The gentleman to whom it was sent had all faith in the judgment of this rover who sank Spanish galleons and plundered Spanish colonies with equal zeal and facility, so he caused the seed to be planted with all care in a part of the kitchen garden.

He was delighted with the prompt appearance of the leaves above the earth; then the stout stalk gave him satisfaction, and finally the blossoms and the potato apples successively crowned his joy.

The stalk he mistook for a regular bush, like a gooseberry bush, that was endowed with fruit bearing flowers for a number of years, and the apples he naturally enough supposed to be the fruit. As they gave signs of being ripe by falling off, he caused enough to make a grand feast to be collected, and sent out invitations to his friends to partake of his hospitality.

They all came, and the host addressed his neighboring lords and esquires as follows:

"I have the honor to present before you a fruit which my friend, the celebrated Drake, has recommended to me, and which I believe may become a valuable acquisition to the already great agricultural wealth of our English soil."

The fruit had been stewed and highly flavored with nutmeg and cinnamon, as apple sauce is prepared by us, but all the spices could not overcome the disagreeable taste of the potato apple, and the guests did not derive the pleasure which Drake and the landholder had expected from the foreign vegetable.

The gentleman ordered his gardener to dig up the bushes and burn them up as soon as he had time, and passing through his garden about a month afterwards, he noticed some black balls among the heap of ashes where the stalks had been collected and burned. As he took up one and crushed it between his hands he found that it was white and mealy, and pleasant tasted, and investigating further he found that many of the stalks which were not withered enough to be wholly consumed had several of those balls clinging to the roots.

Hastily calling his gardener, they dug the earth where the seed had been planted, and now found the fruit to which Drake had undoubtedly alluded, in great quantities in the ground.

Once again his neighbors were invited, and now the real article was served up to them roasted, and at once commended itself to the palates of the assembled guests.

Drake's letter was read, and in explanation of his previous mistake, the host pleasantly added:

"You see my friends how easy it is for a man to deceive himself, and impose upon the kindness of others, if he does not take the trouble to investigate a matter thoroughly before he announces the results to his too confiding fellows:

"It also teaches us that those who judge things by what appears on the surface, and do not dig down to the very root of the matters in question, make a sorry mistake, and fill their hearts with nauseating deceptions while the pleasant substantial truths remain undiscovered in darkness below."

The speech was received with applause, and the vegetable at once rose to notice in the civilized world, where it has year after year by its substantial and useful qualities increased in importance and favor.—Bright Side.

A Child's Lecture.

C. C. M.

The following incident will interest "Our Young Folks."

In one of the English villages, where trees, birds, and flowers united in proclaiming the beauties of the country, the beer shop at the "corner" was constantly producing its usual fruit of sorrow and sadness in the homes of the cottagers. The efforts of the clergyman, schoolmaster, and the Sabbath School teachers were constantly being marred by the bad influences of the beer-shop.

One poor drunkard, once a bright-eyed little fellow in the village school, who, but for the evil example of an intemperate father, might have become a clever and useful man—who had so often been fined by the magistrate for being drunk, was at length put in the village stocks close by the gate of the fine old Church.

It was a very sad sight. The villagers were gathered round, looking on, some with pity, some in derision, and others in disgust. The beadle, full of his office, was a prominent figure in the group.

One little girl, who had hold of her father's hand, inquired, "Father, why have they put him in the stocks?"

"Because he gets drunk," replied the father.

"When will they put you in the stocks, father, for you get drunk, you know?" innocently asked the child.

What a powerful lecture from this little child? Well might it produce the resolve that, with God's help, "drink" should be forever abandoned.

The Work of Rum.

C. C. M.

Few realize the misery and crime caused by intemperance. Here is a touching story that needs no comment. It will find a deep response in many hearts.

A drunkard who had run through his property returned one night to his unfurnished home. He entered his empty hall. Anguish was gnawing at his heart-strings, and language was inadequate to express the agony as he entered his wife's apartment, and there beheld the victims of his appetite, his loving wife and a dear child. Morose and sullen, he seated himself without a word; he could not speak; he could not look up then. The mother said to the little one at her side:

"Come, dear, it is time to go to bed;" and that little baby, as she was wont, knelt by her mother's lap, and gazing wistfully into the face of her suffering parent, like a piece of chiseled statuary, slowly repeated her nightly orison.

When she had finished, the child (but four years old) said to her mother:

"Dear mother, may I not offer up up another prayer?"

"Yes, yes, my sweet pet, pray."

And she lifted up her tiny hands, closed her eyes and prayed:

"O God, spare, oh, spare my dear papa!"

That prayer was lifted with electric rapidity to the throne of God. It was heard on high; it was heard on earth. The responsive "Amen!" burst from the father's lips, and his heart of stone become a heart of flesh. Wife and child were both clasped to his bosom, and in penitence he said:

"My child you have saved your father from a drunkard's grave. I'll sign the pledge."

Books and Tracts.

List of Books, Tracts, etc., kept on sale at the Advent Christian Times office.

RESURRECTION OF THE DEAD IN Christ, (German.)

NATURE AND DESTINY OF MAN; (German.)

RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. (German.)

DESTRUCTION OF THE WICKED. (German.)

SOUL OF MAN. (German.)

THE KINGDOM OF CHRIST ON Earth (German.)

IS MAN IMMORTAL? (German.)

☞ The above seven German tracts are published by L. Reimer, 1026 Chestnut st., Philadelphia, Pa., and can be ordered either of this office or of him.

IMMATERIALISM, by Wm. Sheldon. Post-paid, 5c.

THE PENALTY OF SIN, by O. R. Fassett. Post-Paid, 6c.

*AN ADDRESS TO M. E. CON*ference of Minnesota, by Eld. L. C. Collins. Should have a very wide circulation. Post-paid 7c.

THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL answer to the questions: Is the popular conception of the soul that of Holy Scripture? By Chas. L. Ives, M. D., Professor of the theory and practice of Medicine in Yale College, 1872. 119 Pages. For sale at this Office. Price 20 cents

END OF THE KING OF THE NORTH, and the Impending Time of Trouble, and the near Coming of Christ. By L. T. Cunningham. Price, 12 cents.

THE JUDGMENT IMPENDING Prophecy and Chronology converging to one grand culmination. By L. T. Cunningham. Price, 12 cts.

THE DESTINY OF MAN, by William Erwin. An excellent treatise by a member of the M. E. denomination that gives the Bible view in a radical style. 303 pp. nicely bound in cloth and gilt. $1,50 post paid.

MODERN SPIRITISM, its origin, character and tendencies, by C. C. Marston 56 pp. in paper $6,00 per hundred; $1.00 per dozen; 12 cts per dozen

*COMPLETE WORKS OF FLA*vius Josephus; translated by William Whiston. 979 pp. in cloth post paid $3.00

THE COMING EARTHQUAKE, By D. T. Taylor. 25 Cents.

*CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—Unabridg*ed, $3, by express. Condensed, sufficiently full for ordinary purposes, by mail. $1 75.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE: with engravings, maps, and tables. $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

BIBLE DICTIONARY: by Smith & Barnum. The best abridgment of Smith's larger work. Leather $6. cloth $5. By express.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. $12 by express.

ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORDance. With Greek and English index. $5 by express.

ENGLISH-GREEK LEXICON. By Liddell & Scott. A standard work. $7 50. by express.

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 32mo. 25c.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock. $3 50, Post-paid.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3: 1. By H. L. Hastings. Paper, 50c. Postage, 5c.

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY of God; and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By F. A. Smith. 15c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man of the earth earthy; the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 7c.

*PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC meet*ings. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 40c. a hundred.

*THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; with a re*view of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabbath By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of Scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added History, Statistics and Tables. Cloth, $2; leather 2 50

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. By Wellcome and Goud. 460 pp $1 25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATTHEW, 24 and 25, 15c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM. 20c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM 25c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic; Which? 10c. $5 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a dozen. The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one adress, post-paid, for $4 00.

LAST DAY TOKENS: by S. S. Brewer. 35 cts.

FUTURITY; by Wm. Sheldon. 20 cts.

THE INDEX BOOK MARK; 25c a dozen.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. Nothing so good on this topic. Cloth $1. Paper, 50c. 3 copies for $1, post paid.

GOOD TIDINGS; a general view of Advent doctrine. By an Association of Authors. 426 pages, Cloth 80c. Paper 40c. Post paid.

*THE NATURE AND DURATION OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT: By Henry Con*stable, Prebendary of Cork. 25c. Post paid.

THE FAITH OF ST. PAUL; showing it to have been neither Pharisaic nor Sadducean, but Hebrew. By L. C. Collins. 15c.

*THE STATE OF THE DEAD; a Discus*sion between N. Field, M. D. and T. P. Connolly, 8vo. pp. 240. 50c. Post Paid.

THE JUBILEE HARP. $1. $9 a dozen.

HADES AND SHEOL; By L. C. Collins. The best published exposition of the parable of Dives and Lazarus. 15c.

*THE ADVENT MINSTREL; a choice colle*tion of spiritual songs. Flexible cloth, 25c. $2.15 a dozen. Paper, 15c. $1.50 a dozen.

*HYMNS OF THE HARP; Cloth, 75c, Leath*er $1.

HYMNS OF THE MORNING; A new and rich collection. Cloth 50c. Leather, 60c.

PAULS EARNEST EXPECTATION and hope: (Phil. 1: 21: 26.) By O. R. Fassett. 5c.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT: containing the original Greek text of the New Testament with an interlineary word for word English translation and a new emphatic version, pp. Cloth $4; leather back $5., Postage, 15c.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, November 25, 1873.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES
IS PUBLISHED BY THE
Western Advent Christian Publishing Society.
Business Office: McCormick Block, corner of Randolph and Dearborn Sts., Room 27.
[Printing Presses located at Norwood Park.]

TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.
Sent Three Months for Fifty cents.

The officers of the Society are as follows.
President—DARIUS MATHEWSON,
Vice President—L. C. COLLINS.
Secretary—FRANK BURR.
Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND.
PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
GEO. HOWARD, E. McCULLOCH,
J. M. SNOOK.

A. W. TUCKER, TREASURER & BUSINESS AGENT.

Don't Fail

To give your name and address full and complete every time you write.

Remember

That all Drafts, Money Orders, etc., payable to the Business Agent, A. W. Tucker.

☞ Address articles intended for publication in THE TIMES to Wm. Sheldon, and all business communications to

A. W. TUCKER,
27, McCormick Block,
Chicago, Ill.

☞ Write Appointments, Notices, Communications for THE TIMES, and business matters, each on separate pieces of paper.

☞ Do not fail to comply with the above suggestions.

APPOINTMENTS, NOTICES, etc., must reach us by Thursday night to be in time for the next issue. Please remember this.

Business Department.

Book and Job Work.

We are now prepared to do all kinds of BOOK and JOB PRINTING with despatch, and in a satisfactory manner. Books, Pamphlets, Tracts, Leaflets, Circulars, Envelopes, Letter-Heads, Note-Heads, Bill-Heads Cards of all kinds, etc., etc. Our friends and the business public will do well to get our figures before ordering work elsewhere. Estimates cheerfully given.

Now Ready.

"The Disembodied State Examined:" with an exposition of "Our Earthly House," and "The Rich Man's Hell." It contains 42 pp., besides the cover, in good, clear type, on good paper. For sale at the Times office, ten cents single, $1 per dozen.

Letters Received.

☞ ALL letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgement is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

P Miller
D Buckholder
E E Goff
G A Brown
J F Wilcox
C C Marston
I Tyler
S Hall
L Martin
R L Harrison
H H Jones
D Bosworth
G Benfer
O D Gibson
C H Williams
D R Mansfield
E K Smith
A M Sidwell
J Crawford
T J Rambo
W H Hill
J Paine
J Thompson
I E Andrus

I Tyler
E Goodwin Sr
L F Cole
J F Flory
J Powell
E B Scott
W L Griffing
J Bailey
J Thayer
J Powell
A F Carpenter
J Johnston
G E Okerlind
R M Nevins
A Wilbur
L Lyman
R Russell
A J Young
L C Griggs
R Ruch
W Demars
E E Goff
H W Wixom
A A Smith
P Miller

R Wattles
R M Rowell
J Short
J S Patterson
F Morrison
M Knight
J A Smith
J Hamilton
D Cheatham
C F Benton
J Campbell
S Getty
W M Rhoades
J Arnold
E N Bliss
C R White
M Briggs
S Whetstone
R Crandell
S P Lowell
W H Connell
M A Tibbets
B J Goodwin
J S Lawyer
S J Halslett

Books and Tracts Sent by Mail.

J Bowers
H B Baldwin
J B Anderson
F Burr (by exp)
E C Andrus
J F Flory 2
J T Evans
B Perham

E D Kentfield
M S Berean
B Vinepper
Maria Berry
Charles Angle
J T Ongley
P G Bowman
J E Bifford

G D Sckendick 2
H E Thayer
G A K Bills
C Mendenhall
L Rice
C N W Conady
J Welch
J A Cargile

The $4000 Fund.

To Free the Society from Debt.

CASH.

Previously Reported	$671 80

PLEDGES PAID.

Previously Reported	$404 50
L. Campbell	8 00
J. Campbell	20 00
G. Benfer	10 00
A. M. Sidwell	2 00
R. Wattles	4 00
J. M. Weagant	10 00
A. Wilbur	10 00
Julia Thayer	50
Martha Broadbent	5 00
Mary Newberry	5 00
J. Powell	3 00
Mary Briggs	1 00
C. R. White	10 00
S. J. Halslett	5 00

WESTERN TRACT FUND.

Previously Reported	$71 00
J. Campbell	2 00
J. Crawford	1 00
R. Ruch	25
J. M. Weagant	10 00
R. Russell	5 00
G. W. Baker	50

Appointments.

ILLINOIS.

Genoa, Oct. 27, and every other Sabbath until further notice. E. H. BURINGTON.

After November three-fourths of my time will be to use as the way may open.
ALICE E. RATHBUN.

Preaching brethren coming to Chicago wishing to preach in Advent Christian Chapel, will correspond with H. P. WRIGHT,
203 Walnut Street.

DISCUSSION.—There will be a public discussion at Ancona, Livingston Co., beginning the second Friday in Dec. 1873, at 2 p. m., holding four days of two sessions each, on the following proposition: "Resolved, That the wicked dead will be raised to life from the state of death in the last day" C. C. Marston, of Elida, Ill., affirms; John Billings, of New Rutland, Ill., denies.

Providence, Bureau Co., Temperance Hall, Nov. 26-30.

New Rutland, second and third Sabbaths in December. C. C. MARSTON.

MICHIGAN.

The second quarterly meeting of the Southern conference district of Michigan will be held at the Bell S. H., in Woodbridge, Hillsdale Co., Mich., commencing on Thursday eve., Dec. 11, 1873. A general attendance is requested. Come to work. Brethren coming by Railroad will stop at Reading, on the Ft. Wayne, Jackson & Saginaw R. R. C. FOX, Sec'y.

In the Delling S. S., Almer, Sept. 7, 10½ a. m., and every two weeks.

In the Graham S. H., Fairgrove, Sept. 14, 10½ a. m. Centre S. H., 3 p. m., and in the Hinson S. H. 8 p. m. and every two weeks.
E. H. DURAND.

The next quarterly meeting of the Northern District of Michigan will be held in the Decker S. H. at Millbrook, commencing Friday, Dec. 26, and continue over Sunday.
E. B. SCOTT, Sec'y.

Porter Centre, Mich., Sept. 21, 10½ a. m., and 3 p. m., and every four weeks.
JAS. FERRISS, Pastor.

Ashland, at the Lambson S. H., Sunday, Nov. 23, 10:30 a. m., and once in two weeks.

Armstrong S. H., Sunday, Nov. 30, 2:30 p. m., and once in two weeks. E. B. SCOTT.

INDIANA.

Meeting every Sunday at the Volga Church, commencing at half past 10 o'clock, preaching alternately by T. V. Porter and the pastor,
LEMUEL RECORD.

Lavalle, Oct. 5, and every four weeks until further notice. Fairfield, Sept. 12, and once in two weeks. Baraboo, Sept. 12, and once in four weeks. Webster's Prairie Sept. 28, and once in four weeks. Fisher Valley, Sept. 21, and once in four weeks. E. P. GRAVES.

WISCONSIN.

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.

Call upon Brn. Bracket or Reese, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.
A. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

Preaching at the Cain S. H., Decatur Co., first Sunday in each month, at 11 a. m.

Duble S. H., 3 p. m., first Sunday in each month. J. F. ADAIR, Pastor.

Preaching in Thompson's Hall, Delmar, Clinton Co., Jan. 5, and every two weeks until further notice. C. W. PITCHER.

Manchester, the first and third Sabbaths of each months, at 11 a. m. and 2:30 p. m.
J. RIDLEY, Pastor.

MINNESOTA.

The Lord willing, I will preach at Monticello, Wright Co., Minn., every Sunday at 10½ a. m.

Baily S. H., at Baily Station, near Elk River, Oct. 12, at 3 p. m. and every two weeks after until further notice.

Otsego Village S. H., Sunday Oct. 5, at 3½ p. m. and once in two weeks after, until further notice.

Lilly Pond, Sunday eve., Oct. 5, at 7 p. m., and once in two weeks after, until further notice.

Preach at Big Lake Station, Sunday eve., at 7 o'clock.
S. C. WELLCOME.

P. S. Our Covenant Meeting is held the last Saturday, before the first Sunday in each month, at 2 p. m., at the Monticello Chapel.

Cottage Grove, Atkinson Corners, Sunday, Nov. 30. MRS. H. M. DUBEY.

NEW YORK.

Buffalo, N. Y., at 528 Eagle St., Nov. 30.

Warsaw, N. Y., commence eve. Dec. 1st, and continue over the 4th, if desired.
JOHN T. ONGLEY.

Saratoga Springs; meetings every Sunday in the Lower Town Hall, corner of Broadway and Lake Avenue, at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday School and Bible class directly after morning service.

Prayer meeting every Thursday eve., at the residence of the pastors, 213 Broadway, nearly opposite Town Hall.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., prayer meeting every Thursday evening, at the residence of the pastors, Van Dam street, first house east of Broadway.
WM. A. and M. L. DURAND, Pastors.

OHIO.

Christian Advent Church, Archibald, Fulton Co. Preaching every Sunday at 10 o'clock, a. m. and 7 o'clock p.m. Prayer meeting every Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock, Reynolds' S. H. Traveling brethren having a gospel sermon to preach, please give us a call and preach the word.
P. VOS, Elder.

PENNSYLVANIA.

The next quarterly meeting of the Advent Christian Conference of Northern Pennsylvania and Southern New York will be held with the church at Wallace Station, Steuben Co., N. Y., commencing Friday evening, Dec. 5, to continue over the following Sunday. Those coming by railroad will leave the cars at Wallace Station on the Rochester and Corning Railroad, and inquire for M. J. Brown. Those coming with teams, inquire for T. C. Armstrong. All are cordially invited. E. C. COWLES, President.
J. W. TAYLOR, Secretary.

IOWA.

A protracted meeting will be held by brother Wilber, in the Greenwood neighborhood, six miles south of Williamstown, and ten miles east of Nashua, commencing Nov. 30. Brother Howe and all interested are invited. B. J. GOODWIN.

Commercial.

MONETARY.

OFFICE OF THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES,
SATURDAY, November 22, 1873.

During the week financial and commercial affairs have greatly improved. The activity exhibited in the grain and other markets of the city has in a measure stimulated the movement of many of the banks, though the business done has not been large. Money is still tight. The banks as a rule however, seem to be willing to aid their best customers and friends—grain and provision men being the heaviest borrowers. City deposits have improved and the banks show a stronger condition. Country balances are small; considerable currency being shipped to the interior to be employed in the marketing of the hog crop. Interest collections are fair, and the rates continue firm at 10 per cent. per annum. 1 to 1½ per month are ruling rates on the street. Gold was affected somewhat by the warlike advices upon the Spanish difficulties, advancing ¼ to ⅝ of one per cent. At the close, was quoted at 109¾ to 110. Government bonds sympathizes with the change in gold, and the market ruled a shade higher. Demand was light.

The following are the quotations of Government securities and stocks:

	Buying.	Selling.
U. S. 6's of '81	113¾	114¼
" 5-20s of '62	108½	109¼
" 5-20s of '64	109	109¾
" 5-20s of '65	109¼	110
" 5-20s of '65 Jan. and July	112	113
" 5-20s of '67 " "	113½	114½
" 5-20s of '68 " "	113¾	114¼
" 10-40s	107¼	108¼
" 5s, new issue	108½	110
Chicago City 7s		95 & int.
Cook County 7s		95 & int.
Sterling Exchange (large drafts)		107½@110½
Gold and Gold Coupons	109¾	110
Gold drafts on New York		110¼

The Bureau of Statistics, in the report which is being prepared for publication, states that the total imports for the last fiscal year amounted to $663,410,507, of which $21,480,937 was specie and bullion. The domestic exports for the year were $518,938,985, of which the specie and bullion amounted to $73,905,546. The foreign exports in 1873 were $28,148,418, and in 1872, $22,769,749. Making allowance for the difference of commodities remaining in the warehouses of the United States at the close of the year, the imports were in excess of the domestic and foreign exports combined, a little over $100,000,000. But since the 30th of June the balance of trade has inclined much more in our favor, and continues to be so.

The London Stock Exchange having adopted four shillings (British) per dollar (American) as the rate of exchange with the United States, instead of the old equivalent of four shillings and sixpence to the dollar, the par of exchange in New York will (after December 3) be 97.33 100, instead of 109½ as heretofore. The old nominal "dollar of exchange" in London, was based upon the Spanish dollar, a coin which contained 54 pence sterling, or 109½ cents of the present American gold coin.

MARKETS.

The leading markets seemed stronger at the close of the week, and a much better feeling prevailed.

FLOUR—City retailers and exporters are purchasing rather freely, and under the light stocks of choice spring extras, etc., and favorable eastern and foreign advices, an advance of about 12½ was gained. We quote:

Choice winter white extras	$ 8 00	@ 9 00
Fair to good do	6 75	@ 7 50
Low to medium do	5 50	@ 6 50
Red winter extras	5 75	@ 7 00
Fancy western spring extras	5 75	@ 6 00
Choice do	5 12	@ 5 75
Good do	4 75	@ 5 00
Medium to fair do	4 37	@ 4 62
Low and medium do	4 00	@ 4 25
Fancy and well-known Minn.		7 00
Good to choice do	5 75	@ 6 50
Good to fancy Minn. (patent)	8 00	@ 13 00
Choice spring superfines	3 50	@ 4 00
Fair to good do	3 00	@ 3 25
Low and common do	2 50	@ 3 00
Rye flour	4 25	@ 4 50
Buckwheat flour	8 50	@ 9 00

WHEAT—Was active and higher. No. 1, 1.10; No. 2, 98@1 00; and rejected 93@93½.

CORN—May also be reported active and higher, and may be quoted at 41½ for high mixed. No. 2, at 40@40½, and rejected at 39.

OATS—Moderately active at 33 for No. 1; No. 2, at 33½, and rejected, 30.

RYE—Weak and but little doing, at 65½ for No. 2.

BARLEY—Strong, with sales at $1.35@1 37, for No 2; No. 3, 93.

BROOM CORN—Was quiet. Good to extra hurl, 8@9c; brush that will work itself into a choice hurl broom, 6½@7½c; for good do, 5½@6c; good to choice stock braid, 5½@6½c; inferior brush, 4@5½c.

BUTTER—Market quiet with a good demand. Choice yellow is still scarce and may be quoted at 25@31c; medium to good, 19@24c; inferior, 13@18.

CHEESE—Prices are not materially changed, ruling firm at substantially last week's quotations. Business is only fair. We repeat our list as follows: Ohio factory and Western factory, do, 12@13c; lower grades, 8@11c.

EGGS—In demand at 22@23c, with fair supply.

HAY—Sold to a moderate extent at about previous rates. We quote the wholesale prices paid by dealers, as follows—cars to contain 20,000 lbs; New timothy, prime, $14.00@15.00; do, No. 1, $13.50@14 00; do, No. 2, $11.00@13 00; prairie, upland, $9 00@10.00; do, midland, $9 00@10.00; do, slough, $7 00@8.00. Loose on wagon—timothy, $11.00@13 00; prairie, $9.00@9.50. For delivery of pressed, $1.00@1.50, according to distance.

POTATOES—The demand was active on both local and shipping account, and under moderate stocks, prices for choice descriptions remained unchanged and firm. Many of the receipts were frozen. We note sales of two cars peerless at 1.05, delivered; 185 bbls peachblows at 2.75, 70 bbls at 2.80; 350 bu from store 1.15@1 20.

SWEET POTATOES—Southern Illinois sold at 3.00@3.50 per bbl.

POULTRY—The receipts of dressed poultry were rather larger, and as chickens, turkeys, geese and ducks were in more moderate demand, prices ruled a shade lower. Sales were made of 5,700 lbs choice dressed turkeys at 12c, 1,200 lbs at 10@11c; 90 doz choice dressed chickens at 3.00@3.50, 47 doz poor at 1.50@2.00; 14 doz dressed ducks at 3.50@4 00, 10 doz, fancy at 4.50, 2 doz poor at 1.50; 15 doz dressed geese at 8.00@20.00, 3 doz at 7.00, 4 coops at 8 00@9.00.

The Jilz Patent WELL AUGER Is made of Cast Cast Steel, and will bore wells from 9 to 36 inches in diameter, and of any depth desired. In good territory it will bore wells of the ordinary depth at the rate of 150 Feet per Day. We can bore wells so fast and cheaply that no one need be longer without water at his door.

$50 A DAY On an average can be made with this Auger in good Territory. It will bore in any kind of earth, in soft sandstone, soft limestone, slate, coal, sand, gravel, and any kind of hard pan; and by the use of our Door and Valve we can make the best Wells in quicksand.
Address
J. WINSHIP, Agent,
Norwood Park, Cook Co., Ill.

We invite the doubtful to come to St. Louis and see the auger work, and if it does not work as represented, we will pay their Railroad fare both ways. Send ten cents for Illustrated Catalogue which explains everything.
ADDRESS,
W. W. JILZ,
Inventor, Patentee and Sole Manufacturer,
213 S. Fifth St., ST. LOUIS, MO.

A NEW MAP OF PALESTINE.

About FEBRUARY next my NEW MAP OF PALESTINE will be ready for delivery to subscribers.

IT IS 36x54 INCHES.

Finely Engraved, Mounted on Cloth Backs, Rollers, colored and varnished, and will be delivered to subscribers expressage free at

$5.00 A COPY, ON DELIVERY.

A large amount of information concerning the Holy Land, Geographical, Historical, Prophetical, Geological, Botanical &c. is here thrown together in a manner easily acceptable and beautiful to the eye at a low price.

Those who desire one should order early, as a limited number can only be struck off at first.

NO MONEY REQUIRED TILL THE MAP IS DELIVERED.

Orders may be sent to A. W. TUCKER, ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES Office, or to

J. F. WILCOX,
FORT ATKINSON, Wis

DO TRY IT 3 Months for 10 Cents; or with $3 Chromo, for 50 cents; or 6 Months with "Flowers of Paradise," a first-class $6 Chromo, 15 1-2x21 inches, in eighteen colors, for $1.00. THE NATIONAL AGRICULTURIST is a sixteen page paper of 64 columns, handsomely illustrated in all its departments. One of the best AGRICULTURAL and FAMILY papers published. Only $1.00 per year, or $1 25 with best Bee Book, or $1 50 with a beautiful CHROMO. THE BEE-KEEPERS' MAGAZINE, a 32 page monthly, same terms or both for $1 75. Send for Sample Copies, and LIBERAL TERMS TO AGENTS, FREE. Write now to
H. A. KING & CO., 14 Murray St., New York.

GOOD NEWS FOR THE CHILDREN.

ST. NICHOLAS HAS COME!

CHRISTMAS comes but once a year, but ST. NICHOLAS, the beautiful new Magazine for Girls and Boys, just published by SCRIBNER & Co., of New York, comes every month.

It is full of good things, Pictures, Stories, Talks with Children, Historical Sketches, Fairy Tales, Nursery Rhymes, Jingles, Puzzles etc.

There are two Serial Stories. "WHAT MIGHT HAVE BEEN EXPECTED," a story for Boys, already commenced, by FRANK R. STOCKTON, one of the best writers for children in the country. The scene is laid in Virginia. The Boy Hero has started out with a gun on his shoulder, and you may be sure there will be no end of Fun and Adventure. The other is a story for Girls, "NIMPO'S TROUBLES," by OLIVE THORNE (Mrs Harriet M. Miller), to begin in January. The Editors say:—"It is a good strong helpful story of Girl Life, and will be full of interest for both girls and boys. We are not sure but that the boys will like the girls' story the best, and the girls be most delighted with that written for the boys."

Then there is JACK IN-THE PULPIT who tells the children the most curious things they ever heard.

ST. NICHOLAS has already won the hearts of the young-folks who are eagerly expecting the next number. The Publishers have issued a very amusing picture, entitled "Little Children Crying for St. Nicholas."

It is the most beautiful Magazine ever issued, and it has a hundred delightful suggestions for the Little-Folks. Indeed you find in its pages something for all, from Grandpapa and Grandmama to the Baby.

The Publishers say they mean to make it just as good and helpful to the children as they can. They want 100,000 children made happy by ST. NICHOLAS before the Holidays. PRICE $3 00 A YEAR.—ONE PRICE TO ALL. ST. NICHOLAS is for Sale by all NEWS DEALERS and Subscriptions are received by all BOOKSELLERS, POST MASTERS and PUBLISHERS of NEWS PAPERS, and by SCRIBNER & CO., 654 Broadway, N. Y.

$20 SAVED!

To meet the urgent demand of the times the FLORENCE SEWING MACHINE CO. have determined to

REDUCE PRICES,

and will hereafter sell their $65 Machine for $45, and other styles in proportion.

THE FLORENCE

is the ONLY Sewing Machine that feeds the work backward and forward, or to right and left, as the purchaser may prefer. It has been greatly IMPROVED AND SIMPLIFIED, and is far better than any other machine in the market.

It is NOW the CHEAPEST.

Florence, Mass., Nov. 1, '73. Agents Wanted.
496-4t.

LATEST GEMS OF MUSIC.

PRICE REDUCED.

The Second Edition. Hymns of the Morning, by Dr. Barker. Fifty-cents cloth; Sixty-cents leather

First Edition of Songs of Praise, by Dr. Abbott. Ten cents. Both books sent by mail for Fifty cents.

Address, C. W. SARGENT,
Aug19-26t. Box 426, Concord, N. H.

WHY NOT club for Washers and Wringers as well as papers. Colby Bros. & Co., Reading Mich., will send circulars for any one to get up a Club Order for their superior machines. Wholesale prices to all and a Washer free to the one who gets a club for one dozen—a Wringer for two dozen, and both, worth $12.50 for a club of three dozen. Farmers' Clubs and Granges supplied at wholesale price. Send your address, and say how many circulars you will distribute. You can thus save one-third their cost by getting machines direct from the manufacturer. WHY NOT? 496-4t.

"DOMESTIC" PAPER FASHIONS.

Agents Wanted.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE.

DOMESTIC SEWING MACHINE CO., N. Y.
489-13t.

HADES
OR
The Intermediate State of Man,
BY HENRY CONSTABLE, A. M.

Author of The Duration and Nature of Future Punishment. This work consists of twenty-four chapters, 167 pages, at $1.00 per copy, and can be had by addressing A. W. TUCKER, 27 MacCormick Block, Chicago, Ill.

THE RAINBOW,
A Magazine of Christian Literature,
With special reference to the revealed future of the Church and the World.
Published Monthly, at $2.50 Per Year.
EDITED BY WM. LEASK, D. D.
Address, KELLAWAY & BROWN,
78 Newgate St.,
LONDON, E. C., ENGLAND.

SUBSCRIBE FOR
The Millenarian,
A
New Monthly Periodical.

THE MILLENARIAN advocates the Personal Coming of Messiah, the Restitution of all things spoken by the Prophets, the Resurrection of the holy dead at the commencement of the Millennium, the overthrow of all anti-christian systems, the literal fulfillment of prophecy, a life of purity, and trust as necessary to an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom of Jesus our Lord.

Terms, $1.00 per year.

Address, H. V. REED, Norwood Park, Cook Co., Illinois.
498

The Bible Banner.

THIS PAPER IS EDITED BY
ELDS. JOHN COUCH, WILLIAM SHELDON,
A. A. PHELPS.

Published monthly, at $1 a year, with a choice book, or fine lithograph engraving, given to each subscriber. Furnished to subscribers of THE TIMES three months free, or both one year for $2.75, with a book or engraving free. All orders for the Banner and TIMES should be addressed to W. L. HIMES, 23 West Lake St., Chicago, Ill. All orders for sample copies (sent free) or for the Bible Banner ALONE, should be addressed to H. A. KING, 14 Murray St., New York.

fad of [illegible]

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. XI.—NO. 17. CHICAGO, DECEMBER 2, 1873. WHOLE NO. 500

LIBRARY AURORA COLLEGE

Advent Christian Times.

Published Every Tuesday by the

Western Advent Christian Publishing Society.

27, McCormick Block, Chicago.

Poetry.

The Lord of Love, the Lord of Might.

The Lord of Might, from Sinai's brow
Gave forth his voice of thunder,
And Israel lay on earth below,
Outstretched in fear and wonder,
Beneath his feet was pitchy night,
And at his left hand and his right,
The rocks were rent asunder.

The Lord of Love on Calvary,
A meek and suffering stranger,
Upraised to heaven his languid eye,
In Nature's hour of danger,
For us he bore the weight of woe,
For us he gave his blood to flow,

And met his Father's anger.
The Lord of Love the Lord of Might,
The King of all created,
Shall back return to claim his right,
On clouds of glory seated.
With trumpet sound and angel song,
And hallelujahs loud and long,
O'er Death and Hell defeated.

The Scoffer's Inquiry.

"There shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation." (2 Pet. 3: 3, 4.)

I learn from these words that, in the times to which the apostle alludes, the subject of Christ's coming and its accompaniments is to be agitated and discussed; that there will be many who will be very unfavorably affected towards it, some of whom will deny it altogether, some revile it as a foolish dream, some agree that it is taught in the Scriptures but to be understood after a manner very different from what the literal terms import; and that there will be a great lack in the minds of people generally of susceptibility to be seriously moved by this subject, except to revile it and turn it into ridicule. A scoffer is, properly, an insolent ridiculer, a scorner, a contumelious reproacher. Hence, Henry (in loc) describes these scoffers to be persons who "laugh at the very mention of Christ's second coming, and do what in them lies to put all out of countenance who seriously believe and wait for it;—who can not deny that there is a promise, yet laugh at it." Isaiah (5:19,) Jeremiah (17:15,) and Ezekiel (12:22) had before prophesied of similar manifestations with reference to the same subject and the same times. And Christ also says, of some of his own professed servants, that, as the time draws near, they will put aside the subject, and say, 'My Lord delayeth his coming, and shall begin to smite his fellow-servants, and to eat and drink with the drunken." (Matt. 24:48-51.)

Startling also is it, in this connection, to think how inoperative and null this powerful doctrine of Christ's speedy return has become in the religion of modern times. It is remarked by a distinguished German theologian [Dr. Carl August Aub [illegible] essor in Brazil], that "the s [illegible] of Christ, viewed in conne [illegible] the kingdom established by it upon earth, occupies a much more prominent position in the view of the Sacred Scriptures than in that of the modern Church." The remark is unquestionably true. It may safely be said that there is not another doctrine in the whole Christian Creed, of equal prominence and importance, which is so coldly and indefinitely apprehended, and so jejunely held, by the great mass even of those "who profess and call themselves Christians." People do not exactly deny that there is a promise that Christ will come again; but it is accepted only with so many allowances, that it can hardly be said to be received at all as an efficacious truth. Ministers and expositors have become so accustomed to gloss, spiritualized, and accommodate to other things and passages which speak of it, and so preoccupy their minds with figurative, providential, and imaginary comings of the Saviour by means of his doctrines, gospel, and Spirit, that his real coming—which is the only one the Bible speaks of, and which was never meant to pass out of the view of the Church as near at hand—has well nigh lost its weight and place. It has become to many a mere fable. What earnest Christian does not see and lament the wide spread influences of rationalism and rationalistic philosophy, explaining away the gospel Revelations, and even the most elementary view of inspiration; of God, and of morality and right? But there are no portions of the Scripture which rationalism so much neglects, despises, or degrades as the prophetic portions; and no class of men whom it reviles with less mercy than those who are so simple as to accept the prophecies in anything like their literal terms. A few days ago I read, in a sermon preached and published by a divine whose writings are numerous and wide spread, that "the day of judgment, and the day of the Lord, and the convulsions and changes of nature," spoken of in the prophecies, "are to be interpreted with great latitude of signification, as in the highest degree figurative;" that "the day of the Lord is simply a day of calamity, or a season of suffering; the day of judgment, the time when the consequences of our actions overtake us; the end of the world, often the end of the existing state of things; and a new heaven and a new earth, a better moral condition of the human race!"—Burnap's Miscellaneous Writings, p. 265. The same author, in the same discourse, says "For my part, the world seems to me to be yet in its infancy." "To me there is nothing in the Scriptures, nor in the present state of things, to lead me to apprehend the approach of the end of the world, but everything against it." Even the late venerable Professor Stuart,—for a long time, if not still, the very leader of New England exposition,—in his review of Duffield on the Second Coming of Christ, jests and jeers over the whole subject, and laughs at those who take it up, as in the volume he reviews, as believers in "putrid fables." When Christianity was in its virgin purity, this was among the most vivifying articles of the Creed,—the incentive to repentance, the motive to faith, the encouragement to fidelity, the inspiration of hope, and the spring of constancy and zeal, which divested even martyrdom of terrors; but in these last days it has become so powerless in the consciences and hearts of men that any serious and practical concern about it is hooted at as unscholarly weakness, and the attempt to set it forth according to the words of the Holy Ghost is ridiculed in high ecclesiastical positions as identical with the advocacy of "pratistic legends" that would "dishonor the brain of even the Rabbies" in their wildest dreams. Let a man, constrained by his solemn convictions and accountabilities, lift up his voice to reassert it in its true scriptural vigor and to bid his fellows be ready for its speedy realization, and pulpits and presses point at him [illegible] more than a little crazed, and [illegible] put him down on their [illegible] of lunatic saints whose like [illegible] they say time proved to be but dreams. We look on, and wonder that some of the best and most learned men that have lived should be so flippantly despatched, and that such momentous subjects should be so jeeringly set aside. And yet we ought not to wonder. The Scriptures long ago said it would be so; and St. Peter, in stirring us up to remembrance, would have us assured, first of all, that such things the last days would bring forth. God has not, indeed, left himself without witnesses. There are those to whom the doctrine of the "coming and kingdom" of the Lord Jesus is a living power; whose hearts are kindled with the blessed "promise of his coming;" who, with eloquent tongues and ready pens, are valiantly contending for this portion of "the faith once delivered to the saints;" and who, though laughed at and reviled by men, are yet honored and prospered by God. Nor are their words without effect in many meek and pious hearts, who with them wait and hope for the coming of the Lord. But the great mass of Christendom has no sympathy with them, and takes pleasure in twitting them for their credulity and want of better learning. And what is all this but Peter's prophecy fulfilling,—the very Church joining in the ribald cry, "Where is the promise of his coming?"—REV JOSEPH A. SEISS, D. D.

Wreckers, or False Lights.

"Lukewarm" professors are like the wreckers on the Florida reefs, who kindle false lights to lure vessels to destruction. A ship is coming in after nightfall. The night is dark and stormy. The Sea runs high. The ship labors. The tempest howls through her rigging. The great waves smite her. The master paces the quarterdeck, anxious and watchful. O, if he could only see the harbor light to guide him in the safe channel! He hails the "look out" in the maintop, "Halo, aloft!" "Aye, aye, sir." "Do you see the light?" "No light." And again keen eyes peer through the darkness. The vessel rushes blindly on her course. Ah! is that the coming of a breaker? "Hallo, aloft!" do you see the light?" "N-o-o-!" The storm increases. The vessel groans and strains in every timber. The sea rages. And now the shout comes down, "On deck, there! I see the light." "Where away?" Two points off the leebow." "Steady, quarter master; keep her full!" And on she plows her way, cheered by the guiding light. Ah! what is this? She is in the midst of breakers! And now she strikes on the reef, and the masts "go by the board"—and the wreckers come tumbling in over her bulwarks, and their knives are red, and their hands filled with plunder. Their false light has cast away the ship. So a treacherous, professed Christian says to the souls of his fellow-men, "Follow me! I am going into port—I will guide you safely," and following they come upon the rocks of perdition, and he is a murderer of souls.—President Finney.

What is it to be Saved?

Reader, I dare say you have often heard ministers speak of people "being saved." You have probably a secret feeling in your heart that you would like "to be saved." But, after all, what is it to be saved? Listen to me, and I will try to tell you what the the Bible says about it. Alas! there are many who talk of "being saved," and yet know nothing of the meaning of the words.

To be saved, is not merely to profess, to call yourself a Christian. You may have all the outward parts of Christianity, and yet be lost after all. You may be baptized, go to Christ's table, have Christian knowledge, be reckoned a Christian man, and yet be a dead soul all your days, and at last be found on Christ's left hand, among the goats. No! reader, this is not salvation. Salvation is something far higher and deeper than this.

To be saved, is to be delivered in this present life from the guilt of sin, by faith in Jesus Christ, the Saviour. It is to be pardoned, justified, and freed from every charge of sin, by faith in Christ's blood and mediation. Whosoever with his heart believes on the Lord Jesus is a saved soul. He shall not perish. He shall have eternal life. This is the first part of salvation, and the root of all the rest. But this is not all.

To be saved is to be delived in this life from the power of sin, by being born again, and sanctified by Christ's spirit. It is to be freed from the hateful dominion of sin, the world, and the devil, by having a new nature put in us by the Holy Spirit. Whosoever is thus renewed in the Spirit of his mind and converted, is a saved soul. He shall not perish. He shall enter into the kingdom of God. This is the second part of salvation. But this is not all.

To be saved, is to be delivered in the day of judgment from all the awful consequences of sin. It is to be declared blameless, spotless, and complete in Christ, while others are found guilty and condemned forever. It is to hear those comforting words, "Come, ye blessed," while others are hearing those fearful words, "Depart, ye cursed." It is to be owned and confessed by Christ as one of his dear children and servants, while others are disowned and cast off forever. It is to be pronounced free from the portion of the wicked, the worm that never dies, the fire that is not quenched, the weeping, wailing, and gnashing of teeth. It is to receive the reward prepared for the righteous, the glorious body, the kingdom that is incorruptible, the crown that fadeth not away, and the joy that is forevermore. This is complete salvation.

Reader, take notice, that the grand object of having a religion is to be saved. This is the great question that you have to settle with your conscience, and to which I want you to attend. The matter is not whether you go to church or chapel, whether you go through certain forms and ceremonies, whether you observe certain days, and perform a certain number of religious duties; the matter is, whether, after all, you will be saved. Without this, all your religious doings are weariness and labor in vain.

Never, never be content with anything short of a saving religion. Surely, to have a religion which neither gives peace in life, nor hope in death, nor glory in the world to come, is childish folly.—Rev. J. C. Ryle.

Paganism in New York City.

C. C. M.

"It is stated that in Baxter street, within a stone's throw of the City Hall, New York, on the second floor of a wretchedly dirty tenement, the Chinese have a temple, where more than five hundred assemble regularly to worship a wooden image of the Chinese god Fo. In the very heart of the greatest city of Christian America, paganism has set up its idols, and the poor, misguided heathen "bow down to wood and stone."

Here is a field for evangelistic labor. Why doesn't some one out of the great number of New York ministers go and preach Christ to those deluded Chinese? Talk about sending missionaries to China; better send one to New York—you can do it for half the money. In what Chinese city can there be found five hundred Christians meeting regularly to worship God? No such city is known.

Beautiful Illustration.

If a child had been born, and spent all his life in the Mammoth Cave, how impossible would it be for him to comprehend the upper world! Parents might tell him of its life, its beauty, and its sounds of joy; they might heap up the sods into mounds, and try to show him by stalactites, how grass, flowers and trees grow out of the ground; till at length, with laborious thinking, the child would fancy he had gained a true idea of the unknown land.

And yet, though he longed to behold it, when it came that he was to go forth, it would be with regret for the familiar crystals and rock-hewn rooms, and the quiet that reigned therein. But, when he came up, some May morning, with ten thousand birds singing in the trees, and the heavens bright and blue and full of sunlight, and the wind blowing softly through the young leaves, all aglitter with dew, and the landscape stretching away green and beautiful to the horizon, with what rapture would he gaze about him and see how poor were all the fancyings and interpretations which were made within the cave of the things which grew and lived without; and how he would wonder that he could ever have regretted to leave the silence and dreary darkness of his old abode!

So, when we emerge from this cave of earth into that land where spring growths are, and where is eternal summer, how we shall wonder that we could have clung so fondly to this dark and barren life!—Sel.

HINTS TO PREACHERS.—Do not get excited so soon. Do not run away from your hearers. Engine driving-wheels whirl fast on an icy track, but when they draw anything they go slower. Do not abuse the faithful souls who come to meeting rainy days because others are to lazy to attend. Preach the best to the smallest assemblies. Jesus preached to one woman at the well, and she got all Samaria out to hear him the next time. Ventilate your meeting room. Sleeping in church is due to bad air oftener than to bad manners.

fad of Linda

LIBRARY COPY AURORA COLLEGE

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. XI.—NO. 17. CHICAGO, DECEMBER 2, 1873. WHOLE NO. 500

Advent Christian Times.
Published Every Tuesday by the
Western Advent Christian Publishing Society.
27, McCormick Block, Chicago.

Poetry.

The Lord of Love, the Lord of Might.

The Lord of Might, from Sinai's brow
  Gave forth his voice of thunder,
And Israel lay on earth below,
  Outstretched in fear and wonder,
Beneath his feet was pitchy night,
And at his left hand and his right,
  The rocks were rent asunder.

The Lord of Love on Calvary,
  A meek and suffering stranger,
Upraised to heaven his languid eye,
  In Nature's hour of danger,
For us he bore the weight of woe,
For us he gave his blood to flow,

  And met his Father's anger.
The Lord of Love the Lord of Might,
  The King of all created,
Shall back return to claim his right,
  On clouds of glory seated.
With trumpet sound and angel song,
And hallelujahs loud and long,
  O'er Death and Hell defeated.

The Scoffer's Inquiry.

"There shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation." (2 Pet. 3: 3, 4.)

I learn from these words that, in the times to which the apostle alludes, the subject of Christ's coming and its accompaniments is to be agitated and discussed; that there will be many who will be very unfavorably affected towards it, some of whom will deny it altogether, some revile it as a foolish dream, some agree that it is taught in the Scriptures but to be understood after a manner very different from what the literal terms import; and that there will be a great lack in the minds of people generally of susceptibility to be seriously moved by this subject, except to revile it and turn it into ridicule. A scoffer is, properly, an insolent ridiculer, a scorner, a contumelious reproacher. Hence, Henry (in loc) describes these scoffers to be persons who "laugh at the very mention of Christ's second coming, and do what in them lies to put all out of countenance who seriously believe and wait for it;—who can not deny that there is a promise, yet laugh at it." Isaiah (5:19,) Jeremiah (17:15,) and Ezekiel (12:22) had before prophesied of similar manifestations with reference to the same subject and the same times. And Christ also says, of some of his own professed servants, that, as the time draws near, they will put aside the subject, and say, "My Lord delayeth his coming, and shall begin to smite his fellow-servants, and to eat and drink with the drunken." (Matt. 24:48-51.)

Startling also is it, in this connection, to think how inoperative and null this powerful doctrine of Christ's speedy return has become in the religion of modern times. It is remarked by a distinguished German theologian [Dr. Carl August Aul[illegible] [illegible]ssor in Brazil], that "the s[illegible] of Christ, viewed in conne[illegible] kingdom established by it upon earth, occupies a much more prominent position in the view of the Sacred Scriptures than in that of the modern Church." The remark is unquestionably true. It may safely be said that there is not another doctrine in the whole Christian Creed, of equal prominence and importance, which is so coldly and indefinitely apprehended, and so j-junely held, by the great mass even of those "who profess and call themselves Christians." People do not exactly deny that there is a promise that Christ will come again; but it is accepted only with so many allowances, that it can hardly be said to be received at all as an efficacious truth. Ministers and expositors have become so accustomed to gloss, spiritualized, and accommodate to other things and passages which speak of it, and so preoccupy their minds with figurative, providential, and imaginary comings of the Saviour by means of his doctrines, gospel, and Spirit, that his real coming—which is the only one the Bible speaks of, and which was never meant to pass out of the view of the Church as near at hand—has well nigh lost its weight and place. It has become to many a mere fable. What earnest Christian does not see and lament the wide spread influences of rationalism and rationalistic philosophy, explaining away the gospel Revelations, and even the most elementary view of inspiration; of God, and of morality and right? But there are no portions of the Scripture which rationalism so much neglects, despises, or degrades as the prophetic portions; and no class of men whom it reviles with less mercy than those who are so simple as to accept the prophecies in anything like their literal terms. A few days ago I read, in a sermon preached and published by a divine whose writings are numerous and wide spread, that "the day of judgment, and the day of the Lord, and the convulsions and changes of nature," spoken of in the prophecies, "are to be interpreted with great latitude of signification, as in the highest degree figurative;" that "the day of the Lord is simply a day of calamity, or a season of suffering; the day of judgment, the time when the consequences of our actions overtake us; the end of the world, often the end of the existing state of things; and a new heaven and a new earth, a better moral condition of the human race!"—Burnap's Miscellaneous Writings, p. 265. The same author, in the same discourse, says "For my part, the world seems to me to be yet in its infancy." "To me there is nothing in the Scriptures, nor in the present state of things, to lead me to apprehend the approach of the end of the world, but everything against it." Even the late venerable Professor Stuart,—for a long time, if not still, the very leader of New England exposition,—in his review of Duffield on the Second Coming of Christ, jests and jeers over the whole subject, and laughs at those who take it up, as in the volume he reviews, as believers in "putrid fables." When Christianity was in its virgin purity, this was among the most vivifying articles of the Creed,—the incentive to repentance, the motive to faith, the encouragement to fidelity, the inspiration of hope, and the spring of constancy and zeal, which divested even martyrdom of terrors; but in these last days it has become so powerless in the consciences and hearts of men that any serious and practical concern about it is hooted at as unscholarly weakness, and the attempt to set it forth according to the words of the Holy Ghost is ridiculed in high ecclesiastical positions as identical with the advocacy of "pratistic legends" that would "dishonor the brain of even the Rabbies" in their wildest dreams. Let a man, constrained by his solemn convictions and accountabilities, lift up his voice to reassert it in its true scriptural vigor and to bid his fellows be ready for its speedy realization, and pulpits and presses point at him[illegible] more than a little crazed, and [illegible]y put him down on their r[illegible]t of lunatic saints whose like [illegible] they say time proved to be but dreams. We look on, and wonder that some of the best and most learned men that have lived should be so flippantly despatched, and that such momentous subjects should be so jeeringly set aside. And yet we ought not to wonder. The Scriptures long ago said it would be so; and St. Peter, in stirring us up to remembrance, would have us assured, first of all, that such things the last days would bring forth. God has not, indeed, left himself without witnesses. There are those to whom the doctrine of the "coming and kingdom" of the Lord Jesus is a living power; whose hearts are kindled with the blessed "promise of his coming;" who, with eloquent tongues and ready pens, are valiantly contending for this portion of "the faith once delivered to the saints;" and who, though laughed at and reviled by men, are yet honored and prospered by God. Nor are their words without effect in many meek and pious hearts, who with them wait and hope for the coming of the Lord. But the great mass of Christendom has no sympathy with them, and takes pleasure in twitting them for their credulity and want of better learning. And what is all this but Peter's prophecy fulfilling,—the very Church joining in the ribald cry, "Where is the promise of his coming?"—REV JOSEPH A. SEISS, D. D.

Wreckers, or False Lights.

"Lukewarm" professors are like the wreckers on the Florida reefs, who kindle false lights to lure vessels to destruction. A ship is coming in after nightfall, The night is dark and stormy. The Sea runs high. The ship labors. The tempest howls through her rigging. The great waves smite her. The master paces the quarterdeck, anxious and watchful. O, if he could only see the harbor-light to guide him in the safe channel! He hails the "look out" in the maintop, "Halo, aloft!" "Aye, aye, sir." "Do you see the light?" "No light." And again keen eyes peer through the darkness. The vessel rushes blindly on her course. Ah! is that the coming of a breaker? "Hallo, aloft!" do you see the light?" "N-o-o-o!" The storm increases. The vessel groans and strains in every timber. The sea rages. And now the shout comes down, "On deck, there! I see the light." "Where away?" Two points off the leebow." "Steady, quarter master; keep her full!" And on she plows her way, cheered by the guiding light. Ah! what is this? She is in the midst of breakers! And now she strikes on the reef, and the masts "go by the board"—and the wreckers come tumbling in over her bulwarks, and their knives are red, and their hands filled with plunder. Their false light has cast away the ship. So a treacherous, professed Christian says to the souls of his fellow-men, "Follow me! I am going into port—I will guide you safely," and following they come upon the rocks of perdition, and he is a murderer of souls.—President Finney.

What is it to be Saved?

Reader, I dare say you have often heard ministers speak of people "being saved." You have probably a secret feeling in your heart that you would like "to be saved." But, after all, what is it to be saved? Listen to me, and I will try to tell you what the the Bible says about it. Alas! there are many who talk of "being saved," and yet know nothing of the meaning of the words.

To be saved, is not merely to profess, to call yourself a Christian. You may have all the outward parts of Christianity, and yet be lost after all. You may be baptized, go to Christ's table, have Christian knowledge, be reckoned a Christian man, and yet be a dead soul all your days, and at last be found on Christ's left hand, among the goats. No! reader, this is not salvation. Salvation is something far higher and deeper than this.

To be saved, is to be delivered in this present life from the guilt of sin, by faith in Jesus Christ, the Saviour. It is to be pardoned, justified, and freed from every charge of sin, by faith in Christ's blood and mediation. Whosoever with his heart believes on the Lord Jesus is a saved soul. He shall not perish. He shall have eternal life. This is the first part of salvation, and the root of all the rest. But this is not all.

To be saved is to be delived in this life from the power of sin, by being born again, and sanctified by Christ's spirit. It is to be freed from the hateful dominion of sin, the world, and the devil, by having a new nature put in us by the Holy Spirit. Whosoever is thus renewed in the Spirit of his mind and converted, is a saved soul. He shall not perish. He shall enter into the kingdom of God. This is the second part of salvation. But this is not all.

To be saved, is to be delivered in the day of judgment from all the awful consequences of sin. It is to be declared blameless, spotless, and complete in Christ, while others are found guilty and condemned forever. It is to hear those comforting words, "Come, ye blessed," while others are hearing those fearful words, "Depart, ye cursed." It is to be owned and confessed by Christ as one of his dear children and servants, while others are disowned and cast off forever. It is to be pronounced free from the portion of the wicked, the worm that never dies, the fire that is not quenched, the weeping, wailing, and gnashing of teeth. It is to receive the reward prepared for the righteous, the glorious body, the kingdom that is incorruptible, the crown that fadeth not away, and the joy that is forevermore. This is complete salvation.

Reader, take notice, that the grand object of having a religion is to be saved. This is the great question that you have to settle with your conscience, and to which I want you to attend. The matter is not whether you go to church or chapel, whether you go through certain forms and ceremonies, whether you observe certain days, and perform a certain number of religious duties; the matter is, whether, after all, you will be saved. Without this, all your religious doings are weariness and labor in vain.

Never, never be content with anything short of a saving religion. Surely, to have a religion which neither gives peace in life, nor hope in death, nor glory in the world to come, is childish folly.—Rev. J. C. Ryle.

Paganism in New York City.

C. C. M.

"It is stated that in Baxter street, within a stone's throw of the City Hall, New York, on the second floor of a wretchedly dirty tenement, the Chinese have a temple, where more than five hundred assemble regularly to worship a wooden image of the Chinese god Fo. In the very heart of the greatest city of Christian America, paganism has set up its idols, and the poor, misguided heathen "bow down to wood and stone."

Here is a field for evangelistic labor. Why doesn't some one out of the great number of New York ministers go and preach Christ to those deluded Chinese? Talk about sending missionaries to China; better send one to New York—you can do it for half the money. In what Chinese city can there be found five hundred Christians meeting regularly to worship God? No such city [illegible]known.

Beautiful Illustration.

If a child had been born, and spent all his life in the Mammoth Cave, how impossible would it be for him to comprehend the upper world! Parents might tell him of its life, its beauty, and its sounds of joy; they might heap up the sods into mounds, and try to show him by stalactites, how grass, flowers and trees grow out of the ground; till at length, with laborious thinking, the child would fancy he had gained a true idea of the unknown land.

And yet, though he longed to behold it, when it came that he was to go forth, it would be with regret for the familiar crystals and rock-hewn rooms, and the quiet that reigned therein. But, when he came up, some May morning, with ten thousand birds singing in the trees, and the heavens bright and blue and full of sunlight, and the wind blowing softly through the young leaves, all aglitter with dew, and the landscape stretching away green and beautiful to the horizon, with what rapture would he gaze about him and see how poor were all the fancyings and interpretations which were made within the cave of the things which grew and lived without; and how he would wonder that he could ever have regretted to leave the silence and dreary darkness of his old abode!

So, when we emerge from this cave of earth into that land where spring growths are, and where is eternal summer, how we shall wonder that we could have clung so fondly to this dark and barren life!—Sel.

HINTS TO PREACHERS—Do not get excited so soon. Do not run away from your hearers. Engine driving-wheels whirl fast on an icy track, but when they draw anything they go slower. Do not abuse the faithful souls who come to meeting rainy days because others are to lazy to attend. Preach the best to the smallest assemblies. Jesus preached to one woman at the well, and she got all Samaria out to hear him the next time. Ventilate your meeting room. Sleeping in church is due to bad air oftener than to bad manners.

The Bottomless Pit.

A. ARMOUR.

Spurgeon's grandfather (after the boy had read Rev. 20: every morning for a fortnight, and asked an explanation of it) explained "the bottomless pit" to him as follows:

"There is a deep pit, and the soul is falling down,—oh, how fast it is falling! There! The last ray of light at the top has disappeared, and it falls on—on—on, and so it goes falling on—on—on—for a thousand years! 'Is it not getting near the bottom yet? Won't it stop?' No, no; the cry is, on—on—on. 'I have been falling a million years; is it not near the bottom yet?' No, you are no nearer the bottom yet: it is the 'bottomless pit'; it is on—on—on, and so the soul goes on falling, perpetually, into a deeper depth still, falling for ever into the 'bottomless pit'—on—on—on, into the pit that has no bottom! Woe without termination, without hope of its coming to a conclusion." (S.'s sermons; 6th series, p. 214.)

So much for orthodoxy. I lately heard a sermon, preached by one minister and endorsed by another, wherein one of two proofs of eternal torment was "the bottomless pit." Let us examine it a little.

The phrase occurs only in the book of Revelation,—and, strange to say, we find creatures getting out of it! But we will try to take it up in an orderly manner.

The original Greek word is abyssos, literally abyss; it means, literally, without depth; that is, so deep that we cannot find a bottom. In this sense, evidently, the translators used the word "bottomless," just as we now use "fathomless." The original word abyssos occurs frequently in the Greek version of the Old Testament, and is used, in a literal sense, as synonymous with "the sea," or "the deep" thus, "He rebuked the Red Sea also and it was dried up; so he led them through the depths as through the wilderness." (Ps. 106:9; Is. 63:13.) "The face of the deep is frozen." (Job 38:30.) "He maketh the deep to boil like a pot." (Job 41:31.) In Jonah 2:5, it may be understood both literally—of the sea, and figuratively, as synonymous with sheol or hades: v. 2, "Out of the belly of hell [sheol] cried I;" v. 5, "The depth [abyssos] closed me round about." Figuratively, it would thus be equivalent to sheol or HADES, the place of the dead, the universal grave. [The New Testament writers read, and quoted the Greek version of the Old Testament.

The first passage in the New Testament where the original word occurs, is Luke 8:31. The demons besought Jesus "that he would not command them to go out into the deep." As the swine, impelled by the demons, ran into the sea, I would understand "the deep" [abyss] figuratively, of the place of the dead, or hades. Demons were afraid Jesus would destroy them—"Art thou come to destroy us"? (Mk. 1:24; Lk. 4:34.)

Passing over one passage, for the present, we come to Rev. 9:1-11. Here the pit of the abyss is opened, smoke issues out, and out of the smoke locusts; and their king is the angel of the abyss, his name is Abaddon, the estroyer; or Apollyon, the destroying e. The angel's name is very consis[illegible]nt with the abyss, being a metaphor the place of the dead.

Next is Rev. 11:7. "The beast that scendeth out of the abyss shall kill them,"—the witnesses. (Rev. 17:8.) "The beast that thou sawest was, and is not; and shall ascend out of the abyss and go into perdition." Here being in the abyss, or bottomless pit, is the same as non-existence: the beast "is not"; when it comes into existence again it ascends out of the bottomless pit.

Rev. 20:1, 3. "An angel came down from heaven, having the key of the abyss." Jesus has "the keys of hell [hades] and of death." (ch. 1:18.) In ch. 9:1, we read of an apostate bishop opening the abyss—he used a false key. He taught that dead saints were alive; and, as Gibbon says, "the throne of the Almighty was darkened by a crowd of martyrs, and saints, and angels; the objects of popular veneration." Now a heavenly angel brings the true key, the abyss is opened in reality, and Satan is cast in.

We have now noticed all the New Testament passages where the word which is translated "the bottomless pit" occurs, except one, which we have purposely omitted. We have nowhere found a hint that it is a place of torment for human sinners. It exists prior to the judgment day. Its angel is "the Destroyer,"—the Vulgate Latin has it "Exterminans"—Exterminator. The beast, when in it, "is not." "The pit" evidently is the grave, sheol, hades; spoken of in oriental figure as a vast cavern under the earth; see Ezek. 32:18, to the end—(on v. 21, Dr. Clarke notes, "hell: sheol, the catacombs, the place of burial.") See also Is. 14:9-20, on which Bishop Lowth comments thus: "'hell,' hades. The regions of the dead are here laid open.... This is one of the boldest figures ever attempted in poetry. We must form to ourselves an image of the Eastern sepulchral vault, a vast gloomy cavern, all round the sides of which there are cells to receive the dead bodies; here the deceased monarchs lie in a distinguished sort of state, each on his couch, with his arms beside him, and his sword at his head."

Sheol, hades, or the pit, then, is not the place of the living, but of the dead; and, in a figure, all the dead are there. (Job 3:13-19; John 5:28, 29.)

Though this be very contrary to so-called orthodoxy, and contradicts Spurgeon, and his grandfather, the passage which we have not yet noticed establishes it beyond all doubt. I will give it in a note from p. 117, of "The Bible Doctrine of the Soul," by Prof. Ives: "The meaning of the Greek abyssos translated 'bottomless pit' in Rev. 20:3, the apostle explains for us in Rom. 10:7; 'say not, who shall descend into the abyssos,' that is, to bring back Christ from the dead,—from the abyss, the state in which are the dead."

Then, Christ, when dead, was in "the bottomless pit"; certainly it is not the theological "place of woe," but hades (Acts 2:31), "in the heart of the earth," (Mat. 12:40) prefigured by Jonah in the whale's belly; which state Jonah called sheol, in the Hebrew; translated hades, by the seventy; and 'the abyss' is their word for what our translators have rendered "the depth." Jonah was, as it were, in the grave, and this is all that is meant by sheol or hades, or the abyss "in the heart of the earth"; it was a common figure for the state of the dead, or "the congregation of the dead." (Prov. 12:26.)

Tamarack, Ill.

Winter Revivals.

C. C. MARSTON.

The "revival season" of the year has come, and I hear of preparations on all sides for special visitations of the Holy Spirit in the reclaiming of backsliders, and conversion of sinners and general upbuilding of the work of the Lord among men. This fact has suggested to my mind an inquiry which I will briefly note.

SHOULD WE WAIT TILL WINTER FOR GOD TO REVIVE HIS WORK? The conduct of various bodies of Christian people would seem to indicate that such is the plan. The external circumstance such as "long nights," slack time in business circles," etc., are taken into the account to the exclusion of all other considerations. And two thirds, and in some cases three fourths of the year is spent in comparative indolence (and superlative inefficiency) by the church, waiting very patiently for the more auspicious season of the fall and winter for the Lord to revive his work. In many cases the pulpit and stated services of God's house are entirely dispensed with during the summer months on various accounts, such as the minister needs a vacation; the weather is hot and the people will only sleep if they do have meeting, etc. And so we find from these reasons, and others that might be stated a spiritual relaxation and prostration in these churches during the greater part of the year. Is this as it should be? I think not. A church with regular and constant preaching, and all other things in good working order, ought to be in a revival mood and in readiness to labor in unison with the spirit of God from one year's end to another. Sinners are just as precious and just as much in danger of being lost in the summer as in the winter. Zion's gates then should stand wide open in the hot season as well as in the cold. The church that occupies this position will not witness the same influx of fruit all the time. There will be ebbs and flows in the tide of gospel fruit. This must be expected, and it should be no argument against the church possessing constantly these revival proclivities and occupying the position where it will be enabled when the tide does flow, to embrace it, and hold it, and on the work carry.

God's arm is not shortened nor his strength blasted by the heat of summer and the short nights of July. He is just as able, and, blessed be his name, just as willing, to save sinners from their sins and shower down his grace upon the church of his Son's purchase in one season of the year as in another. Why then wait till winter to have the Lord's work revived? Certainly it is not necessary. I have witnessed some of the sweetest and most powerful revivals of religion right in the hottest days of the summer season. At other times I have seen the same work gloriously carried on in the winter season. It is not the season of the year that brings the revival of the work of the Lord. And although the outward circumstances under proper guidance may help in promoting the work, still it requires something besides long evenings to effect a genuine revival of "pure and undefiled religion." If it happens to be winter and there are precious souls about us that ought to be saved, let us labor with all our might and use all the legitimate means in our power for their salvation. If long nights, when people have less to do and can better attend meeting, &c., be a means, very good, let us use it as an auxiliary. But when the summer comes and there are still persons about us that ought to be saved, let us not slacken our hands.

If this idea of "winter revivals" could be supplanted with the fact that God's work may be revived at any season of the year, and that the church ought to be in a constant frame of readiness for the work, the Christianity of to-day would be greatly improved.

Spiritual Birth.

A. J. MARSH.

"For in Christ Jesus neither circumcision availeth anything, nor uncircumcision, but a new creature." (Gal. 6:15.)

It is true beyond a doubt, that the Bible plainly teaches, our bodies, in the resurrection shall be raised and quickened by the Lord's spirit, and "fashioned like unto his glorious body," (Phil. 3:21,) if so be "the spirit of Him that raised Jesus from the dead dwell in" us, (Rom. 8:11,) showing, that so far as the body is concerned, we then become "new creatures." But what about the heart and mind, or the spiritual part? Does the resurrection make that new? or has it got to become so before then? The scriptures doubtless affirm the latter.

The above quotation, by an easy natural construction, would indicate that the time when circumcision availed nothing in Christ, should not be placed at the resurrection, for we cannot suppose anything of that kind will be thought of then; therefore it certainly must be this side; and if so, the condition in Christ that avails instead of circumcision or uncircumcision, viz., "a new creature," must also be in the same place.

It is true, the process through which we come into this condition, is a work of faith, and we also continue in the condition, by faith, but the condition, is not faith; neither is the process and the subject going through it, one and the same; no more than a road to a city, is the traveler on the road, or the city the road enters.

Paul says, "by grace are ye saved through faith." (Gal. 2:8.) Now is faith the salvation, or only the mental condition through which it comes? And is it a fact that no one has got the the blessing of salvation yet? for some one has said, "That what we are by faith, we are not really, and what we are really, that we are not by faith."

I presume there are not many professed followers of Christ, that would be willing to say, they had nothing in him, nor he in them, but abstract faith, pointing to salvation or new creaturehood in the future, instead of possessing them now; especially when they recollect the time, or times and again, when they have "tasted the powers of the world to come;" and also when they consider the fact, that the things they once loved they now hate, and the things they once hated they now love.

Do we not litterally, so far as spiritual mindedness, and a change of heart is concerned, in this present world, "crucify the flesh with the affections and lusts," (Gal. 5:24,) and "Put off concerning the former conversation the old man, which is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts; and become renewed in the spirit of our mind; and put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness, (Eph. 4:22, 23, 24,) and thus become "new creatures?" Or is this something to be done in the resurrection, instead of this life?

I am afraid if any one waits until the resurrection to become a new creature, believing that is the time instead of the present, they will then with shame facedness, exclaim, Oh, fool that I was to weave such a refuge of lies around me.

St. Paul in Eph. 2:4, 5, says; "But God who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us, even when we are dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ." Query: Are we yet dead in trespasses and sins? Or are we at present really in possession of a new life therefrom? If the latter, it cannot be the former; and the rule, "That what we are by faith, we are not really," fails to work. Furthermore, is this quickening identical with the quickening he speaks of in Rom. 8:11, that is by so many arbitrarily claimed to be the emphatic meaning of the Saviour's teaching to Nicodemus in the third chapter of John, concerning being born again? I think not; because in conjunction with this quickening, he brings us into a certain experience, viz. "And hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus:" Haven't we been raised up out of the miry clay? And do we not sit with Christ in heavenly places in this life? And isn't the quickening done before we sit in them?

Again, Paul in Rom. 6:4, talks of a newness of life to be walked in; and if we walk in newness of life, there must be a birth into it, or else how can we get in it to walk? And also, where must we do the walking but this side the resurrection of the just?

I hold the doctrine of a change of heart and holiness of life, to be experienced in this probationary state, as essential to a possibility of the quickening of the body to immortality in the resurrection, i. e., of those who have come into a state of accountability.

Jeremiah, 17:9, says "The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked: who can know it?" And Christ says in Matt. 15:19, that out of it, "proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, blasphemies." And Paul says in 1 Cor. 6:9, that those guilty of such things "shall not inherit the kingdom of God;" and in Heb. 12:14 "without holiness no man can see the Lord;" and again, Jesus in his sermon on the mount says, "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." And the Psalmist says, (in chap. 51:10,) "Create in me a clean heart O, God; and renew a right spirit within me."

Dear Reader, have you met with a change of heart yet, so that your present one is pure and clean, ready to meet the spotless Lamb of God when he comes? If not, O then for life, flee quickly to the fountain, and obtain salvation.

St. Augustine.

BY C. C. M.

Words that fell from the lips of eminent Christians who lived in the hoary past come with freshness and untold interest to the hearts of those living to-day. While we do no homage to the departed great and good of Christian history, yet we love to sit "at their feet," and hear their discourse, and often "our hearts burn within us" while they talk. Here is a bit from Augustine:

"My conscience is all over satisfaction; the anguish of my past sufferings is quite swallowed up; and not so much as a troublesome remembrance of them is left behind. By that most holy, that most precious blood which he was content to shed upon the cross for our redemption, he hath hidden my sins in his wounds and washed my stains in his most precious blood. I armed an angry justice against myself; and it is discharged upon his head; mine is the crime and his the torture.

"Let the Lord be the grand subject of our study; let him preside over all our inclinations—be the ultimate aim of all our desires, dwell always in our thoughts, and, reign supreme as the governing principle of all our actions. In a word, let us contemplate, and choose, and remember, and reverence him above all, and make it our business to live to him alone.

"Let me drink of thy heavenly sweetness, and so be ravished with the taste as ever after to disrelish the sensual delights of the world, to despise its pleasures, and cheerfully to encounter the afflictions of the present life; and so to fix my heart upon the true noble joys as always to disdain the empty and transitory shadows which flesh and blood is so foolishly fond of, and so fearful of parting with.

Treasure up from the Divine now that which you will have occasion to use in the time of need."

Getting Ready.

S. B. MABEY.

How many people are going to get ready for salvation. Yes, and of the church who profess religion, many are in a state of uncertainty as regards their acceptance with God; doubts, and fears, intervene to mar their peace and joy. Yet could they but know that "Perfect love casteth out fear," and that "he that feareth is not made perfect in love," and could realize and apply it to their own individual condition, and be persuaded to flee to the source of life, they might by his grace realize a fulfillment of the text, "Perfect love casteth out fear." This change is necessary for salvation. Self justification will avail nothing, for "it is God that justifieth." Yes, more than this; "Jesus is "made unto us wisdom, sanctification, and redemption."

Men are saved by grace through faith. Vain unbelief dares to doubt the power of God to save the sinner, and pardon the guilty. But the record standeth sure, and the promises are yea and amen in Christ. "He shall be called Jesus, for he shall save his people from their sins." Says John: "We know that he was manifested to take away our sins, and in him is no sin."

Every one believing in Christianity, believe that they must be pardoned of sin to be saved. But what is this doubting but a sin? And Scripture declares "he that doubteth is condemned." And "if our hearts condemn us, God is greater and will condemn us also."

If resolutions would save any body, what a mass would be saved. How many are always resolving, always going to get ready for the coming of Jesus, but never are ready.

What do people amount to who have this principle and carry it out in business of the world. Suppose a man wants to take the cars to go to a distant place on business, but as he arrives at the depot he finds he is five minutes too late, and he has to stay at home. His friends say to him, You did not go away this morning; you were too late? Yes, I know I was too late, but I was so long in getting ready; this would probably be the confession, if one was made, nine times out of ten.

What do people think of those they visit who are never ready, nor are prepared to receive them, though they may have had due notice before hand? They say they are very slack, to say the least.

What does God think of those who are always going to give to his cause, always going to consecrate themselves, some time, and get ready for salvation? He calls them a set of robbers, from the fact they rob him of time and all the blessings of life just as long as they procrastinate the [illegible] of grace and salvation, and say by their neglect, "Go thy way for this time, when I have a more convenient season I will call for thee."

But no second train awaits those who fail to receive eternal life at the hand of the Great Life Giver now in this day of probation. "He that hath not the son of God hath not life."

If people are not ready when Jesus comes or death overtakes them, they never can be among the class of the Redeemed, who say: "Lo, we have waited for thee, we will be glad and rejoice in thy salvation." Getting ready for salvation is proper in some sense; but never in the line of procrastination.

Far better be ready and waiting, than to be even five minutes late.

Jesus says: (Luke 12-36) "And ye yourselves, like unto men that wait for their Lord, that when he cometh and knocketh they may open unto him immediately." Again Paul says, (1 Thess. 1: 9 10); "And ye turned to God from idols, to serve the living and true God, and to wait for his Son from heaven whom he raised from the dead, even Jesus who delivered us from the wrath to come."

Two points of importance present themselves in the text: first, that of waiting, in which a servant of God is prepared for eternal life. The second is the testimony of Paul, to the fact that they were delivered from the wrath of the Law, by being made free from sin. Being made new creatures in Christ in this present time. And there is no half way work, about the plan of salvation through Christ.

Men are saved or they are not. They are delivered from the darkness of this world, brought out unto the marvelous light of the gospel, or they are still in bondage to sin and in rebellion against the Lord.

Resolves, and always getting ready does not satisfy the demands of the Law. Says Jesus: "He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation."

What is required is belief coupled with immediate action—a coming to Jesus by faith and consecration, and receive salvation from sin, and hope of eternal life; and coupled with this fact is a knowledge which men receive of their acceptance with God. "His spirit beareth witness with our spirit,"—"he that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself." Again says the apostle John: "And hereby, we know that he abideth in us, by the spirit which he hath given us."

"Enoch had this testimony that he pleased God," and was translated that he should not see death.

If people of this age expect translation when Jesus comes, let them have the same testimony THAT THEIR WAYS PLEASE GOD. If ready and prepared by grace, they may expect the promised reward, a home in the everlasting kingdom. Simply assenting to these truths, or believing them to be truths, is not sufficient. There is needed holy living on the part of its advocates. And may there be a waking up to the solemn fact that without this principle of life and obedience formed within the heart, we can not hope to be saved. Call the subject by what name you please the truth is, that men must be converted to God; and be made free from sin, in this life or they need not expect life in the world to come. And besides this, after people are free from sin, and have started in a christian life, they must abide in Christ, "and in him is no sin." Jesus says: "If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered:" "Abide in me, and I in you. As the branch can not bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine, no more can ye except ye, abide in me."

Here are the commands, dear reader; do not think they are for some one else, but apply them to your own case; ask yourself the question, Do I abide in Christ? Does he abide in me? Is Christ dwelling in me by his spirit, his love? Don't stand shivering on the brink of the sea of God's love any longer. But plunge in, sink or swim, live or die. Live for God and try the realities of the experience of the "love of God shed abroad in the heart by the Holy Spirit;" then you may know you have hope in Christ, and are ready for his coming.

Church Festivals, etc.

C. C. M.

Among the curious items of history on this subject, the following is worthy of mention:

"The young ladies and gentlemen connected with Grace (Episcopal) Church were entertained last night at the residence of D. E. Naylor, on Benton street. Theatricals and dancing were the main features."

"Theatricals and dancing," the "main features" of an entertainment by the young people of a Christian Church for the laudable purpose of "raising money for the Lord!" Truly these are "perilous times."

Unconscious Influence.

There are many whose only object in existence seems to be to do no harm, who hide their talent in a napkin lest it should come to evil, and to whose charge no man can lay anything. Objects of the world's indulgence on account of their inoffensiveness, it may nevertheless be true that they are plague-spots of humanity, centers of moral death, breathing deadly infection upon all who come within their sphere. All the time meaning well, their character, their example, may be the cause of fatal injury to many. A look, a word, a deed, insensibly to themselves, may "turn the scale of some one's immortality." Chemists tell us of substances whose inertia is disturbed by the slightest motion, so that they rush into permanent combinations. The touch of a feather will cause the iodide of nitrogen to explode, and the vibration of any kind of sound will decompose it. The scratch of a pin will so alter the arrangement of the molecules of iodide of mercury that their action on light is altered, and the color of the whole mass is changed at once from yellow to a bright red. Many other substances could be named whose equilibrium is so unstable, whose affinity is so weak, that the most insignificant and apparently inadequate causes will immediately change their properties, so that they become henceforth quite different from what they were before. It is because the equilibrium of the substance on which he operates is so unsteady that the photographer produces his permanent picture by sunlight; and the greater the instability or sensitiveness of the collodion, the shorter the time required to make the impression, and the deeper and more lasting it will be. On the high Alps, early in the year, the traveler is told in certain places to proceed as silently as possible. On the steep slopes overhead, the snow hangs so evenly balanced that the sound of the voice, the crack of the whip, the report of a gun, or the detachment of a snowball, may destroy the equilibrium, and bring down an avalanche that will overwhelm everything within reach in ruin. Applying these illustrations of the physical world to the condition of society around us: Are there not many whose moral character is so unstable, whose principles are so unfixed, who are so evenly balanced between good and evil, that a word, a look, may incline them to the one side or the other, and produce effects that will alter the color and the nature of their whole future existence? Are there not souls around us hanging so nicely poised on the giddy slope of temptation, watching us, and ready on the least encouragement to evil from us, to come down in terrible avalanches of moral ruin, crushing themselves and others in their fall? Are there earnest ones whose holier purposes may have been quenched forever by our worldly levity and impropriety of conduct, at the critical time when the Spirit was striving with them, and leading them from darkness to light and from Satan to God? And for this unconscious evil that we produce, as well as for the active evil that we speak and do, we shall be held responsible by Him who has said, "Woe unto the world because of offenses! For it must needs be that offenses come; but woe to that man by whom the offense cometh!" So common are such offenses that our Lord treats their occurrence as the order of nature, the rule of society, a matter of necessity. The offenses are so to come that we must count upon them. They are appointed to be the fire by which our faith is to be tried, the test by which our truth and love are to be valued; and often by God's grace and blessing, the result is unexpectedly good—a recoil from sin, a revulsion to holiness. But, notwithstanding this, there is no excuse for the man by whom the offense cometh. Woe to that man who makes difficult the path of duty to a brother by his own misconduct; who tempts him aside, and puts a stumbling-block in his way by his inconsistency! Whatever the consequences may be, it were better for that man if a millstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depths of the sea. I know nothing more painful to the Christian who has repented and become a new creature in Christ—nothing that saddens more even the enjoyment of God's forgiveness—than the thought of the evil effects upon others of his example in his unconverted state; friends misled by his friendship—trusting souls ruined by his love, following a steady course of sin in which he helped them to set out, and perpetuating that sin in widening circles in this world, while he is utterly powerless to check it or to escape from its responsibility. Surely the thought that each man is in this sense his brother's keeper—than God has reposed in each of us this terrible trust—that we are responsible not only for what we choose and mean to do, but also for what the character we have formed does in spite of us and unknown to us—should induce us to be more careful in our walk and conversation. "If thou knowest," says Richter, in his "Doctrine of Education," "that every black thought of thine, or every glorious independent one, separated itself from thy soul, and took root outside of thee, and for ages on ages pushed and bore its poisonous or healing roots and fruits—oh, how piously wouldst thou choose and think!"

Symptoms of Liver Complaint.

A sallow or yellow color of skin, or yellowish brown spots on face and other parts of the body; dullness and drowsiness with frequent headache; dizziness, bitter or bad taste in mouth, dryness of throat and internal heat; palpitation; in many cases a dry teasing cough, with sore throat; unsteady appetite, raising of food, choking sensation in throat; distress, heaviness, bloated or full feeling about stomach and sides, pain in sides, back or breast, and about shoulders; colic, pain and soreness through bowels, with heat; constipation alternating with diarrhœa; piles, flatulence, nervousness, coldness of extremeties; rush of blood to head, with symtoms of apoplexy, numbness of limbs, especially at night; cold chills alternating with hot flushes, kidney and urinary difficulties; dullness, low spirits, unsociability and gloomy forebodings. Only a few of above symptoms likely to be present at one time. All who use Dr. Pierce's Alt. Ext., or Golden Medical Discovery for Liver Complaint and its complications are loud in its praise.

A CURE OF LIVER DISEASE.

RUSK, TEXAS, May 10, 1873.

DR. R. V. PIERCE:

Dear Sir—My wife last year at this time was confined to her bed with chronic liver disease. I had one of the best doctors to see her, and he gave her up to die, when I came upon some of your medicine. I bought one bottle, and commenced giving it. She then weighed 82 pounds; now she weighs 140 pounds and is robust and hearty. She has taken eight bottles in all, so you see I am an advocate for your medicines. WM. MEAZEL.

The Christian Life.

Lifting the Soul to God.

"Unto Thee, O Lord, do I lift up my soul."—Ps. 15:1.

Fountain of light and living breath,
Whose mercies never fail nor fade;
Fill me with life that hath no death,
Fill me with life that hath no shade;
Appoint the remnant of my days
To see Thy power and sing Thy praise.

Lord God of gods, before whose throne
Stand storms of fire! Oh, what shall we Return to Heaven, that is our own,
When all the world belongs to Thee?
We have no offering to impart,
But praises of a wounded heart.

O thou, that sitt'st in heaven, and seest
My deeds without, my thoughts within,
Be thou my Prince, be Thou my Priest—
Command my soul and cure my sin;
How bitter my afflictions be
I care not, so I rise to Thee.

What I possess, or what I crave,
Brings no content, great God, to me;
If what I would, or what I have,
Be not possessed and blest with Thee.
What I enjoy, oh! make it mine,
In making me, that have it, Thine.

When winter fortunes cloud the brows
Of summer friends, where eyes grow strange,
When blighted faith forgets its vows,
When earth and all things in its change,
O Lord, Thy mercies fail me never:
Where once Thou lov'st Thou lov'st forever!

Quarles

Found Wanting.

In the Bank of England there is a weighing room. Into this room all the coin is brought to be tested by weight before it is approved and put into circulation. Here are balances or scales so perfectly adjusted that the deficiency of a hundreth part of a grain is accurately detected. On these scales, one by one, the sovereigns are laid, and when they are of full weight, by the action of the scales, they are cast into the receptacle of approved coin, from which they are taken and numbered and treasured up for current use. But if a coin proves defective in weight, even to the one hundreth part of a grain, it is cast, by the seemingly intelligent scales, into the waste basket, and is thence borne away as uncurrent coin, to go through the process of re-coining, before it can take its place as a part of the currency of the kingdom.

The gold of the rejected pieces is as pure as that of the approved coin; but they are weighed in the balances and found wanting. They did not answer to the standard weight, and were cast away as worthless for the purpose of exchange. They lacked in one thing only; but it was the one thing needful They might lack but little—so little that nothing but the exceedingly sensitive scales of the weighing room could detect the deficiency; still they are rejected as certainly and as promptly as though one-half their weight was wanting. The question settled by the scales is not how much the detective coin lacks of the standard weight; but does it lack in any measure?

This coin-weighing and its results suggest the parable of the rich man, and the decision of Jesus concerning him. This man was so excellent as to the common virtues, that his character awakened the admiration of Christ; and yet when he submitted himself to the penetrating judgment of the Divine Master, he was found wanting, "One thing thou lackest." These words cast the inquiring rich man away from among the number of the saved—they placed him still among the lost. Only one thing wanting; that was all, and yet the otherwise good man is rejected.

So it is with many souls to-day. They cultivate the external duties of religion—practice many of the graces that adorn the Christian character—are esteemed and loved by those that know them; but they are faithless and unbelieving. They have not received Jesus in their hearts. This one thing they lack, and with all their excellency of character they are found wanting. If this discovery is made in time, like the rejected coin, they may yet be recoined—moulded into the image of Jesus, and be approved by the Master; and, thus made meat for his service, they will be received into gory. But if the soul is not put in the scales till it appears before the judgment seat of God, and is there found wanting, its casting away will be irretrievable. There will then be a gathering up of the souls that are lost, but not to bring them under the gracious influences of the Spirit, that they may be formed anew in Christ. The command will then be, "Take these souls and cast them into outer darkness; there will be weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth."

It should be remembered that Jesus has said that he that offendeth in one point is guilty of transgressing the whole law. Despise not small offences against God. He will be honored only by perfect obedience. His law must be obeyed in all its requirements. You may be honest, kind, obliging, charitable, doing your whole duty to your fellow men; but all this will avail you nothing so long as you are found wanting in your love and service of God. You may, in professed obedience to the command of God, "Son give me thy heart," consecrate yourself to his service, unite yourself to his people, engage in active church work; but if this consecration is not entire—if it does not embrace the whole heart, and all your activities and wealth, it will avail you nothing. With all your apparent faithfulness in the divine service, you will be wanting in the sincerity of your faith, and be rejected in the day of judgment. The time is approaching when you will be taken into the weighing room of the universe. Jesus himself will sit in judgment and hold the scales—scales sensitive to the smallest deficiency in faith and character—scales poised by the eternal principles of truth and righteousness. Their decision will be final. On these scales your character, made up of the faith and acts of your whole life, will be laid. According to the movement of the beam of these balances will your destiny be fixed forever. Are you prepared for this test? Is your heart loaded down with the blood of Christ so that it will outweigh all the demands of the law against you? Seek the Lord while he may be found, so that when he sits in judgment upon the record of your life, his endorsement may be written on every page, "Nothing found wanting."

Advent Christian Times.

Wm. Sheldon, - Editor.

All matter for publication in The Times, whether articles, letters, obituaries, or appointments, should be directed to

Wm. Sheldon,
27 McCormick Block, Chicago, Ill.

Give your Name, Postoffice, County and State every time you write.

CHICAGO, Tuesday, December 2, 1873.

We regret to learn by a note from sister Miller, addressed to brother Tucker, that Eld. G. W. Miller is still confined to his bed, and not able to reply to the letters of his friends.

Eld. Philo Hitchcock reports a rising interest in the Arena (Wis.) meetings—his new charge. Intends to spend a part of his time in the surrounding regions. May success crown his efforts.

"Inasmuch as you have done it unto one of the least of these my little ones, ye have done it unto me." We can help Christ in the person of a suffering saint. Such an opportunity is now offered the Wisconsin friends in the case of brother Thomson, of Arena. We trust it will be improved. It is not best to shut up our bowels of compassion in such cases, even if we are in hard times; if we do, "how dwelleth the love of God in us"?

Brother John H. Veck of Mont Cenis, Dickinson county, Kansas, makes a strong appeal for gospel labor in that region, in a letter addressed to Eld. S. B. Mabey. As brother Mabey can not supply the call at present, perhaps some one living nearer may do so. It is a new and destitute field, but it is thought that the chances for sowing the seed of truth there are good. "Pray ye the Lord of the harvest that he will send forth more laborers into his vineyard."

We have just received a work of 92 pp., from the pen of brother S. Hall, Hartford, Ct., entitled, "The Prophetic view of Earthly Kingdoms, and the time of their duration. To be succeeded by the Kingdom of Heaven."

We have not had time yet to finish reading the book, but we are well pleased with what we have read. Brother Hall writes in kindness and candor, and will be read without awakening hostile feelings. He looks for redemption before '75 passes. He is scattering the work widely, having already sent out several thousand copies.

A correspondent informs us that the Methodist church in Wellington, Kan., "held a festival and dance combined, November 12—the results were $108, to be given to the preacher." If John Wesley could hear such news, his soul would be stirred within him, and he would repudiate his professed followers for their deeds. But what does God think when the church thus joins affinity with the world, and feed the minister on the profits of the fun? We are glad this example is not followed by all, and that many in their midst deplore such worldly practices.

It will be seen by the Agent's report printed November 18, that on the 1st of October the Times had forty-five subscribers less than it had one year previously, the list having vacilated somewhat within the limits of the year. We are disappointed that it has fallen off so little, as for certain reasons we had previously estimated its decline at 700. In these panic times it will certainly continue to decline unless its friends make efforts to obtain new subscribers. In a week's time a dozen friends can not only bring the list up to its high water mark, but greatly augment it. Will they enter into this work zealously? Let not the hard times prevent your efforts.

The following statement from the Catholic World is very significant: "The sovereigns of Europe, without a single exception, have abandoned, or turned against the church, and there is not one on whom the Holy Father can count. He is alone, with the kings and princes of the earth either hostile or indifferent to him, while the old habit of relying on the secular authority for support, for the the moment at least, paralyzes nearly the whole body of the Catholics in all old Catholic nations." This looks like the predicted hatred which the horns were to manifest toward the harlot: "And the ten horns which thou sawest upon the beast, these shall hate the whore." (Rev. 17:16.) Powers once friendly to this apostate church have now shown their aversion to it, and left it unprotected.

Shall our List be Reduced ?

We have long been too lenient with many of our subscribers. About a year ago a determination was formed to cut off several hundred delinquents, but finally they were allowed to run along another year. They neither pay, nor write us why they do not pay. The time has come for action. The Business Agent will send notices to a thousand within a few days who have not paid to the close of 1872, and all who are not heard from within a short time will be stricken from the list, as the office can not afford to pay out so much money for paper, with no income on it. Doubtless this act of self-preservation, which has been deferred for a year, will cut our list down about 500 less than it now is, unless there should be a general response, by paying a part, or all that is due. Doubtless many will be cut off who are personally acquainted with us, and will think we ought to know they will pay all their dues in time. On this point it is proper to say the Editor has nothing to do in this department—it is the work of the Agent, and as he is not acquainted with many of you, he can not be blamed for any mistakes of this kind. He can not spend time to find out whether such or such a man is known to be reliable, or not; he will only learn whether he is in arrears to a certain amount, then notify him, then if no response is received within a few days, cut off the name.

Shall we part company with 500 of our old subscribers? You say we are in "hard times." Yes, and does not the office feel it as well as you? Will it not be better for you, for your families, and for the office, to pay up and continue the paper, even if at a sacrifice?

The Sabbath.

Dear Br Sheldon: Please tell me through the Times, if the Sabbath is obligatory, and whereby to establish the fact.

1. Is the Sabbath day really included in the ten commandments as used by Christ in Luke 18:20?

2. In keeping the Sabbath should not all its old features be observed; viz., not to pick up a stick of wood, not to go only a Sabbath day's journey, and not to make a fire on that day, etc?

3. What law of commandments has Paul reference to in Eph. 2:15?

From your brother in Christian hope,

L. C. Kerr.

The Sabbath was obligatory while the law was in force, and no longer. As a schoolmaster it led us to Christ. At the crucifixion the law was nailed to the cross. We are now "under law to Christ," but it is the "law of faith;" the law written "not in tables of stone, but in fleshly tables of the heart," (2 Cor. 3:2) for under the new covenant God says: "I will put my laws in their mind, and write them in their hearts." (Heb. 8:10.) To the questions here propounded we briefly reply:

1. Christ never used the phrase "the commandments" to indicate the ten exclusively, but to include those written in the book of the law as well as those written in the tables of the law; and this is true of Luke 18:20, as will be seen by consulting its parallel, Mat. 19:18, 19, where the very same conversation with Christ is recorded. Here Christ, after saying, "Keep the commandments," goes on to enumerate some of them, quoting both from the book, and the tables: "Honor thy father and thy mother: and thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Now if all contained on the tables of stone is to be enforced through the gospel age simply because Christ quoted a part of it, then all found written in the book of the law should as really be enforced through the gospel age because Christ here quoted a part of that also. The simple fact is, Christ enjoined the observance of the entire law—ceremonies and all—up to the time it expired with him on the cross. He once said: "The Scribes and Pharisees set in Moses' seat: all therefore whatsoever they bid you observe, that observe and do." (Matt. 23:2, 3.) Christ lived under the law, and faithfully observed all its ceremonies till its termination.

2. While God never gave but one day to be observed as the memorial Sabbath—to be kept in memory of the exode from bondage—he never gave but one way to keep it. To say that the directions about the way to keep the day are nullified, while no new directions are given, is a virtual admission that the obligations to keep the day are obsolete; for there is no such thing as keeping a day unless we keep it in a specified way; otherwise how can it be determined whether the day is kept or not? By what rule shall it be determined whether the day is kept or broken? To say we will keep it as we judge best, would be equivolent to not keeping it at all, for one would judge that this way would do, and another would demur. If the old prescriptions are obliterated, and no new ones are given, how can we determine who keeps the day? The decalogue simply tells us it was to be kept holy, to be sanctified, and says nothing more about it—does not give the manner of keeping it. Left to this alone we could not tell how to keep it, and consequently whether we were correctly keeping it; and we might as well not pretend to keep it, as to keep it in a wrong way.

As God has given but one way to keep that day, we must keep it in just that way, and no other, or else we entirely fail to keep it; and an abrogation of the way to keep it, without giving us a new way to keep it, is an abrogation of all obligation, to keep it; for how can we keep it without being told how to keep it?

3. Paul refers to the one law of commandments contained in ordinances—the law as a whole. It all ended at the cross. Some of the principles once written in the book of the law, and never written on the tables of stone, such as, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," are enforced in the gospel age, even though it is admitted that the book of the law expired at the cross; and on the same principle precisely some features of the law written in stone are now enjoined as a component feature of the "law of Christ;" but the seventh day Sabbath is never thus enjoined.

Papacy.

The gradual acquisition of the system of forms and dogmas that now characterize the Papal church, is thus set forth by The Rock, published in London:

"We gladly avail ourselves of the valuable assistance of a German paper (the Coronologische Anzeiger) to refresh our memory and the memories of our readers as to the dates of the introduction of some of the more important Roman Catholic tenets. It seems that people first began to dip their fingers in "holy water" in the year 120. "Penance" first became severe, A. D. 157; "Monks" began to swarm, A. D. 248; 'Latin Mass' first mumbled, A. D. 351; the 'Sacraments' degraded, A. D. 550; the fires of 'Purgatory' lighted, A. D. 600; Mary and the Saints first invoked, A. D. 715; first kissing of the 'Pope's' toe, A. D. 800; thriving trade in the "Canonization of Saints' A. D. 993; much dingling and blessing of bells, A. D. 1000; 'Priestly Celibacy' professed A. D. 1015; 'Indulgences' plentiful, A. D. 1119; 'Dispensation' ditto, A. D. 1200; 'Host' first elevated, A. D. 1204; the whispers of of Auricular Confession first regularly poured in the priest's ear, A. D. 1715; the 'Immaculate Conception,' asserted A. D. 1860; 'Papal Infallibility' ditto, A. D. 1870. At this point, Papal blasphemy reached its climax."

The mystery of iniquity began to work in Paul's day, but the culmination of the apostacy was much later. Paul's "falling away" time is far in the past, and the destruction of the "man of sin" by the return of the true Christ, is an event now almost due.

The same paper thus speaks of the Pope and his assumptions:

"Pio Nono has lately informed the German Emperor that his Majesty and 'every (baptized) human being belongs to the Pope.' It is only common justice to the Pope to say this blasphemous assumption of universal proprietorship in the bodies and souls of men is not now put forth for the first time. It was originally broached by the Greek Patriarch of Constantinople, just at the close of the sixth century, and, strangely enough, was then denounced by the most famous of the Roman Pontiffs—Gregory the Great—who, believing that the end of the world was at hand and waited only for the development of Antichrist, heard with dismay the assertion of a claim which, having been set down as Antichrist's distinguishing mark, seemed to bring that terrible phantasm, and with him the world's still more terrible catastrophe, to the very door. He at once declared before Christendom that whosoever in his elation of spirit called himself universal Bishop was the preparer and precursor of Antichrist; for that the tendency of his assumption, if consented to, was that which was the grand object of Antichrist, viz., to withdraw all members of the Church from its only true head, Jesus Christ, and to attach and connect them instead with himself. If we understand aright the operation of the 'infallibility dogma' all the utterances of all former pontiffs—Gregory the Great included—were thereby made to participate in the precious boon, and thus, on the infallible authority of the greatest of all his infallible predecessors we cannot do otherwise than identify Pio Nono with the long predicted Antichrist. As the poor old man has put the noose about his own neck he must not complain if we Protestants draw it tight."

The true Owner of all the saints will soon come in majesty, and lay claim to them. His voice will be heard in the darkest tomb, and his power will be felt in every realm to reorganize, immortalize and glorify all the slumbering saints.

Pleasing Everybody.

While we would not displease any body for the sake of displeasing them, we, at the same time, cannot deviate from the path of duty to prevent displeasing people. "Speaking the truth in love," is the Apostle's motto. This we are trying to do; but of course we shall directly or indirectly assail somebodi s favorite hobby, and such will be apt to squirm. This we cannot prevent. A certain writer has wisely remarked:

"Do not delude yourself with the idea that you can please everybody. Who ever saw anybody that was worth anything that had nobody to find fault with him? You would have to do evil in many cases to please the evil, indulge the selfish, submit to the tyranical, be a tool for the ambitious, and be careful not to have anything as good as those who desire to have everything superior to their neighbor. If you are a public man, should you be diligent, you must expect to have many secretly dislike you and talk against you, for your success; and if you accomplish little, though many show themselves friendly, it often leaks out that some who appear pleasant to you, do this because they do not fear your rivalry; they may smile upon you outwardly, and yet inwardly entertain contempt for your inefficiency. Always do that which is right, be diligent, do the most you can, paying no regard to fault finders, and you will find as many friends as any sensible man desires."

False Messiahs.

While Christ was on earth he made the following prediction: "There shall arise false Christs and false prophets, and shall show great signs and wonders." (Mat. 24:24.) The following statement is being copied into different papers:

"A female savior and her apostles are creating a prodigious sensation in the southern part of the Russian empire. The Russian papers say that the leaders of these women, whose name is Anastasia Gabacrewicz, claims to have performed a number of miracles, having made the blind see, and the lame walk. A vision first revealed to her that she was the daughter of God, selected to suffer for the redemption of her sex, in the same way as Christ suffered for that of the other. Immediately after this revelation she gave up eating meat and drinking brandy, and prepared herself for her mission. The Holy Ghost then possessed her, and gave her the power to work wonders with a mere word. She pretends to be able to resurrect eve the dead by simply touching them, and so strong is the faith of the intelligent masses in this new prophetess, that the prison to which she was consigned by the authorities, has become a place of pilgrimage for thousands. The sick are brought from distant localities to receive the assistance of the inspired woman, and the keepers receive large bribes for permission to see her. Every day new stories of her extraordinary powers are circulated far and wide."

Whether these are veritable miracles wrought on the principle that Jannes and Jambres operated on in the days of Moses, or whether the people are merely duped by false pretenses matters not. All these false Christs appear too late in the history of the world to fulfill the prophecy. The true Christ was to come at the end of the 69 prophetic weeks. They ended many centuries ago. And yet many from time to time accept these false Messiahs, as Jesus said they would.

Truth is Needed.

Truth in every department is needed. Not merely truth of a doctrinal and practical nature, but prophectic truth. Let it shine out, though it may be disdained by the worldly-wise. God's wisdom unfolds to us a new era but just before us, to be ushered in by the coming King of glory.

The Rev. E. Bickersteth, remarks:

"Every thing in the last few years has shown us, that a deeper tone of divine truth in all who profess to hold that truth, is needed to meet the growing corruption of religion, and the infidelity and lawlessness which casts off all religion. God's own light, as given us in His Word, must be more and more our guide through the darkness and conflicts of these days. We are assured also, that 'when the enemy shall come in like a flood, the Spirit of the Lord shall lift up a standard against him.' We may expect, therefore, fresh truth to shine out from the Sacred Volume. The word of prophecy in general, and especially the hope of the Lord's coming, is as a 'light shining in a dark place.'"

God is Love.

G. E. MERRILL.

The sweeter the truth, the more backward are we to receive and believe it; therefore it must be presented to us again and again. What is unpleasant in the fact that "God is love?" And yet we doubt it, or forget it, or fail to realize it; therefore the gospel presents it to us again and again, and in almost every possible form. Twice over within the compass of a few verses, John tells us in as many words that "God is love." Now, faith in this representation of our God lies at the root of our holiness, happiness, and peace. Just in proportion as we believe that "God is love," and love to us shall we consecrate ourselves to his service, enjoy peace in our conscience, and be happy in his ways. God loves us, and therefore he planned our salvation in the covenant; sent his only begotten Son to put away our sins by the sacrifice of himself; gave the Holy Spirit to teach us our need of Christ, and lead us to him; and has put his blessed word in our hands that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope. God loves us, and therefore chastens us, stripes us, empties us, and will not let us live satisfied without himself. God is love, and only love to us; for all our sins are atoned for, and for us the law is magnified, justice is satisfied, and heaven prepared. Yes, though we are sinners, and deeply feel it, though we are not at all what we wish to be, and deeply deplore it; yet God loves us. —yea, God to us "is love"

A Second Probation not Necessary to Vindicate the Character of our God.

GEO. W. TURNER.

First reason. John says (1:9)—"That was the true light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world."

God, through the all-pervading influence of his Spirit and word, which was with him at the beginning, has and does give a law to every man that comes to the years of accountability, and every man can and will be justly rewarded or condemned in the light of that law which he has had, for sin is the transgression of a law, and "where there is no law there is no transgression," or "sin is not imputed where there is no law."

Second reason. If, in order to make God good, and give every man a fair chance for salvation, it was necessary to give them the same law and knowledge that we enjoy in this dispensation, God being infinite, could and would have done it. But Paul argues (Rom. 2:14) that the Gentiles, although they had not the law of Moses, had a law and would be judged by it "in the day when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ."

Adam was under one law; those that lived before the law of Moses, although transgressing some of the elements in the law of Moses, it was not imputed to them as sin (Rom. 5:13), "for until the law, sin was in the world, but sin is not imputed where there is no law," therefore we conclude that salvation does not depend upon the amount of light that God has been pleased to give, but in improving or obeying what we have. Then taking this view of the subject, infants are made subjects of the saving grace of God, through Jesus Christ, without a future probation; because no condemnation for sin rests upon them. The view that the majority of mankind cannot justly be acquitted or condemned without another probation, reflects on the wisdom of that Being. It is to say that although he has given man about six thousand years' trial upon the earth with the expectation that the great majority should be saved, yet the plan did not work well, and the devil was likely to frustrate the object of the Creator; therefore he concludes to give the great majority another trial. We say this view reflects upon the character of an All-wise Creator.

May these few thoughts lead all God's people to see and believe that our God is good. Love to all that love Jesus, hoping to hear from some abler pen on this subject.

Our Lord's Return.

Christ's birth of the Virgin Mary is not more explicitly and unequivocally asserted, or more certainly attested, than his return again to the earth as literally and truly as he went up out of it. Nor is there a Creed in Christendom, so far as I know, which does not embrace it as an essential part of the Church's faith. "He shall come to judge the quick and the dead," says the Creed which bears the name of the Apostles. "He shall come again with glory," says the Synod of Nice. "We believe that thou shalt come to be our Judge," has been for ages sung in the Te Deum. The great Confession of Augsburg affirms that "Christ shall openly come again to judge them that are found alive, and restore to life those that be dead, according to the Creed of the Apostles." "He ascended into heaven, and there sitteth, until he return to judge all men at the last day," says the Church of England. "We do believe, out of the word of God, that our Lord Jesus Christ shall come again from heaven, and that after a corporal and visible manner, as heretofore he hath ascended, being adorned with great glory and majesty, that he may appear as Judge of quick and dead," says the Confession of Belgia. And with the same unequivocal fullness is this article incorporated in all our hymn books and liturgies, celebrated in our sacred songs, woven into our very prayers, and uttered over the graves of our friends as we consign their bodies to the ground. Indeed it is one of the great mountain-peaks of Christianity—one of the three grand particulars in which its sublimest substance lies. The Incarnation, The Cross, and The Second Coming are the stems upon which everything distinctive in Christianity is suspended, to which its whole doctrinal system is adjusted, and upon which the hopes of the world depend. To strike out either one of these would be to mangle the Scriptures from end to end, to stifle the voice of prophets and apostles, to spoil the noblest of Christian utterances in the days of the Church's greatest purity, and to emasculate religion itself.

If Christianity, then, can teach us any thing, or if the declarations of the Scriptures are at all binding upon us, as we profess to believe that they are, we must accept it as truth, and rely upon it as an infallible verity, that the same Jesus who was born at Bethlehem, crucified on Calvary, and received up into heaven from Mount Olivet is literally and personally to return again to this world, to be seen with our eyes and heard with our ears, as he was seen and heard in the day that he was taken up. If this be not true, there is no truth in language, no inspiration in the Bible, no substance in our faith, no reality in the Christian's hope. The methods of interpretation which can explain away this doctrine, or detach it from the teachings and joyous expectations of the prophets and apostles, must, at the same rate, silence all that we have hitherto heeded as the oracles of God, and leave us in a world of darkness with our only lights suddenly and forever extinguished. I accordingly accept and declare it, as a doctrine that must stand or fall with Christianity itself, that Jesus is literally and personally, and with great power and glory, to return again to this world, once more to tread the localities already hallowed to his Church by his miracles and prayers and tears and blood.—Rev. J. A. Seiss, D. D.

"As Far as to Bethany."

"He led them out as far as to Bethany." Dear friends, let us accompany them on this memorable journey, out along the side street, and through the deep vaulted gate, over the broken, rugged path, along the bare hillside, down to where Kedron ripples over its bed of sand and pebbles, across the brook, nearly dry now, as if in sympathy with the Saviour's ebbing sorrow. Here we are in the funeral valley of Jehoshaphat, and we come hither by that clump of melancholy olives, with trunks of enormous girth, and roots of widely twisted branches that shut out the sky. There are only struggling glimpses of the temple's light through this slumbering valley. It is surely fitting that there should be a strange horror of silence about this spot. Yes; and it is fitting, too, that the Conqueror should pass it on his way to his triumph, for here his fiercest baptism overtook him, and the lightnings of a more than mortal anger scourged his soul. Be still! this is the Garden of Gethsemane. Now climb the footway worn among the rocks, sometimes beneath the forest foliage, sometimes up the sparse hillside. Rest here, for the Saviour did so as he gazed upon the fated and devoted city, and in the tenderness of his roused human soul, over the wickedness of Jerusalem as it lay stretched in its unconsciousness before him.

Let us go along the stony path, through the cornfield which might have furnished the illustrations for the parable of the sower, for the trodden pathway in the midst of it. There are huge blocks of granite, studded with clusters of gay but profitless wild flowers, with only here and there a patch of good ground, like an oasis in the desert. We have climed the ridge, and looking over, just at your feet are the unpretending houses of the village of Bethany. Travelers tell us,—while superstition has been busy, of course, in and about Jerusalem, while controversy wages as to the sites connected with the Saviour's death and burial,—this footway from Jerusalem to Bethany remains indisputable as having been trodden by the Saviour. If at any time you feel quite sure you have trodden in the footsteps of Jesus, it is in the way along which we have just endeavored to lead you, and on which he led his disciples on that memorable morning. "He led them out as far as to Bethany." And was it not right that he should do so? The signification of Bethany, as perhaps many of you will remember, is "the house of sorrow." It is a beautiful illustration, I think, alike of the tenderness and of the completeness of the Saviour's triumph, that on his way to his highest exaltation he should pass by the place of his fiercest agony, and that from the humiliation and the bitterness of the house of weeping, he should go straight up to the house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.

Brethren, if it be allowed—and surely he will not forbid us to illustrate the less by the greater—many a time since then men have passed through Gethsemane, and have attained an elevation of holy triumph, even in the darkened house of sorrow. God has in his mercy so ennobled that which is in itself depressing and contracting, that his discipline for usefulness has been often a discipline of trouble. Those whom he has on many occasions signally owned, he has on many occasions signally tried; and if they have in any sense (I speak it reverently) received gifts from men, they have toiled to get them up new Calvarys of suffering and of shame. Brethren, most of us have been stung to sympathy by another's suffering; most of us have been stung to bravery and submission by our own. I call upon you this morning to adore with me that wondrous grace which sustained our Redeemer through his trial to his triumph, and which, in those for whom he left a pattern, has made sorrows to become elements of strength—has taken thorns not out of the path of life—that were an unworthy way of deliverance—but has done better than that—has taken thorns and has woven them into his people's crown; has made the heart's deepest and bitterest Bethany a straight road to the Savior's highest and wealthiest heaven. "He led them out as far as to Bethany." —Punshon.

Oriental Discoveries.

A Papyrus which was discovered a few months ago in a tomb in Egypt has recently been fully translated by a profound scholar of Heidelberg. He finds it to be an allocution of Rameses III. "to his people and all men on earth," recounting the great deeds done in the days of his father and grandfather. The discovery is a valuable one for biblical students, as the royal writer gives with particular details all the causes which led to the Exodus of the Jews from Egypt. There is apparently no doubt at all as to the authenticity of the MS., which is large, well written, and well preserved.

We learn also that the special explorer sent out to Assyria, by The Daily Telegraph newspaper of London, met with great success. He has found eighty new inscriptions, including histories known and hitherto unknown, of the Assyrian kings. Among his discoveries is a highly important tablet containing a collection of proverbs in two languages, which will aid in farther elucidation of the whole class of inscriptions—Many of the inscriptions have definite dates. The whole matter is of greatest interest to the students of the Bible, who will await with becoming impatience the result of these investigations as they shall be given to them by the scholars who have made archæological research their special study.—S. S. Times.

Marriages.

SEAWRIGHT—LEWIS.—At Williamsburg, Wis., Nov. 6, 1873, Br. David Seawright, and Sr. Frances Lewis.

BURT—LEWIS.—At same time and place, by Eld. G. W. Turner, Br. John Burt, and Sr. Inez Lewis.

Obituary.

PUTNAM.—Died near Seymour, Wayne county, Iowa, Nov. 22, 1873, William Putnam. Aged, 26 years.

He sleeps in Jesus. It was his desire that the writer should preach his funeral discourse. We tried to comfort the remaining sister and friends with the soon coming of Jesus the resurrection. S. K. GIBSON.

CHURCHILL.—Died in Coldbrook, Warren county, Ill., Nov. 24, 1873, Ira Churchill, son of Henry and Myra Churchill. Aged about 16 months.

Words of comfort by the writer. M. McCULLOCH.

BABBITT.—Died near Warsaw, Wayne county, Iowa, Sept. 7, 1873, James L. Babbitt, Aged 20 years.

Also at same place, July 21, 1873, Charles Freeman Babbit. Aged 19 years.

These two brothers died with the bright hope of eternal life in Jesus. Said Freeman, "I shall sleep but a little while." His faith was strong in the Lord. The parents and sister and brother sorrow in hope. Sermon preached by the writer, by request of these two brothers, from 1 Thes. 4:18. S. K. GIBSON.

BETTES.—Died at Warsaw, Iowa, Sept. 18, 1873 Rhoda Bettes, Aged 22 years.

She died in the Lord. Sermon by the writer, at her request, from Ps. 17:15. S. K. GIBSON.

SHELL.—Died at Corydon, Wayne county, Iowa, Sept. 4, 1873, Rosanna Shell, at the ripe age of 79 years and 10 months.

She died in full faith of the soon coming Redeemer, and the resurrection. She chose the writer to preach her funeral discourse. Text: Rev. 21:4, 5

S. K. GIBSON.

Change of Post Office.

Eld. J. J. Smith's post office address is Long Island, Ala.

To Correspondents.

In answer to a correspondent inquiring concerning the Union Furnishing Co., of Chicago upon information received we find such an establishment to be unworthy of confidence.

D. O. Amos—We find no such name on the list; shall we forward the paper?

R. O. Kesler—Fifty cents.

Emely L. Marsh—Your money did not come to hand; will credit however.

Miscellaneous.

AT HOME.

—The difficulty between the U. S. and Spain arising out of the capture of the Virginius and the massacre of her crew, has, it appears from late advices, been settled by ample reparation offered to the government of this country by the government of Spain

—Thanksgiving day, 27th ult., was generally observed throughout the country by the usual religious services and family enjoyments.

—The war fever is showing dangerous symptoms in the United States. The massacres said to have taken place in Cuba are horrible in the extreme, and ought to be looked upon just as similar outrages would be anywhere else, especially when enacted under the name of a Christian government.

—Activity continues at all our navy yards. The monitors and other war vessels are being made ready for active service.

—Port Byron, N. Y., is making paper barrels, which are said to be stronger than those made of wood. The heads are wooden, though paper is soon to be substituted.

—That was a bit of grim humor on the part of a man attending the meeting of the free religionists of New York, who interrupted one of the speakers by requesting President Frothingham to enjoin the speakers using the word God to specify the kind of God referred to, as at a previous meeting so many gods were alluded to he found it difficult to understand.

—The Monthly Report No. 12 of the Bureau of Statistics shows that nearly 460 000 immigrants to the United States arrived during the year ending June 30, 1873.

—There are more than five hundred cases on the United States Supreme Court docket—enough to occupy the attention of the court until next June.

—A new uniform for our entire standing army of 30 000 men is now being made at Frankford Arsenal, Philadelphia.

—Postal cards have proved so popular in this country that during the first five months of their use more than sixty five millions have been issued. When congress authorized the issue it was expected that one hundred millions of these cards would be used the first year.

—The congregation of the Rev. Dr. Thatcher Thayer, of Newport, R. I., in accepting his resignation, are said to have given him a purse of $15 000 and assured to him an annual pension of $1,000 during his life.

—The Chinese government has formed the plan of educating 150 Chinese youths in this country. Sixty have already arrived and are pursuing their studies in Massachusetts and Connecticut, and the remainder will be sent over at the rate of thirty annually. They are picked young between the ages of eleven and fourteen years, and come here accompanied by English-speaking Chinese guardians and tutors.

—The Spanish force in Cuba numbers fifty-four thousand men.

—There are four vessels now in the navy yard, ready for active service, and as many more may soon be fitted out. It is expected that orders will be received at the yard to fit out all the vessels which can be got ready. In this event large numbers of workmen will be employed. The officers at the yards are hoping that the United States will demand the surrender of the captain of the Tornado, and the Governor of Santiago de Cuba.

—A QUEER TREE.—The old horse-chestnut tree on Mrs. Hoadley's homestead, New Haven, bloomed on the south side; last year it bloomed on the north side; and so has alternated from year to year for the last twenty nine years that she has lived upon the premises, except that every seventh year it has blossomed and borne nuts all over. Next year it is due for a full crop. The tree is 115 feet high, and covers a circle of fifty feet in diameter, with leaves and branches reaching to the ground, entirely protecting the circle from the sun and the heaviest fall of rain. As it stands near the ground of the first established mint of the United States, on part of the same lot, it is for its age worthy of notice.

ABROAD.

—A fresh sentence has been pronounced against Archbishop Ledochowski for continuing unlawfully to institute priests. He is condemned to two years' imprisonment, and an additional fine of 540 thalers.

—Some comment has been excited by the fact that her majesty the Queen of England, on a visit to Dundee recently, sat down to the Lord's table in a Presbyterian church. High churchmen, like Bishop Tozer, who attacked the Dean of Canterbury for communicating with Christians of different sects during the Alliance meeting in New York, may not relish the rebuke thus implied from high quarters, but all our beloved Queen's legal subjects will bless her the more for this earnest of Christian liberality.

—The demand for ready-made sermons has become so great in England that they are to be had neatly lithographed, for the small price of two shillings per dozen.

—A papyrus manuscript, found in an Egyptian tomb, has lately been translated by a scholar of Heidelberg. He pronounces it to be an address of Rameses III. to all the nations of the earth, in which the king details minutely all the causes which led to the exodus of the Jews from the land of Egypt.

Volume. The word of prophecy in general, and especially the hope of the Lord's coming, is as a 'light shining in a dark place.'"

God is Love.

G. E. MERRILL.

The sweeter the truth, the more backward are we to receive and believe it; therefore it must be presented to us again and again. What is unpleasant in the fact that "God is love?" And yet we doubt it, or forget it, or fail to realize it; therefore the gospel presents it to us again and again, and in almost every possible form. Twice over within the compass of a few verses, John tells us in as many words that "God is love." Now, faith in this representation of our God lies at the root of our holiness, happiness, and peace. Just in proportion as we believe that "God is love," and love to us shall we consecrate ourselves to his service, enjoy peace in our conscience, and be happy in his ways. God loves us, and therefore he planned our salvation in the covenant; sent his only begotten Son to put away our sins by the sacrifice of himself; gave the Holy Spirit to teach us our need of Christ, and lead us to him; and has put his blessed word in our hands that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope. God loves us, and therefore chastens us, stripes us, empties us, and will not let us live satisfied without himself. God is love, and only love to us; for all our sins are atoned for, and for us the law is magnified, justice is satisfied, and heaven prepared. Yes, though we are sinners, and deeply feel it, though we are not at all what we wish to be, and deeply deplore it; yet God loves us. —yea, God to us "is love."

A Second Probation not Necessary to Vindicate the Character of our God.

GEO. W. TURNER.

First reason. John says (1:9)—"That was the true light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world."

God, through the all-pervading influence of his Spirit and word, which was with him at the beginning, has and does give a law to every man that comes to the years of accountability, and every man can and will be justly rewarded or condemned in the light of that law which he has had, for sin is the transgression of a law, and "where there is no law there is no transgression," or "sin is not imputed where there is no law."

Second reason. If, in order to make God good, and give every man a fair chance for salvation, it was necessary to give them the same law and knowledge that we enjoy in this dispensation, God being infinite, could and would have done it. But Paul argues (Rom. 2: 14) that the Gentiles, although they had not the law of Moses, had a law and would be judged by it "in the day when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ."

Adam was under one law; those that lived before the law of Moses, although transgressing some of the elements in the law of Moses, it was not imputed to them as sin (Rom. 5:13), "for until the law, sin was in the world, but sin is not imputed where there is no law," therefore we conclude that salvation does not depend upon the amount of light that God has been pleased to give, but in improving or obeying what we have. Then taking this view of the subject, infants are made subjects of the saving grace of God, through Jesus Christ, without a future probation; because no condemnation for sin rests upon them. The view that the majority of mankind cannot justly be acquitted or condemned without another probation, reflects on the wisdom of that Being. It is to say that although he has given man about six thousand years' trial upon the earth with the expectation that the great majority should be saved, yet the plan did not work well, and the devil was likely to frustrate the object of the Creator; therefore he concludes to give the great majority another trial. We say this view reflects upon the character of an All-wise Creator.

May these few thoughts lead all God's people to see and believe that our God is good. Love to all that love Jesus, hoping to hear from some abler pen on this subject.

Our Lord's Return.

Christ's birth of the Virgin Mary is not more explicitly and unequivocally asserted, or more certainly attested, than his return again to the earth as literally and truly as he went up out of it. Nor is there a Creed in Christendom, so far as I know, which does not embrace it as an essential part of the Church's faith. "He shall come to judge the quick and the dead," says the Creed which bears the name of the Apostles. "He shall come again with glory," says the Synod of Nice. "We believe that thou shalt come to be our Judge," has been for ages sung in the Te Deum. The great Confession of Augsburg affirms that "Christ shall openly come again to judge them that are found alive, and restore to life those that be dead, according to the Creed of the Apostles." "He ascended into heaven, and there sitteth, until he return to judge all men at the last day," says the Church of England. "We do believe, out of the word of God, that our Lord Jesus Christ shall come again from heaven, and that after a corporal and visible manner, as heretofore he hath ascended, being adorned with great glory and majesty, that he may appear as Judge of quick and dead," says the Confession of Belgia. And with the same unequivocal fullness is this article incorporated in all our hymn books and liturgies, celebrated in our sacred songs, woven into our very prayers, and uttered over the graves of our friends as we consign their bodies to the ground. Indeed it is one of the great mountain-peaks of Christianity—one of the three grand particulars in which its sublimest substance lies. The Incarnation, The Cross, and The Second Coming are the stems upon which everything distinctive in Christianity is suspended, to which its whole doctrinal system is adjusted, and upon which the hopes of the world depend. To strike out either one of these would be to mangle the Scriptures from end to end, to stifle the voice of prophets and apostles, to spoil the noblest of Christian utterances in the days of the Church's greatest purity, and to emasculate religion itself.

If Christianity, then, can teach us any thing, or if the declarations of the Scriptures are at all binding upon us, as we profess to believe that they are, we must accept it as truth, and rely upon it as an infallible verity, that the same Jesus who was born at Bethlehem, crucified on Calvary, and received up into heaven from Mount Olivet is literally and personally to return again to this world, to be seen with our eyes and heard with our ears, as he was seen and heard in the day that he was taken up. If this be not true, there is no truth in language, no inspiration in the Bible, no substance in our faith, no reality in the Christian's hope. The methods of interpretation which can explain away this doctrine, or detach it from the teachings and joyous expectations of the prophets and apostles, must, at the same rate, silence all that we have hitherto heeded as the oracles of God, and leave us in a world of darkness with our only lights suddenly and forever extinguished. I accordingly accept and declare it, as a doctrine that must stand or fall with Christianity itself, that Jesus is literally and personally, and with great power and glory, to return again to this world, once more to tread the localities already hallowed to his Church by his miracles and prayers and tears and blood.—Rev. J. A. Seiss, D. D.

"As Far as to Bethany."

"He led them out as far as to Bethany." Dear friends, let us accompany them on this memorable journey, out along the side street, and through the deep vaulted gate, over the broken, rugged path, along the bare hillside, down to where Kedron ripples over its bed of sand and pebbles, across the brook, nearly dry now, as if in sympathy with the Saviour's ebbing sorrow. Here we are in the funeral valley of Jehoshaphat, and we come hither by that clump of melancholy olives, with trunks of enormous girth, and roots of widely twisted branches that shut out the sky. There are only struggling glimpses of the temple's light through this slumbering valley. It is surely fitting that there should be a strange horror of silence about this spot. Yes; and it is fitting, too, that the Conqueror should pass it on his way to his triumph, for here his fiercest baptism overtook him, and the lightnings of a more than mortal anger scourged his soul. Be still! this is the Garden of Gethsemane. Now climb the footway worn among the rocks, sometimes beneath the forest foliage, sometimes up the sparse hillside. Rest here, for the Saviour did so as he gazed upon the fated and devoted city, and in the tenderness of his roused human soul, over the wickedness of Jerusalem as it lay stretched in its unconsciousness before him.

Let us go along the stony path, through the cornfield which might have furnished the illustrations for the parable of the sower, for the trodden pathway in the midst of it. There are huge blocks of granite, studded with clusters of gay but profitless wild flowers, with only here and there a patch of good ground, like an oasis in the desert. We have climed the ridge, and looking over, just at your feet are the unpretending houses of the village of Bethany. Travelers tell us,—while superstition has been busy, of course, in and about Jerusalem, while controversy wages as to the sites connected with the Saviour's death and burial,—this footway from Jerusalem to Bethany remains indisputable as having been trodden by the Saviour. If at any time you feel quite sure you have trodden in the footsteps of Jesus, it is in the way along which we have just endeavored to lead you, and on which he led his disciples on that memorable morning. "He led them out as far as to Bethany." And was it not right that he should do so? The signification of Bethany, as perhaps many of you will remember, is "the house of sorrow." It is a beautiful illustration, I think, alike of the tenderness and of the completeness of the Saviour's triumph, that on his way to his highest exaltation he should pass by the place of his fiercest agony, and that from the humiliation and the bitterness of the house of weeping, he should go straight up to the house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.

Brethren, if it be allowed—and surely he will not forbid us to illustrate the less by the greater—many a time since then men have passed through Gethsemane, and have attained an elevation of holy triumph, even in the darkened house of sorrow. God has in his mercy so ennobled that which is in itself depressing and contracting, that his discipline for usefulness has been often a discipline of trouble. Those whom he has on many occasions signally owned, he has on many occasions signally tried; and if they have in any sense (I speak it reverently) received gifts from men, they have toiled to get them up new Calvarys of suffering and of shame. Brethren, most of us have been stung to sympathy by another's suffering; most of us have been stung to bravery and submission by our own. I call upon you this morning to adore with me that wondrous grace which sustained our Redeemer through his trial to his triumph, and which, in those for whom he left a pattern, has made sorrows to become elements of strength—has taken thorns not out of the path of life—that were an unworthy way of deliverance—but has done better than that—has taken thorns and has woven them into his people's crown; has made the heart's deepest and bitterest Bethany a straight road to the Savior's highest and wealthiest heaven. "He led them out as far as to Bethany." —Punshon.

Oriental Discoveries.

A Papyrus which was discovered a few months ago in a tomb in Egypt has recently been fully translated by a profound scholar of Heidelberg. He finds it to be an allocution of Rameses III. "to his people and all men on earth," recounting the great deeds done in the days of his father and grandfather. The discovery is a valuable one for biblical students, as the royal writer gives with particular details all the causes which led to the Exodus of the Jews from Egypt. There is apparently no doubt at all as to the authenticity of the MS., which is large, well written, and well preserved.

We learn also that the special explorer sent out to Assyria, by The Daily Telegraph newspaper of London, met with great success. He has found eighty new inscriptions, including histories known and hitherto unknown, of the Assyrian kings. Among his discoveries is a highly important tablet containing a collection of proverbs in two languages, which will aid in farther elucidation of the whole class of inscriptions—Many of the inscriptions have definite dates. The whole matter is of greatest interest to the students of the Bible, who will await with becoming impatience the result of these investigations as they shall be given to them by the scholars who have made archæological research their special study.—S. S. Times.

Marriages.

SEAWRIGHT—LEWIS.—At Williamsburg, Wis., Nov. 5, 1873, Br. David Seawright, and Sr. Frances Lewis.

BURT—LEWIS.—At same time and place, by Eld. G. W. Turner, Br. John Burt, and Sr. Inez Lewis.

Obituary.

PUTNAM.—Died near Seymour, Wayne county, Iowa, Nov. 22, 1873, William Putnam. Aged. 26 years.

He sleeps in Jesus. It was his desire that the writer should preach his funeral discourse. We tried to comfort the remaining sister and friends with the soon coming of Jesus the resurrection. S. K. GIBSON.

CHURCHILL.—Died in Coldbrook, Warren county, Ill., Nov. 24, 1873, Ira [illegible] Churchill, son of Henry and Myra Churchill. Aged [illegible] months.

Words of comfort by the writer. M. MCCULLOCH.

BABBITT.—Died near Warsaw, Wayne county, Iowa, Sept. 7, 1873, James L. Babbitt, Aged 20 years.

Also at same place, July 21, 1873, Charles Freeman Babbit. Aged 19 years.

These two brothers died with the bright hope of eternal life in Jesus. Said Freeman, "I shall sleep but a little while." His faith was strong in the Lord. The parents and sister and brother sorrow in hope. Sermon preached by the writer, by request of these two brothers, from 1 Thes. 4: 18. S. K. GIBSON.

BETTES.—Died at Warsaw, Iowa, Sept. 12, 1873 Rhoda Bettes. Aged 22 years.

She died in the Lord. Sermon by the writer, at her request, from Ps. 17: 15. S. K. GIBSON.

SHELL.—Died at Corydon, Wayne county, Iowa, Sept. 4, 1873, Susanna Shell, at the ripe age of 79 years and 10 months.

She died in full faith of the soon coming Redeemer, and the resurrection. She chose the writer to preach her funeral discourse. Text: Rev. 21: 4, 5

S. K. GIBSON.

Change of Post Office.

Eld. J. J. Smith's post office address is Long Island, Ala.

To Correspondents.

In answer to a correspondent inquiring concerning the Union Furnishing Co., of Chicago upon information received we find such an establishment to be unworthy of confidence.

D. O. Amos—We find no such name on the list; shall we forward the paper?

R. O. Keeler—Fifty cents.

Emely L. Marsh—Your money did not come to hand; will credit however.

Miscellaneous.

AT HOME.

—The difficulty between the U. S. and Spain arising out of the capture of the Virginius and the massacre of her crew, has, it appears from late advices, been settled by ample reparation offered to the government of this country by the government of Spain.

—Thanksgiving day, 27th ult., was generally [illegible] throughout the country by the usual religious services and family enjoyments.

—The war fever is showing dangerous symptoms in the United States. The massacres said to have taken place in Cuba are horrible in the extreme, and ought to be looked upon just as similar outrages would be anywhere else, especially when enacted under the name of a Christian government.

—Activity continues at all our navy yards. The monitors and other war vessels are being made ready for active service.

—Port Byron, N. Y., is making paper barrels, which are said to be stronger than those made of wood. The heads are wooden, though paper is soon to be substituted.

—That was a bit of grim humor on the part of a man attending the meeting of the free religionists of New York, who interrupted one of the speakers by requesting President Frothingham to enjoin the speakers using the word God to specify the kind of God referred to, as at a previous meeting so many gods were alluded to he found it difficult to understand.

—The Monthly Report No. 12 of the Bureau of Statistics shows that nearly 460 000 immigrants to the United States arrived during the year ending June 30, 1873.

—There are more than five hundred cases on the United States Supreme Court docket—enough to occupy the attention of the court until next June.

—A new uniform for our entire standing army of 30 000 men is now being made at Frankford Arsenal, Philadelphia.

—Postal cards have proved so popular in this country that during the first five months of their use more than sixty five millions have been issued. When congress authorized the issue it was expected that one hundred millions of these cards would be used the first year.

—The congregation of the Rev. Dr. Thatcher Thayer, of Newport, R. I., in accepting his resignation, are said to have given him a purse of $15 000 and assured to him an annual pension of $1,000 during his life.

—The Chinese government has formed the plan of educating 150 Chinese youths in this country. Sixty have already arrived and are pursuing their studies in Massachusetts and Connecticut, and the remainder will be sent over at the rate of thirty annually. They are picked young between the ages of eleven and fourteen years, and come here accompanied by English-speaking Chinese guardians and tutors

—The Spanish force in Cuba numbers fifty-four thousand men.

—There are four vessels now in the navy yard, ready for active service, and as many more may soon be fitted out. It is expected that orders will be received at the yard to fit out all the vessels which can be got ready. In this event large numbers of workmen will be employed. The officers at the yards are hoping that the United States will demand the surrender of the captain of the Tornado, and the Governor of Santiago de Cuba.

—A QUEER TREE.—The old horse-chestnut tree on Mrs. Hoadley's homestead, New Haven, bloomed on the south side; last year it bloomed on the north side; and so has alternated from year to year for the last twenty nine years that she has lived upon the premises, except that every seventh year it has blossomed and borne nuts all over. Next year it is due for a full crop. The tree is 115 feet high, and covers a circle of fifty feet in diameter, with leaves and branches reaching to the ground, entirely protecting the circle from the sun and the heaviest fall of rain. As it stands near the ground of the first established mint of the United States, on part of the same lot, it is for its age worthy of notice.

ABROAD.

—A fresh sentence has been pronounced against Archbishop Ledochowski for continuing unlawfully to institute priests. He is condemned to two years' imprisonment, and an additional fine of 540 thalers.

—Some comment has been excited by the fact that her majesty the Queen of England, on a visit to Dundee recently, sat down to the Lord's table in a Presbyterian church High churchmen, like Bishop Tozer, who attacked the Dean of Canterbury for communicating with Christians of different sects during the Alliance meeting in New York, may not relish the rebuke thus implied from high quarters, but all our beloved Queen's legal subjects will bless her the more for this earnest of Christian liberality.

—The demand for ready-made sermons has become so great in England that they are to be had neatly lithographed, for the small price of two shillings per dozen.

—A papyrus manuscript, found in an Egyptian tomb, has lately been translated by a scholar of Heidelberg. He pronounces it to be an address of Rameses III. to all the nations of the earth, in which the king details minutely all the causes which led to the exodus of the Jews from the land of Egypt.

Correspondence.

Report of Q. M.

Met according to appointment, October 31. Found the church at Williamsburg rather low in spirituality, and somewhat discouraged. Eld. Adams and myself preached eight discourses, held one very profitable church and conference meeting, in which the church voted to join the annual conference, and appointed a delegate to attend it.

We united four brothers and sisters in Christ in the holy bonds of matrimony, and left them all feeling a great deal better.

And may our kind heavenly Father bless them all, and help them to realize that we live amid the perils of the last days.

Geo. W. Turner.

Eau Clair, Wis.

Dwelling with and in Fire.

Br. Sheldon:—In The Times of the 4th instant, you reply to certain questions, propounded by brother Hersey, on "dwelling in fire," but seem to have failed to detect a serious error which our brother has fallen into. He has confounded dwelling in fire with dwelling with fire, evidently failing to catch the language, as well as the idea, of the prophet, for Isaiah says: "Who among us shall dwell with devouring fire? who among us shall dwell with everlasting burning?" He does not use the preposition "in" at all in this connection. Now, dwelling with devouring fire is a very different thing from dwelling in it. The latter is an impossibility since such a fire must consume what is placed in it. The interrogatories presuppose a class that will "dwell with the devouring fire" and another that will not; and the prophet tells us who the first class is: "He that walketh righteously and speaketh uprightly....he shall dwell on high [or in high places] his place of defense shall be the munition of rocks," etc. Having been told who shall dwell with the devouring fire, we know who shall not. He that walketh not righteously, etc. In other words, the righteous shall not be affected by "the devouring fire" and "everlasting burnings," but shall dwell undisturbed upon the hights, while the raging element consumes the unrighteous below. Properly understood the language of the prophet testifies most beautifully to our belief that the wicked are to be destroyed.

J. F. Linthicum.

Valligo, Cal.

From Sr. Ruth M. Rowel.

September 27. Took the cars in company with my niece (who returns with me to my western home,) for Farmington where I am to preach on the morrow. Said the sad good byes, so hard to say to loved ones, and especially to the dear orphaned boy we love so much, who rode by our side for a tittle distance, trying to hold back the coming tears from his manly face; precious child, how it made our heart ache to leave him with his little brother among these hills, while with his only sister by our side we journey to our distant home. God of our fathers bless him and keep him from the sin that is in the world.

The morning was bright and glorious, the sun rose radiant and beautiful, and all the grassy lawn wet with the evening dews drank in and reflected its glory, while the deep blue sky arched over us, and the misty fog rolled up the mountain sides. The air was fresh and pure with the early frosts, and every inspiration of it seemed full of life. The iron horse sped us quickly on by old farm houses and fields, attached with their strong barriers so small in comparison to our great western fields that they seemed most like gardens by wondrous piles of large and small rocks, by great massive rocks with moss clinging to their sides, by pastures all sprinkled over with rocks of all sizes, shapes, and dimensions. Ah, how we ached as we looked upon them in their richness to be able to transport at least one, just one, of these grand old rocks, or even one pile of these granite stones to our western home for eyes to gaze upon and enjoy when our memory reverted to the days of our childhood.

> "How dear to my heart are the scenes of my childhood,
> When fond recollection presents them to view;
> The orchard, the meadow, the deep tangled wildwood,
> And every loved spot which my infancy knew."

But we went through farm and forest, and deep tangled wildwood, and by little rivulets rolling over sandy, rocky beds, bordered in the shade of the wildwood by the greenest moss, and shaded by the sweet scented fern intermingled with the various species of the brakes that grow so lavishly in this glorious wilderness.

Reached the Farmington station at eleven, where we found a hack waiting for us, and a hackman at our side telling us he was commissioned by our uncle to take us directly to his home. We were not long in reaching his pleasant home, and greeting the dear ones, and last of all dear old Uncle Ben. God bless him with his grey hairs and silvery beard. Oh! how he did thank our Heavenly Father for this great privilege of meeting this the last child of my mother's family.

September 28. Preached in the Advent Christian chapel in this [illegible] in the morning and afternoon. In complian[illegible] with the earnest request of relatives, and [illegible] the courtesy of the pastor of [illegible] Will Baptist church in this place, [illegible] the people of their church in the even[illegible] their meeting house; and also by the re[illegible] of their people and preacher, on the followi[illegible] Sunday preached for them again; their [illegible] Rev. Mr. Parks, being present [illegible] in the opening exercis[illegible].

The week spent in F[illegible] was a blessed one, visiting from [illegible] among my relatives. I [illegible] erected by my grandfather, and [illegible] my mind upon my mother's [illegible] days, and how when this country was ne[illegible] and places of worship few, this house was not only the pilgrims' home, where the tired preacher could rest and be refreshed, but was used on Sundays and on other occasions as a place of worship.

Here the old preachers and pioneers of the Free Will Baptist denomination, and of the Christian Connection, used to come and preach a full and free salvation, and baptism by immersion, unmoved by the flatteries and frowns of older sects and denominations, or the vile scoffing of rowdies.

Here under such influences my mother's mind was moulded to virtue and truth; here she imbibed an ardent love for the plain teaching of the Word of God and a fearless advocacy of its precious truths among others the personal and visible second coming of Christ to earth.

As I ruminated on how much my people had done, and dared, and suffered for the truth, and true freedom in Christ, prayed I might be worthy to follow in the same true narrow way, and that the God of my fathers might be my God, and the God of my children.

I feel more and more there is so much in standing up fearlessly for Christ.

> "We want no soldiers in our band,
> That will our colors fly;
> We call for valliant hearted men
> That are not afraid to die."

October 6. Turned my face homeward. I had intended remaining longer in the east—there were so many dear ones I desired to visit, besides so many earnest requests to come to different points to preach the Gospel, but letters from my home and friends in the west decided me to return at once to Minnesota, where I felt I was needed.

So tarrying one short day in Rochester, to travel up and down that street I had traveled so oft when a girl, and gaze upon the brick walls of that academy where I was taught scholarly lore, and bend over the grave of my dear aunt Upham who had done so much to mould my character, I then hurried home with railroad speed.

The rain was all around us, but dry and secure in Naham's chariots, we rushed through the falling waters by U. S. fishing pond, where the grand old ocean rolled up its surging billows on old orchard beach, through the old seaport of Portland, through the fine old town of Yarmouth, with sad thoughts tugging at our heart because we could not stop even for one short day at this place, and see and converse with our beloved sister Wellcome. God bless her in her eastern home, and in all her labors of love.

We passed over the splendid bridge that spans the St. Lawrence, which is nearly two miles long, and cost in its construction 7,000,000.

There was no scene which excited me so much as the view of the St. Lawrence river. My view of Niagara going east was excellent, as I gazed upon its grand and sublime rush of water, amid its bars of granite, and still feel that upon my mind is indelibly impressed the grandeur, the beauty and the sublimity of that scene. I had been a passionate lover of old ocean, and its roar, from my girlhood days. To gaze upon its heaving billows after so long a separation caused deep emotions; but the St. Lawrence, the grand old St. Lawrence, with its wealth of blue waters, filled my heart with rapture, yea ecstasy. I was much interested in Montreal, the style of its buildings, the Frenchmen with their two wheeled carts and little ponies that met me at every turn as I wandered into Victoria square with its fine statue and beautiful fountains, etc.

November 9. Worshiped with the church of which I am a member in Winona in our Advent Christian chapel, Eld. Wm. Sweet preaching, Elds. Allen and Ramer present, ministers with whom I have labored in the gospel many years.

How pleasant and precious the greetings of brethren and sisters, and the earnest words of welcome to my western home and its arduous labors.

"Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." (Ps. 1:33.) "It is like the precious ointment upon the head, that ran down upon the beard, even Aaron's beard: that went down to the skirts of his garments; as the dew of Hermon and as the dew that descended upon the mountains of Zion: for there the Lord commanded the blessing, even life forevermore."

From Eld. Geo. Howard, Wis.

Dear Br. Sheldon:—I went to the station Thursday expecting you here, but was disappointed when you did not come. So the next morning I started for Belleville, to attend the quarterly meeting alone. On the way I stopped at Exeter and took brother Fulton along. We arrived at Belleville about sundown, and put up at brother Darling's. He had been sick with a fever for about three weeks and was able to be out to meeting only in the day time.

The attendance all through the meeting was rather small, by reason of the notice not appearing in The Times until the week of the meeting, and a good many of the brethren did not receive their paper until the meeting was over.

We found as a result of the camp meeting, a goodly number have come out on the side of the Lord, and they are not afraid to stand up and confess Jesus before the world.

The preaching brethren present were brethren Graves, Dyson, Button, and myself.

About thirty assembled around the table to commemorate the last supper, eaten by Jesus and the disciples just before he was led away to be crucified; and while we were sad in looking back to that scene, our sadness was not unmixed with joy, for we remembered that he was soon coming again "without a sin-offering unto salvation."

Brother George Button staid with the intention of continuing the meeting during the week if the interest seemed to warrant.

I should be very glad to see you and have a good long talk. I am coming to Chicago in a few days and if I have time will run up to Norwood, and see you all.

From Eld. Geo. Thomson, Arena, Wis.

To the dear brethren and sisters who have enquired about my present condition, I would answer through the paper, that I am no better. Some will no doubt think that because I have undertaken to compile a new hymn book, I must be getting very strong. Not so; those who know me know my ambition to be doing something for the good Master, however little. There are times when I am able to sit up in the bed a few minutes; by a judicious use of those moments and the assistance of my little daughter as copyist, I expect to be able to prepare a selection of hymns and spiritual songs that will cheer and animate the hearts of my dear brethren and sisters in their meetings, while I am praising God on my sick bed. I have received a number of hymns from brethren abroad, for which they will please accept my thanks. Of course it cannot be expected that everything that is good can be inserted, but we shall select the most appropriate and suitable.

I shall be repaid if I can in the least aid and facilitate the true worship of God, and cheer the hearts of his waiting saints.

From Eld. Wm. Roworth, N. Y.

Dear Br. Sheldon:—Enclosed I send you a letter from Rev. W. C. Van Metre, missionary to Rome. A very worthy brother having read it in the Albany Journal, I thought it was so good that it ought to go into all the Second Advent papers. So being in Albany yesterday I got three copies to send to our papers. It did me so much good when I read it I could not but shout glory; and I wanted all our dear brethren and sisters to see it, and have the same blessed feeling. Truly the Lord is giving the old Harlot the second enstalment of her cup. The ten kings have been stripping her, and making her naked, etc., and "she shall be utterly burned with fire, for strong is the Lord God who judgeth her." This I consider the strongest evidence of the near coming of our blessed Lord: to my mind the events which are now taking place are the strongest evidence of his near appreach, and should cause the dear waiting ones to lift up their head and rejoice, knowing that our redemption draweth nigh. The events are what we must now look at. I feel satisfied the definite time of the the Lord's coming is not made known. "Ye know not when the time is," but we can know when it is nigh, even at the door; and this should stimulate us to work and labor for the salvation of souls. The Master says, "Occupy till I come," and Oh, what a work is before us: men and women are perishing all around us: going down to death without any hope of a future life. This is the good news of the gospel; that Christ Jesus came into the world that sinners might have life, a more excellent life than the present: and this is what should be made known east, west, north, and south. Oh, that the the good tidings might fly as on wings of time to the ends of the earth. Amen.

Your brother, looking for the immediate coming of the Just One.

LETTER FROM REV. W. C. VAN METRE.

22 Vicolo D' Alibert.

Rome, 2° October, 1873.

"Whom the gods would destroy they first make mad," is being illustrated by the "Infallible Pio Nono."

Father Grassi—who for thirty six years performed successively the duties of priest, confessor, curate, mitred abbot, lent preacher, and lastly, incumbent of the great basilica Santa Maria Maggiore—has cast down his robes, honor, emoluments, abandoned prospective promotion, and united with the Baptist church under the pastoral care of Rev. Mr. Wall of England.

A few weeks ago, with Mr. Wall, he called to bid his associates farewell. It was a scene not to be forgotten. They knew well that he whom they had so long known, loved and honored, was sincere. As a loving father he told them of the terrible conflict through which he had passed; why he had given up all and chosen his home with a little company of Christians meeting in a tent, and begged them to consider well his reasons. All were deeply moved; and when he arose, they gathered around, embraced and kissed him. Six of his associates have followed him to inquire what is truth. Last week, in one day twelve priests called on Mr. Wall to ask for light. Among them was a D. D., a L. L. D. and a D. P. Another, the Superior of a Convent, who on Sunday sent a priest to Mr. Wall for tracts and Scriptures to distribute among the inmates.

For a few days nothing was heard from "headquarters" concerning the "apostate." But last Sunday the silence was broken. The Vatican had decided to try its strength—revive the inquisition and make an example of Father Grassi! The "Infallible" comforted a delegation of priests with the assurance that the "apostate" would soon be swept away.

Immediately he was summoned before the Inquisition to recant or endure the penalty. He decided at once to appear, not because he acknowledged its authority, but because it gave him an opportunity to declare the truth before these men.

He applied to the government for protection but was advised not to venture, and that if he did go, he must bear the responsibility. Rev. Messrs. Wall and Duni called on the Inquisitor General. He accompanied them but remained outside so as to be out of danger.

During the interview, the General, learning that he was below, secretly sent an officer saying, "Your friends desire you to come in." Not suspecting the snare, he followed—not, as he thought, to where his friends were, but to another part of the Inquisition.

By some means the door was open and Mr. Wall caught a glimpse of him as he passed. The treachery flashed across his mind and he called to him to instantly escape, which he did. Of course "nothing wrong was intended!"

Another interview was appointed for nine o'clock the next morning. Father Grassi assisted by Mr. Wall and a priest who is a prominent professor in a college in Rome, spent nearly the whole night in preparing his vindication.

In the morning, after bowing together and committing all to God, we started for the inquisition. Father Grassi took my arm and as we walked along the "Via del S. Uffizio" (street of the holy office) thinking of our brethren who had preceded us but who never returned, I reminded him of our Saviour's words "Fear not them who kill the body, &c." Matt. 10:28-32, and of the precious encouragement, "Let not your heart, &c." John 14:1,2. Arrangements had been made for friends to stand in the street ready to render assistance if needed. Four of us went in. We were promised permission to be with him but they desired to see him alone a moment first.

He had been advised not to trust himself in their hands, but now came a trial of moral courage such as Nehemiah experienced when he refused to shrink from danger, asking. "Shall such a man as I flee?" and Luther when he said, "I will go to Worms though the devils are as thick as the tiles on the houses." Grassi entered alone and the door was shut. We could only beg God to keep him to "open his mouth boldly" and declare the truth.

Soon loud and earnest talk was heard. Again and again admission was demanded and promised, but not granted. For nearly an hour we waited, then the door opened and our brother was with us again. Taking my hand and pressing it to his heart, he said with deep emotion. "E finito! E finito!" "It is finished! It is finished!"

Significant words! The Vatican had determined to revive the most infernal institution ever devised by diabolical ingenuity, and try its power upon one who had so long been a favorite. This was its first attempt, and I greatly mistake if Grassi's words will not be found applicable to the "Most Holy Roman Universal Inquisition."

He is calm, tender, humble and modest, yet firm and fearless. Not often do we witness such moral heroism. Alone he stood before his inquisitors, declared the truth, entered his protest, denounced their iniquities, defied their power and scorned their anathemas. To give you a more correct idea of the man, I give you a few closing sentences of his defense. Think of him, alone, unprotected and in such a place. Warming up into the holy enthusiasm of Stephen the first Christian Martyr, and turning upon his Inquisitors he said:

"O you Inquisitors, Pontiffs, Cardinals and Prelates: God speaks to you! To what have you brought the true church! She that was so pure, so beautiful, so glorious, you have betrayed, violated, despoiled, wounded and crucified by your doctrines, superstitions and immorality, and sealed her tomb by your basphemous 'Dogma of Infallibility.' Hear what God says to his suffering children. "The God of peace shall bruise Satan under your feet shortly." Do you not tremble at these words? Who but Satan instigated and inflicted the tortures of this place? O could these walls, within which so many have been burned, speak—could this roof but echo back the cries of agony from your innocent victims, and the vaults beneath us reveal the corpses of those who have been buried alive, no other sentence of condemnation would be required.

"But the breath of God has forever extinguished the fires of the Inquisition and swept away your power; therefore, I stand before you to-day and declare these truths, while you dare not touch a hair of my head! Yes, God has begun the work and soon this Tribunal, these walls and instruments will be bruised under our feet and scattered as ashes to the four winds, proclaiming to the world that the "Most Holy Universal Roman Inquisition" is dead. Dead because God has crushed it under the feet of his children.

"O ye obstinate ones hear me! Hear one of your own brothers who has said mass, and confessed, and preached with you. Weep not over me as "dead." I am not dead but among the "living," and stand before you to announce the resurrection of that church which you have tried to drown in blood. Yes, she is rising glorious as the morning light, and ignorance, superstition, heresy and tyranny, flee before her!

"Farewell church of my youth! Farewell companions of my ministry. Alas! alas it has been a ministry of destruction! O if my word has yet any weight with you, I beseech you to open your eyes to the light—to abandon that system of darkness in which you are groping, and accept the true light which Jesus offers to you."

Well may they gnash their teeth upon such a man. Let prayer without ceasing be offered in behalf of this dear brother.

Twice Father Grassi has preached in my Vatican Mission. We shall have preaching there every Sunday night. Mr. Wall has kindly assumed for the present the responsibility of the preaching and Bible School here three nights each week. The other nights will be occupied by my evening schools.

Last night the Bible school was opened. Not less than 80 men and women were present. Each was furnished with a New Testament. To see so many just here by the Vatican and Inquisition with the "open Bible" in their hands reading, asking questions and listening to Father Grassi who five days ago stood before the Inquisitors, was a most impressive illustration of the progress of truth and a sight to the true Christian more interesting than a stroll through the Vatican or even all the Palaces in Rome. While we thank God and take courage "we are admonished to watch and be sober" for sore trials are at hand. The old usurper will not relinquish his spoils and slaves without a struggle. I wish some friend or Sunday school would send me ten pounds for 100 Bibles as I have only the New Testament. The two Day schools, and Sunday school here are rapidly filling up. The "Training school for Christian Workers" numbers 33. My two Day and two Sunday Schools at Frascati are doing better than ever before. Soon the Night school for adults will be reopened there. Just now comes a call from Albano another suburb of Rome 30 minutes by rail from the city.

Seldom have I seen a more promising field. One hundred and twenty pounds or six hundred dollars would meet the entire expenses for one year, of Day, Night, Sunday Schools and preaching, but I have not a penny towards it and therefore can not assume the responsibility.

Five pounds or twenty five dollars will support one of my teachers, Missionaries, Bible-readers and Tract-distributors for one month. Will you be one of twelve to support one for a year or get your Sunday School or congregation to be one of that number? Send it to the Bible and Publication Society 530 Arch street, Philadelphia. Mr. H. M. Leslie, Manager of the "London and South Western Bank," 7 Fenchurch street, London, or to me,

W. C. Van Meter.

A New Spirit Argument.

O. D Gibson.

That old fowl, which is of the brood mentioned in Rev. 18:2, has been setting again upon one of the serpent's spiritualistic eggs, and has brought out one more argument to sustain his first great lie: "Thou shalt not surely die." And although it is hatched by a bird, yet by a close inspection its natural appendage is so apparent, that its parentage cannot easily be hid. It has no wings. It cannot rise from its nest; yet the old bird is so anxious to make it appear that it can, that she tries to lug it around, and point out where its feathers and wings are starting out, but it is only where the slimy scales of its serpentine nature lap one upon another. Thus premising, we come to the "argument" so called, but which all can see is but an unsustained assertion, which, in substance, is this: That in the creation of man in the garden of Eden, there were two creations.

1. That which is mentioned in the first chapter of Genesis, was a spirit man and a spirit woman, which is the real person, the man proper.

2. The account in Gen. 2:7, is another creation, which is the dust man and woman; or the house for the spirit man to be clothed with, or wear, like living in a house, or wearing a coat. And now I will add partly in language of Scripture: Here is wisdom, let him that hath understanding ponder this matter. Here is a wonderful discovery; but it lacks one ingredient, which is always lacking in every argument of the kind, which is proof, Bible proof.

Let us look at the matter a little.

1. If the account in Gen. 2:7 is not a repetition or an enlargement of the account in chapter 1:27, then is Gen. 2:1 not true. Also Ex. 20:11. God did not "finish all the host of heaven and earth" and "all that in them is" "in six days," as he is said to have done; for he makes a "dust man" afterwards.

Again, if Gen. 1:27 is a record of a "spirit man and woman," then did God give spirit men dominion over the earth and all its animals? Then the earth was to be peopled by their progeny, spirit children, for, said God, "Be fruitful and multiply, and replenish the earth." (v. 28) And what is more singular still, is that spirits should live on, or eat vegetables the same as the animals. God said: "To you they 'll be for meat." (v. 29) Surely . spirits must have been more material than those we hear about nowadays, if they could eat herbs, which they were told to do.

We find that the man of the 2d chapter was also to eat of the same so long as he remained out of the ground. (Gen. 2:16; 3:18.) Can immaterial men eat and consume material food, the same as material men?

Again, this theory don't agree with the apostle's arrangement. This makes the spiritual man first, then after that the natural or dust man. But Paul says: "That was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural; and afterwards that which is spiritual." "The first man was of the earth earthy." This theory says the second, or dust man, was of the earth earthy, "but the first was a part of the Lord from heaven." Thus the two conflict.

There used to be a personage in olden time who was said to be wiser than Daniel, but men are arising in these last days who are wiser than Paul, Daniel, or Christ, in their own estimation. They take it upon them to dispute God's word, as the serpent did in Eden. These are mentioned by Paul when he says: "In the last days some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils." "Ye shall not surely die," has been the great hub or center around which he has circled all his grand efforts against God and man. God wishes men to understand they are dying men, but the devil wishes men to think they are not, and will live forever. Where God says, "Ye shall die," he says to m , that must be spiritually understoo f not, it only means your body, the r man; yourself, the inner man, cann e; you are immortal, a part of the D himself. Thus man is puffed up, and thinks he is somebody, and does not see he is like the beasts that perish, unless he is in Christ a new creature. "What is our life? It is a vapor that appeareth for a little moment and then vanisheth away." (Jas. 4:14.) "Nay," say the wise, "It is an eternity of conscious existence, which, when once begun, can never end." "Ye shall not surely die," but be as God, and live as long as He lives, and eternally know good and evil.

Thus one can trace the serpent's trail from Eden down to the present time. His old lie, when in the mouth of a minister, is the old lie still; dress it, and disguise it as much as they may, sugar-coat it all over, and it is the same old lie yet. May God give us eyes to see. "Take heed, let no man deceive you," says Jesus. Amen.

Heart-keeping.

"Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life." As good house-keeping is essential to domestic comfort, so good heart-keeping is essential to healthful and happy piety.

The word of God represents the human heart as a dwelling. The unconverted heart is a habitation of the evil one, with a brood of sinful thoughts and tastes and passions. When Jesus Christ first enters this dwelling-place of the evil one, he finds it fearfully filthy and out of order. The first work of the Divine Spirit is to cleanse the house. Every room must be entered and purified. Into the stately and sumptuous drawing-room where Pride held court, the lowly Saviour enters and expels the occupant. From the walls of Sensuality's chambers many wanton pictures have to be taken down. The deserted and cobwebbed closet of Conscience is entered by the key of truth, and is thrown open to the daylight.

Memory is another apartment of the mind which the Holy Spirit renews for a higher and holier use. Ranged on its shelves he finds stores which were brought in through the five doorways of the senses. Much of this accumulation is but rubbish. Christ does not destroy this faculty; he makes it simply hence-forth a granary of truth,—a sanctified memory of the soul's stateroom. We pity the man with whom this is but an empty garret or a confused lumber-room heaped up with accumulated things, so hopelessly mingled that its owner can never lay hands on what he needs at the moment. With a devout believer the memory is a cabinet of curiosities of God's love. In no apartment does Jesus abide oftener than he does in this; here the alabaster-box of gratitude is broken, and the room is filled with the sweet odor of the ointment.

There is also a chamber of Taste, from whose window the lover of beauty looks out on magnificent landscapes; and at midnight up into the star-studded vaults of heaven. There is a lofty watchtower where holy Vigilance keeps guard to espy the approaches of the enemy. Woe unto the Christian when the sentinel falls asleep on the tower! Over the doorway to this turret the Spirit has written, "Watch unto prayer." "Blessed is he whom the Lord when he cometh shall find watching." From this tower Faith often looks out through the spy-glass of the promises, and catches bright glimpses of the celestial city which lies at the end of the way.

"For glimpses such as these
My willing soul will bear
All that in darkest hours it sees
Of toil and pain and care."

This is Faith's stronghold; here she weapons herself for the daily conflict. Silence in that hour of prayer bespeaks death throughout all the house. When the door is suffered to rust on its hinges, and that chamber is deserted, then the heart-house is soon retaken by Satan, and evil spirits come in and dwell there.

To keep this house with all diligence is the primal duty of every one who bears the name of Christ. How to keep Jesus in the heart, and how to glorify Jesus in the outer life, is the twofold secret of spiritual success and final salvation.—T. L. Cuyler.

The Brain Worry.

Many of us pray to be delivered from sudden death, and do we worry ourselves into it? If we do can we help it? To most of us it is not given to choose our lives, to avoid the rough places, to gently shoulder to one side disagreeable facts. We must climb over the rocks though they hurt us sore, and the difficulties, however they may annoy us, must be met with brain fret and wear until they are conquered, or we have passed them. They are as real, living, annoying as any tangible ache or pain could be; as bruising and irritating as the peas in the shoes of the pilgrims of old. Nervous health is one thing, and moral health, and purely physical health is quite another and different thing. Calm and steady mental work is conducive to long life; but nervous emotion, mental work that is a constant urging, and, at the same time, is an unhanging of the even tenor of the mind, eats away the brain faster than any mental labor, no matter how hard, that is systematic. As men do not really die of heart disease as often as supposed, but of apoplexy, or congestion of the lungs, so they do not die of brain work, but brain worry.

The Infidel's Sheep.

Away among the hills of Northern New England were two infidel neighbors, who had lived to man's estate sinning and blaspheming against God.

One of them heard the gospel message, and hearing, believed unto eternal life. A short time afterward, the converted man went to the house of his infidel neighbor, and said to him:

"I have come to talk with you. I have been converted."

"Yes, I heard that you had been down there and gone forward for prayers," said the skeptic with a sneer; "and I was surprised, for I had thought you were about as sensible a man as there was in town."

"Well," said the Christian, "I have got a duty to do to you, and I want you to stop talking and hear me. I haven't slept much for two nights for thinking of it. I have got four sheep in my flock that belong to you. They came into my field six years ago, and I knew they had your mark on them, but I took them and marked them with my mark; and you inquired all around and could not hear anything of of them. But they are in my field, with the increase of them; and now I want to settle this matter. I have laid awake nights and groaned over it; and I have come to get rid of it. And now I am at your option. I will do just what you say. If it is a few years in State's Prison, I will suffer that. If it is money or property you want, say the word. I have a good farm and money at interest, and you can have all you ask. I want to settle this matter up and get rid of it."

The infidel was amazed. He began to tremble.

"If you have got them sheep you are welcome to them. I don't want nothing of you, if you will only go away; a man that will come to me as you have—something must have got hold of you that I don't understand. You may keep the sheep if you will only go away."

"No" said the Christian, "I must settle this matter up, and pay for the sheep; I shall not be satisfied without. And you must tell me how much."

"Well," said the skeptic, "if you must pay me, you may give me what the sheep were worth when they got into your field, and pay me six per cent. interest on the amount, and go off and let me alone."

The man counted out the value of the sheep and the interest on the amount and laid it down, and then doubled the dose, and went his way, leaving a load on his neighbor's heart almost as heavy as that which he himself had borne.

The full results of that scene are only known to God. One thing is certain; the infidel was seen to frequent the house of prayer, and we may be sure that he afterwards believed that there was some power in the Gospel, and that all Christians were not hypocrites.—The Christian.

Our Young Folks.

Prayer.

Little children, when the evening
Falleth with its quiet shade
Over tree-top, sky and steeple,
Ere your weary heads are laid
On your pillows for repose,
'Neath the Father's mighty care,
Bow the head and bend the knee
Low to him in fervent prayer.

Little children, when the morning
Poureth o'er the eastern hills
Its bright flood of precious sunshine,
Making glad the fields and rills,—
Ere you leave your quiet chambers,
Pause and kneel and humbly pray
To the God who has preserved you
To behold another day.

Little children, when temptation
Cometh with its tyrant power,
Pray to God, dear little children,
In that dark and bitter hour;
He will then disarm the tempter,
Turn from you his poisoned dart,
And with grace and strength triumphant
Make his throne within your heart.

Little children, when stern sorrow
Lays on you its heavy hand,
Veiling all the world in darkness,
Veiling, too, the better land;
Go to Jesus, little children,
He will soothe and he will bless,
Will revive your drooping spirits,
Whisper peace and happiness.

Child's Paper.

A Prayerless Father.

"There was one little circumstance," said a gentleman, in relating his religious feeling on his admission to a Christian church, "that more deeply impressed me with the importance of being a Christian than any other. It was a question asked by my son Henry, a little boy four years old. My wife and myself had taken great pains to teach little Henry verses of Scripture and hymns, and he never went to bed without saying his little prayer, 'Now I lay me down to sleep.' One night, tired and fretful, he refused to do it; and while I was insisting upon it, telling him how wrong it was not to pray, he looked up into my face, and said with childish simplicity, 'Why do you want me to pray, pa? I never saw you pray.' No sermon I had ever heard, no book or tract I had ever read, so impressed me as this rebuke from my child. I determined then, by the help of God, to lead a different life, and henceforth teach my children by example as well as precept."

That father is now a follower of the Lord Jesus, an active member of the church, and his happy family gathers around the domestic altar.

Welsh Boy and His Bible.

"As I was traveling not long since on the mountains of Conway, there passed on the road a little boy with a big book under his arm. I asked him what book he had, but he could not understand me. He was a little Welsh boy, and the book was a Welsh Bible. He passed on out of sight. 'Our party proceeded along the mountain side, and shortly after stopped to sketch. A small voice from a distance above us caught our ear. I said to my friend, a Welsh pastor, 'Climb up those rocks a little and see who it is.' He did so. It was that little boy on the mountain top, praying to the God who made the mountain. His Bible was open before him. He read and prayed; he was asking God to bless the town of Conway, and that on the morrow (it was Saturday afternoon) many sinners might be converted, and that God would bless his servants everywhere, as they preached his word. Oh what a glorious religion, I thought, which can make that little boy a high pries the Almighty! I felt strengthened in my work the next day, and often since that, as I have thought that many such little ones are praying for us."—S. S. Visitor.

A Heroic Boy.

C. C. M.

The Child's World relates that "A gentleman, in passing through a street in New York, heard a child's voice from a basement, crying, 'Help! help!' He ran in, and found a little five-year-old boy holding a bed-blanket around his sister, two years younger, who had caught her clothes on fire, and the little hero had succeeded in putting out the flames. The boy, in answer to the question why he wrapped the bed-blanket around his sister's burning clothes, said his ma had told him that was the best way to put out fire, and as to why he cried 'Help! help!' that he was afraid that he could not do it, and wanted some one to help. He was then asked why he did not leave his sister, and run into the street, and cry for help. He answered with tears in his eyes, 'No I never would have left her. She was my sister. Had she burned up, I would have burned too.'"

That was true brotherly affection, and that boy was a a moral hero.

Bible Questions.---2.

UNCLE SIMEON.

1. Who is called a lion's whelp?

2. To whom did Joshua give Hebron for an inheritance?

3. How many sons had Ziba?

4. How old was Joash when he was crowned king of Judah?

5. What were the names of the sons of Moses?

6. How long did Manasseh reign in Jerusalem?

7. What country was Artaxerxes king of?

8. Who did David say died as a fool?

9. What king made two golden calves for the Israelites to worship?

Books and Tracts.

List of Books, Tracts, etc., kept on sale at the Advent Christian Times office.

RESURRECTION OF THE DEAD IN Christ. (German.)

NATURE AND DESTINY OF MAN; (German.)

RICH MAN AND LAZARUS. (German.)

DESTRUCTION OF THE WICKED (German.)

SOUL OF MAN. (German.)

THE KINGDOM OF CHRIST ON Earth. (German.)

IS MAN IMMORTAL? (German.)

☞ The above seven German tracts are published by L. Reimer, 1006 Chestnut st., Philadelphia, Pa., and can be ordered either of this office or of him.

IMMATERIALISM, by Wm. Sheldon. Post-paid, 5c.

THE PENALTY OF SIN, by O. R. Fassett. Post-Paid, 6c.

*AN ADDRESS TO M. E. CON*ference of Minnesota, by Eld. L. C. Collins. Should have a very wide circulation. Post-paid 7c.

THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL answer to the questions: Is the popular conception of the soul that of Holy Scripture? By Chas. L. Ives, M. D., Professor of the theory and practice of Medicine in Yale College, 1873, 119 Pages. For sale at this Office. Price 25 cents.

END OF THE KING OF THE NORTH, and the Impending Time of Trouble, and the near Coming of Christ. By L. T. Cunningham. Price, 15 cents.

THE JUDGMENT IMPENDING Prophecy and Chronology converging to one grand culmination. By L. T. Cunningham. Price, 15 cts.

THE DESTINY OF MAN, by William Erwin. An excellent treatise by a member of the M. E. denomination that gives the Bible view in a radical style. 313 pp. nicely bound in cloth and gilt, $1,50 post paid.

MODERN SPIRITISM, its origin, character and tendencies, by C. C. Marston 36 pp. in paper $6,00 per hundred; $1.00 per dozen; 12 cts per dozen

*COMPLETE WOKKS OF FLA*vius Josephus; translated by William Whiston. 979 pp. in cloth, post paid $3.00

THE COMING EARTHQUAKE, By D. T. Taylor. 25 Cents.

*CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—Unabridg*ed, $5, by express. Condensed, sufficiently full for ordinary purposes, by mail, $1 75.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE: with engravings, maps, and tables. $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

BIBLE DICTIONARY: by Smith & Barnum. The best abridgment of Smith's larger work. Leather $6. cloth $5. By express.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. $22 by express.

ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORDance. With Greek and English index. $8 by express.

ENGLISH-GREEK LEXICON. By Liddell & Scott. A standard work. $7 50. by express.

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 32mo. 50c.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock, $2 50, Post-paid.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3: 1. By H. L. Hastings. Paper, 30c. Postage, 5c.

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY of God: and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By P. A. Smith. 12c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble, 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man of the earth earthy: the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 7c.

*PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC meet*ings. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 40c. a hundred.

*THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; with a re*view of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabbath By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of Scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added History, Statistics and Tables. Cloth, $2; leather 2 50

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. By Wellcome and Good. 480 pp. $1 25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATTHEW, 24 and 25, 35c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM. 20c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM. 25c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic; Which? 10c. $5 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a dozen, The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one adress, post-paid, for $4 00.

LAST DAY TOKENS: by S. S. Brewer. 25 cts.

FUTURITY; by Wm. Sheldon. 20 cts.

THE INDEX BOOK MARK; 25c a dozen.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. Nothing so good on this topic. Cloth $1. Paper, 50c. 3 copies for $1, post paid.

GOOD TIDINGS; a general view of Advent doctrine. By an Association of Authors. 420 pages. Cloth 65c, Paper 40c. Post paid.

THE NATURE AND DURATION OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT: By Henry Constable, Prebendary of Cork, 25c. Post paid.

THE FAITH OF ST. PAUL; showing have been neither Pharisaic nor Sadducean, b Hebrew. By L. C. Collins. 15c.

*THE STATE OF THE DEAD; a Discus*sion between N. Field, M. D. and T. P. Connolly, Esq. pp. 300. 50c. Post Paid.

THE JUBILEE HARP. $1. $9 a dozen.

HADES AND SHEOL; By L. C. Collins. The best published exposition of the parable of Dives and Lazarus. 15c.

*THE ADVENT MINSTREL; a choice colle*ction of spiritual songs. Flexible cloth, 25c. $2.15 a dozen. Paper, 15c. $1.50 a dozen.

*HYMNS OF THE HARP; Cloth, 75c, Leath*er $1.

HYMNS OF THE MORNING; A new and rich collection. Cloth 50c. Leather, 65c.

PAULS EARNEST EXPECTATION and hope: (Phil. 1: 21: 25.) By O. R. Fassett. 5c.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT: containing the original Greek text of the New Testament with an interlineary word for word English translation and a new emphatic version, pp. Cloth $4; leather back $5., Postage, 16c.

The ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES

IS PUBLISHED BY THE

Western Advent Christian Publishing Society.

Business Office: McCormick Block, corner of Randolph and Dearborn Sts., Room 27.

(Printing Presses located at Norwood Park, Cook Co.)

TERMS: Two Dollars a Year; One Dollar for Six Months; Three Months for Fifty Cents.

The officers of the Society are as follows.

President—DARIUS MATHEWSON. Vice President—L. C. COLLINS. Secretary—FRANK BURR. Auditor SIDNEY C. RAYMOND. Publishing Committee—GEO. HOWARD, E. McCULLOCH, J. M. SNOOK.

A. W. TUCKER, TREASURER & BUSINESS AG'T.

DO NOT FAIL to give your name and address in full and complete every time you write.

REMEMBER that all Drafts, Money Orders, etc., should be made payable to A. W. Tucker.

APPOINTMENTS, NOTICES, etc., must reach us by Thursday night to be in time for the next issue. Please remember this.

☞ Write Appointments, Notices, Communications for THE TIMES and business matters, each on separate pieces of paper.

☞ Do not fail to comply with the above suggestions.

☞ Address articles intended for publication in THE TIMES to Wm. Sheldon, and all business communications to

A. W. TUCKER,
27, McCormick Block,
Chicago, Ill.

Business Department.

Book and Job Work.

We are now prepared to do all kinds of BOOK and JOB PRINTING with despatch, and in a satisfactory manner. Books, Pamphlets, Tracts, Leaflets, Circulars, Envelopes, Letter-Heads, Note-Heads, Bill-Heads, Cards of all kinds, etc., etc. Our friends and the business public will do well to get our figures before ordering work elsewhere. Estimates cheerfully given.

Now Ready.

"The Disembodied State Examined;" with an exposition of "Our Earthly House," and "The Rich Man's Hell." It contains 42 pp., besides the cover, in good, clear type, on good paper. For sale at the TIMES office, ten cents single, $1 per dozen.

"Immortality," by James H. Whitmore, printed in the Swedish language. 238 pp. For sale at this office. Private Cases.

We have just received a quantity of "Hymns of the Morning," with music, neatly bound in cloth or leather with stiff covers. Price, 30 cents cloth, sent by mail or ...

BREAK IN SEWING MACHINE PRICES.—Our readers will be interested to learn that the FLORENCE COMPANY have responded to the general call for lower prices for sewing machines, and will henceforth sell their well-known and superior machines at a reduction of from 30 to 40 per cent. from former prices.

Letters Received.

☞ ALL letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgement is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write again. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

A G Lombard
H Patua
E [illegible]haw
W McCulloch
P Coe
J W Farrow
C A Smith
S L Smith
L T Walker
M H Hubbell
J Robert
W N Lamb
W K Hayes
C Keler
N J Hayes
J W [illegible]ander
M Tritton
I S Bryant
D James
S C Wellcome
J B Irbin
W Vale
C M Gifford
S A Hayden
F S Patterson
D H Day
D C Williams
W Fraser
S B Haley
S A Gibson
R Willett
S J Marsh
G Howard
S Hamilton
J S Wimbish
G W Turner
L A Halbert
L Preston
J M Shaffer
R E Pierce
L Fitz-simmons
O H Lampabel
A Wood
H S Snyder
A R Gibbons
G W Swineford
F Lombard
W Waglil
H W Rable
L R Kenney
M J Stearns
C Holderness
E L Marsh
S H Shields
R G Kessler
P Livingston
B McKenney
S G Mabey
H G McCulloch
E E Merrill
C C Marston
W R Chandler
J B L[illegible]
C F Swett
D O Amos
J C Smith
A Armour
G W Turner
W Crowder
M McCulloch
J D Carey
S S Babcock
E Bosley
G W Turner
C Lockhart
P A Munroe
M Chandler
J S Lawver
R Bishop
J T Ongley
C C Marston
J Hudson
J A Newton
S W Wood
E G Salisbury
J N Williams
J Ball
R J Russell
M Foster
G B Knapp
T Lonch
A D Hearn
M Allen
J F Adair
E W Huson
T A Schilde
J S Lawver
G Watson
V Hunt
G Thomson
W McCulloch
P Hitchcock
P Coe
A F Ricket
J E Miller
L F Cole

Books and Tracts Sent by Mail.

R W Rabie
E N Barrett 2
B F Goodwin
I S Bryant
M Lombard
D Jones
E Cliff
D R Winfield
F M Reel
[illegible] Clemmons
A Smith
[illegible] Morrison
[illegible] Fenton
[illegible] B Field
[illegible] Handle
O D Gibson
R W Wilson 4
S Pope
B D Sloan
W L Himes
J Paton
J S Lawver
W S Doremus
J L Wilcox
J P E Hickman
L R Bowen
W Johnston
E Ruffer
L T Walker
C C Marston
L Dunn
G Wessells
S W Wood
S S Jones
J N S Billingsley
J B Jeffrey
J C Smith
S Whetstone
R Ruch
J Johnson
A Smith
M S Stevens
E K Goff
E C Andrus 2
A Kelley
G W Green
D F Sweetland
N Gregg
D O Black
C R Church
E H Barrett
J Thompson
W H Hubbell
W L Himes

The $4000 Fund.

To Free the Society from Debt.

CASH.

Previously Reported	$671 80

PLEDGES PAID.

Previously Reported	$497 00
W. K. Bates	$ 5 00
J. A. Newton	1 00
E. G. Salisbury	2 00
A. Hayden	1 00
C. W. Smith	10 00
J. Morrison	5 00
M. F. Lombard	10 00
L. R. Kenny	1 00

WESTERN TRACT FUND.

Previously Reported	$89 75
J. Ball	$ 50
T. Lonch	50
G. W. Swineford	1 00
H. W. Rable	50
L. R. Kenny	1 00
J. C. Smith	5 00

Notices.

DISCUSSION.—There will be a public discussion at Ancona, Livingston Co., beginning the second Friday in Dec. 1873, at 2 p. m., holding four days of two sessions each, on the following proposition: "Resolved, That the wicked dead will be raised to life from the state of death in the last day." C. C. Marston, of Elida, Ill., affirms; John Billings, of New Rutland, Ill., denies.

C. C. MARSTON.

VISIT TO IOWA.—To the brethren in Iowa who requested me to visit them and hold meetings, I would say that my arrangements are to spend the month of February and perhaps longer in your State. Those desiring me to stop with them will please write to me at Elida, Winnebago Co., Ill.

C. C. MARSTON.

CONFERENCE MEETINGS.

The next quarterly meeting of the Northern District of Michigan will be held in the Decker S. H. at Millbrook, commencing Friday, Dec 26, and continue over Sunday.

E. B. SCOTT, Sec'y.

The second quarterly meeting of the Southern conference district of Michigan will be held at the Bell S. H., in Woodbridge, Hillsdale Co., Mich., commencing on Thursday eve., Dec. 11, 1873. A general attendance is requested. Come to work. Brethren coming by Railroad will stop at Reading, on the Ft. Wayne, Jackson & Saginaw R. R.

C. FOX Sec'y.

There will be a meeting of the delegates of the Christian and Advent Christian Conferences of the State of Iowa for the purpose of organizing a general Union State Conference, and for the transaction of such business as may come before it, to be holden at Belle Plain, Benton Co., Iowa, commencing Jan 8, 1874, and hold over the following Lord's Day. It is the earnest desire of many that this meeting be represented by every conference in the State. Let there be a general rally, and come with hearts full of love and unity, and then we shall be prepared to labor for the good of the cause, and shall not be ashamed of our work when it is done.

C. C. RAMSAY,
Per order of Committee.

The ninth quarterly conference will be held in the A. C. chapel in DeKalb, commencing Thursday evening, Jan 1, 1874, and continue over Sabbath. Ministers and brethren throughout the district are requested to meet with us, and begin the new year with a reunion of the soldiers of the cross. Come with hearts all aglow with the love of God. Come, for the years are rolling us rapidly on to the judgment of the great day.

H. G McCULLOCH, Sec'y.

The second quarterly meeting in the northern district of the Wisconsin Advent Christian Conference will be held at Gilmanton, Buffalo Co., commencing Jan. 2 (Friday), 1874, evening and over Lord's day.

G. W. TURNER.

The third quarterly meeting in the northern district of the Wisconsin Advent Christian Conference will be held at Menomonee, Dunn Co., commencing Friday eve. Jan. 16, 1874, and continue over Lord's day.

Dear brethren and sisters in the vicinity of these meetings, let us make a little sacrifice to attend these feasts, that we may be strengthened to war a good warfare till Jesus comes. Eld S J. Adams will be with us to assist in preaching the word.

G. W. TURNER.

The second quarterly meeting of the Northwest Kansas Advent Christian Quarterly Conference will be held with the church at West Creek in the school house of District 37, Republic Co., commencing Jan. 2, and continuing over the Sunday following. All the brethren of like precious faith are cordially invited to attend, and will find homes with the friends at West Creek.

E. N. BLISS, President.
J. S. THORP, Sec'y.

There will be teams at the depot, Friday and Saturday, to take those coming on the 2 o'clock train south, and 2 30 train north. WM. BRANCH.

Appointments.

ILLINOIS.

On Wednesday night, Dec. 10, 1873, we will commence a protracted meeting at Equality, Gallatin Co., and continue over Sabbath and on as Br. Ashley may arrange.

F. A. CHILDS,
J. S. LAWVER.

Genoa, every other Sabbath. E. H. BURINGTON.

New Rutland, second and third Sabbaths in December. C. C. MARSTON.

MICHIGAN.

Delling S. S., Almer, 10½ a. m., every two weeks.

Graham S. H., Fairgrove, 10½ a. m., Centre S. H., 5 p. m., Hinson S. H. 8 p. m. every two weeks.

E. H. DURAND.

Porter Centre, Mich., 10½ a. m., and 3 p. m., every four weeks. JAS. FERRISS, Pastor.

Ashland, Lambson S. H., (Sunday, 10:30 a. m.) once in two weeks.

Armstrong S. H., (Sunday, 2:30 p. m.) once in two weeks. E. B. SCOTT.

INDIANA.

Volga Church, Sunday, 10 1-2 a. m., alternately by T. V. Porter and the pastor.

LEMUEL RECORD.

Lavalle, Baraboo, Webster's Prairie, Fisher Valley, every four weeks. Fairfield, once in two weeks. E. P. GRAVES.

WISCONSIN.

Wrightsville, Eau Claire Co. Dec. 7, 1873.
Mendota, LaCrosse Co. Dec. 14, 1873.
Burnam Valley, as Br. Bowis may arrange, Dec. 21, 1873. G. W. TURNER.

Cain S. H., Decatur Co., at 11 a. m., Duble S. H., 3 p. m., first Sunday in each month.

J. F. ADAIR, Pastor.

Thompson's Hall, Delmar, Clinton Co., every two weeks. C. W. PITCHER.

Manchester, first and third Sabbaths of each month, at 11 a. m. and 2:30 p. m.

J. RIDLEY, Pastor.

MINNESOTA.

Monticello, Wright Co., Minn., every Sunday at 10½ a. m. Bally S. H., at Bally Station, near Elk River, at 3 p. m., every two weeks. Otsego Village S. H., Sunday at 3½ p. m., Lilly Pond, Sunday eve., at 7 p. m., and once in two weeks. Big Lake Station, Sunday eve., at 7 o'clock. Covenant meeting last Saturday, before the first Sunday at 2 p. m., in each month, at the Monticello Chapel. S. C. WELLCOME.

Cottage Grove, Atkinson Corners, Sunday, Nov. 30. MRS. H. M. DUDEY.

NEW YORK.

Saratoga Springs; meetings every Sunday in the Lower Town Hall, corner of Broadway and Lake Avenue, at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday School and Bible class directly after morning service. Prayer meeting every Thursday eve., at the residence of the pastors, 213 Broadway, nearly opposite Town Hall. Saratoga Springs, N. Y., prayer meeting every Thursday evening, at the residence of the pastors, Van Dam street, first house east of Broadway. WM. A. and M. L. DURAND, Pastors.

OHIO.

Christian Advent Church, Archbald, Fulton Co. every Sunday at 10 a. m., and 7 p. m. Prayer meeting every Wednesday, at 7 p. m., Reynold's S. H. P. Vos, Elder.

Commercial.

MONETARY.

OFFICE OF THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES,
SATURDAY, November 29, 1873.

The volume of business transacted was no larger the past week than the one preceding; but we note a decided improvement in the general feeling and affairs generally are more encouraging than at any time for the past two months. Confidence is now well restored in the general market, and we expect an increase in the loanable resources of the banks as soon as country wants are all supplied. Money is still close. Yet the banks are accommodating all in their power. No long loans are granted, but for temporary favors the majority of the banks are willing to grant as far as their limited resources will allow. Eastern exchange in better supply. Counter rates nominal. Government bonds somewhat irregular to-day: the market rather favoring buyers, as gold averaged a shade lower. City, county and miscellaneous securities quiet.

The effect of the hard times on this country is becoming quite noticeable in the decline of the trade in fine dress goods. Week before last the value of dress goods imported was $1,009,225, while for the corresponding week of last year we imported similar goods amounting to $1,564,316. During the week named there was withdrawn for market $661,542 worth of these goods, while for the same time last year the goods withdrawn amounted to $2,018,801.

The reduction of the rate of interest by the Bank of England to 8 per cent. instead of 9, is a very significant indication of a better feeling prevailing in financial affairs on the other side of the Atlantic. The danger of a panic in London, was the culminating effect of the panics in Europe and in this country during the last six months.

Although Chicago has just entered upon the regular packing season, the movement of hogs is immense. This cannot fail to make money plenty in the country, and the circulation of currency will soon be in full force again.

The receipts in Chicago from September to November 26, were 1,061,583, against 643,608 last year. About nine-tenths of these have been packed. It is estimated that the payment for hogs during the present season, will reach $36,000,000.

The following are the quotations of Government securities and stocks:

	Buying.	Selling.
U. S. 6's of '81	114⅝	115⅜
" 5-20s of '62	109	109½
" 5-20s of '64	108½	109¼
" 5-20s of '65	110¼	111¼
" 5-20s of '65 Jan. and July	113⅝	114½
" 5-20s of '67 " "	114⅝	115⅛
" 5-20s of '68 " "	114	114½
" 10-40s	107½	108
" 5s, new issue	108¾	109½
Chicago City 7s		95 & int.
Cook County 7s		95 & int.
Sterling Exchange (large drafts)		107½@108½
Gold and Gold Coupons	108⅝	109¼
Gold drafts on New York		109⅜

Gold closed in New York at 109¼@109⅜.

MARKETS.

FLOUR—Less activity than usual was exhibited in this market last week. The supply of choice brands was limited, and prices continued to rule firm, as follows:

Choice winter white extras	$ 8 00	@ 9 25
Fair to good do	6 75	@ 7 50
Low to medium do	5 50	@ 6 50
Red winter extras	5 75	@ 7 00
Fancy western spring extras	5 75	@ 6 00
Choice do	5 50	@ 5 75
Good do	5 00	@ 5 25
Medium to fair do	4 50	@ 4 75
Low and medium do	4 25	@ 4 50
Fancy and well-known Minn		7 00
Good to choice do	5 75	@ 6 50
Good to fancy Minn. (patent)	8 00	@ 12 00
Choice spring superfines	3 50	@ 4 00
Fair to good do	3 00	@ 3 25
Low and common do	2 50	@ 3 00
Rye flour	4 25	@ 4 50
Buckwheat flour	8 50	@ 9 00

WHEAT—The trading in this grain has been moderate. On 'Change, cash, No. 2 sold at 1 07¼ @1.08, closing at 1.07¼. No. 1, 1.08@1.10½. No. 3, 1.04@1.04½. Rejected, 98c.

CORN—Prices ruled weak and lower. Regular No. 2 44¾@45c; strictly fresh No. 2, 45@45½c; rejected, 44c.

OATS—A reasonably large business transacted. Cash No. 2, 33½@34c; rejected, 32½c.

RYE—Was in active demand. No. 2, 71c.

BARLEY—Prices ruled firm and a shade higher. No. 2, quotable, 1.36; 1.38 for fresh; No. 3, 97@1.03; rejected, 82@85c.

BUTTER—Offerings are still in excess of the demand. Choice yellow, 26@32c. Medium to good, 18@24c; inferior, 13@17c.

CHEESE—The shipping was only moderate, yet there was a good local inquiry, and prices were steady. We quote: Ohio factory, 12@13c; Western factory, 12@13c; Western cream cheese, 13@14c; inferior, 8@11c.

BEANS—The supply was moderately large, the receipts of late having been only fair. Prices again ruled firm, as follows: Good navies at $2 50 @2 65; good medium at 2.25@2 30, and common at 1.50@2.20.

BROOM CORN—A rather quiet week was passed in this market. The supply was large, and prices again ruled weak, as follows: No. 1 hurl at 8@8½c. No. 1 stalk braid, 6½@7½c; No. 2 do 5½@6½c; No 3 do 4½@5c; inside green 5@6c; do pale and red tip, 4@5½c.

POTATOES—The receipts and stocks in store were ample, and prices ruled steady, the local and shipping demands being good. Sales were made of 65 bbls. eastern peachblows at $1.75; 300 sacks at 1.05; 230 bbls. badly frozen, at 2.00; 90 bbls. slightly, at 2.25; 150 bu. from store at 1.15; 60 sacks do at 1.12; 300 bu. do Peerless at 1.10.

POULTRY—This market has been overstocked with dressed poultry. The demand was only fair, and sales were made of 2,000lbs. fancy dressed turkeys at 10c; 3,000lbs. good to choice at 8@9c; 1,000lbs. fair at 6@7c; 20 doz. choice large chickens at 3.00; 40 doz. good to choice at 2.00@2.50; 23 doz. poor at 1.00@1.50; 18 doz. good to choice dressed ducks at 3.00@3.50; 21 doz. geese at 7.00@9.00.

SWEET POTATOES—Sales of Southern Illinois range at 3 25@3.50 ℔ bbl.

CIDER—Choice new was offered quite freely, and sold to a fair extent at 4 50@5 00 ℔ bbl.

GAME—Nearly all kinds of game arrived with more than ordinary freedom, and ducks, prairie chickens, venison, quail etc., were in fair demand at easier prices than were current on the previous day. Sales were made of 15 doz. prairie chickens at 3.25@3.50; 21 doz. do at 3 25; 15 doz. quail at 1 50; 6 doz. do at 1 25; 20 doz. mallard ducks at 2.75@3; 12 doz. rabbits at 1.50; 6 carcasses venison at 7@8c. 10 saddles at 12½c.

VEGETABLES—Onions were still quotable at 3.00@3 50 ℔ bbl; carrots at 1 25@1.50 ℔ bbl, turnips at 50@55 ℔ bu. and celery at 45@55c ℔ doz.

HONEY—Choice in the comb sells to a fair extent at 24@25c ℔ lb.

EGGS—The receipts were smaller and under the influence of a good demand for home consumption and shipment, prices ruled a shade firmer than last week, sale of strictly fresh offerings ranging at 23@24c ℔ doz. Pickled eggs were plenty, and sold slowly at 16@1 c.

Advertisements.

$25 A DAY!

on an average, is made with this

WELL AUGER

in good territory. It bores any diameter and depth and ordinary wells at the rate of 150 feet per day. The greatest tool in the world for

PROSPECTING FOR COAL.

The augers are made of cast cast steel and warranted to bore in a ft lime stone, soft sand stone, slate coal and hard pan, and by the use of the door and valve, a perfect cylinder auger is formed, thus making it the only successful well auger in QUICKSAND.

Farm, Township and County rights for sale on reasonable terms.

$100 REWARD

will be paid to any one that will inform us of a business that requires as little capital and pays as well as the well boring business. We invite the doubtful to come to St. Louis and see the auger work, and if it does not work as represented, we will pay their Railroad fare both ways. Send ten cents for Illustrated Catalogue which explains everything. Address WELL AUGER CO., Box 2904, St. Louis, Mo.

VICK'S FLORAL GUIDE 1874.

☞ 200 PAGES, 500 ENGRAVINGS AND COLORED PLATE.

Published QUARTERLY at TWENTY-FIVE CENTS a year. First No. for 1874 just issued. A German edition at same price. Address JAMES VICK, Rochester, N. Y.

Money Made By Canvassing for the most brilliant and attractive Monthly in the World

THE CHICAGO ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL

—embellished with beautiful engravings, and elegantly printed on fine tinted paper. A magnificent HOLIDAY PRESENT for any family. Price, $2.50 per annum. Sample copies 25 cents. Recommends itself to every one—making Canvassing easy. Send for prospectus containing our list of splendid premiums.

The ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL and YOUNG FOLKS' RURAL, with TWO superb CHROMOS, entitled "Morning on the Mississippi," and "Sunset on the Sierras," will be sent to any address for 1874, for $3. Sample copies of both papers, with Chromos, for Canvassing, sent for 60 cents. Give Postoffice, County and State in full, and address

THOMAS G. NEWMAN, Manager,
Room 27, Tribune Building, Chicago.

NEW YEAR, 1874.

We have had prepared an illuminated VISITING CARD, of elegant and chaste design, specially for New Year's, which will be supplied, with your name printed in Gold, put up in a Handsome Card Case. Price

$1.50 for one, $2.25 for two, $3 for three packs

Sent to any address on receipt of the price. All orders must be accompanied with the cash.

Address,

THE NORWOOD PRESS,
27 McCormick Block, Chicago.

SUBSCRIBE FOR THE NEW PAPER

THE NORWOOD PRESS.

A Weekly Journal of Literature, News and Gossip.

TERMS: $1.00 A YEAR.

Address, The Norwood Press, 27 McCormick Block,
CHICAGO, ILL.

"DOMESTIC" PAPER FASHIONS.

Agents Wanted.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE.

DOMESTIC SEWING MACHINE CO., N. Y.

489-134

The Bible Banner.

THIS PAPER IS EDITED BY
ELDS. JOHN COUCH, WILLIAM SHELDON,
A. A. PHELPS.

Published monthly, at $1 a year, with a choice book, or fine lithograph engraving, given to each subscriber. Furnished to subscribers of THE TIMES three months free, or both one year for $2.75 with a book or engraving free. All orders for the Banner and TIMES should be addressed to W. L. HIMES, 21 West Lake St., Chicago, Ill. All orders for sample copies (sent free) or for the Bible Banner ALONE, should be addressed to H. A. KING, 14 Murray St., New York.

AGENTS. Terms Extra. "CYCLOPEDIA of Things Worth Knowing," Or, 25,000 WANTS SUPPLIED. CHROMO FREE. The greatest RECEIPT BOOK of the age. Continental Pub. Co., St. Louis, Mo.

HADES

OR

The Intermediate State of Man,

BY HENRY CONSTABLE, A. M.

Author of The Duration and Nature of Future Punishment. This work consists of twenty-four chapters, 167 pages, at $1.00 per copy, and can be had by addressing A. W. TUCKER, 27 McCormick Block, Chicago, Ill.

A NEW MAP OF PALESTINE.

About FEBRUARY next our NEW MAP OF PALESTINE will be ready for delivery to subscribers.

IT IS 36x54 INCHES,

Finely Engraved, Mounted on Cloth Backs, Rollers, colored and varnished, and will be delivered to subscribers expressage free at

$5.00 A COPY, ON DELIVERY.

A large amount of information concerning the Holy Land, Geographical, Historical, Prophetical, Geological, Botanical &c. is here brought together in a manner easily acceptable and beautiful to the eye at a low price.

Those who desire one should order early, as a limited number can only be struck off at first.

NO MONEY REQUIRED TILL THE MAP IS DELIVERED.

Orders may be sent to A. W. TUCKER, ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES Office, or to

J. F. WILCOX,
FORT ATKINSON, WIS.

DO TRY IT 3 Months for 10 Cents; or with $3 Chromo, for 50 cents; or 6 Months with "Flowers of Paradise," a first-class $3 Chromo, 15 1-2x21 inches, in 16 oil colors, for $1.10. THE NATIONAL AGRICULTURIST is a sixteen page paper of 64 columns, handsomely illustrated in all its departments. One of the best AGRICULTURAL and FAMILY papers published. Only $1.00 per year, or $1.25 with best Bee-Book, or $1 50 with a beautiful CHROMO. THE BEE-KEEPERS' MAGAZINE, a 32 page monthly, same terms or both for $1.75. Send for Sample copies, and LIBERAL TERMS TO AGENTS, FREE. Write now to

H. A. KING & CO. 14 Murray St., New York.

To every New subscriber paying for THE TIMES one year in advance, also to every old subscriber paying ALL ARREARS and one year in advance, we will send a copy of one of the following valuable works:

DEBATE ON

"THE STATE OF THE DEAD,"

Field vs. Connolly, 300 pp.

BIBLE DOCTRINE of the SOUL,

By Prof. Ives, 110 pp.

NATURE AND DURATION OF

"FUTURE PUNISHMENT,"

By H. Constable.

We have a large number of these good works which we want placed in the hands of the reading public, thereby doing good to them, and largely increasing our list of subscribers. We desire that every reader of the TIMES to at once enter earnestly into this good work.

Anyone sending Four New Subscribers With eight dollars, will receive their choice of the above works in addition to the one to each subscriber.

Begin the work at once. Sample copies of the paper sent on application. Address,

A. W. TUCKER.

Chicago & North-Western Railway.

THE ROUTE DIRECT

From CHICAGO to OMAHA,
From CHICAGO to MILWAUKEE,
From CHICAGO to SHEBOYGAN,
From CHICAGO to ST. PAUL.
From CHICAGO to MADISON,
From CHICAGO to GREEN BAY,
From CHICAGO to MARQUETTE,
From CHICAGO to SIOUX CITY,
From CHICAGO to YANKTON, DAK.
From CHICAGO to GENEVA LAKE,
From CHICAGO to FREEPORT,
From CHICAGO to DUBUQUE,

IS VIA THE

Chicago and North-Western RAILWAY.

In Going North, North-West or West

You cannot go amiss if you buy your Tickets Via this Route.

See that Your Tickets Read via

Chicago & N-W. Railway.

This is the Pioneer Route to and from CALIFORNIA and the PACIFIC SLOPE.

Full information in regard to this Route will be cheerfully furnished by all Ticket Agents in the EAST, WEST, NORTH or SOUTH.

Running Through Five States,

This Great Railway Line, made up of nearly Two Thousand Miles of the best Railroad there is in the North-West offers inducements to the traveling public second to none in the country, and superior to any offered by its competitors.

Steel Rail, Shortest and Quickest Route, Westinghouse Safety Air Brakes, Miller's Safety Platform, Pullman Palace Cars.

Speed, Comfort and Safety, are combined, and render this the Great Route for the People.

IT REACHES

North, North-West and West,

And Traverses the Garden Spot of the World.

ILLINOIS, MICHIGAN, IOWA, WISCONSIN, AND MINNESOTA,

ARE ALL TRIBUTARY TO THIS LINE.

Chicago Ticket Offices:

Corner LaSalle and Randolph Street.
Corner Canal and Madison Streets.
Kinzie Street Depot, cor. West Kinzie and Canal Streets.
Wells Street Depot, cor. Wells and North Water Streets.

W. H. STENNETT, Gen'l Passenger Agent.
MARVIN HUGHITT, Gen'l Superintendent.

The ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES

IS PUBLISHED BY THE

Western Advent Christian Publishing Society.

Business Office: McCormick Block, corner of Randolph and Dearborn Sts., Room 27.

(Printing Presses located at Norwood Park, Cook Co.)

TERMS: Two Dollars a Year; One Dollar for Six Months; Three Months for Fifty Cents.

The officers of the Society are as follows.

President—DARIUS MATHEWSON. Vice President—L. C. COLLINS. Secretary—FRANK BURR. Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND. Publishing Committee—GEO. HOWARD, E. McCULLOCH, J. M. SNOOK.

A. W. TUCKER, TREASURER & BUSINESS AG'T.

DO NOT FAIL to give your name and address in full and complete every time you write.

REMEMBER that all Drafts, Money Orders, etc., should be made payable to A. W. Tucker.

APPOINTMENTS, NOTICES, etc., must reach us by Thursday night to be in time for the next issue. Please remember this.

☞ Write appointments, Notices, Communications for THE TIMES and business matters, each on separate pieces of paper.

☞ Do not fail to comply with the above suggestions.

☞ Address articles intended for publication in THE TIMES to Wm. Sheldon, and all business communications to

A. W. TUCKER,
27, McCormick Block,
Chicago, Ill.

Business Department.

Book and Job Work.

We are now prepared to do all kinds of BOOK and JOB PRINTING with despatch, and in a satisfactory manner. Books, Pamphlets, Tracts, Leaflets, Circulars, Envelopes, Letter-Heads, Note-Heads, Bill-Heads, Cards of all kinds, etc., etc. Our friends and the business public will do well to get our figures before ordering work elsewhere. Estimates cheerfully given.

Now Ready.

"The Disembodied State Examined;" with an exposition of "Our Earthly House," and "The Rich Man and Lazarus." It contains 42 pp., besides the cover, in good, clear type, on good paper. For sale at the TIMES office, ten cents single, $1 per dozen.

"Immortality," by James H. Whitmore, printed in the Swedish language. 108 pp. For sale at this office. Price 30 Cents.

We have just received a quantity of "Hymns of the Morning," with music, neatly bound in cloth or leather with stiff covers. Price, 30 cents cloth, sent by mail or [illegible]

BREAK IN SEWING MACHINE PRICES.—Our readers will be interested to learn that the FLORENCE COMPANY have responded to the general call for lower prices for sewing machines, and will henceforth sell their well-known and superior machines at a reduction of from 30 to 40 per cent. from former prices.

Letters Received.

☞ ALL letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgement is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

A G Lombard
B Patten
E Chase
W McCulloch
P Vos
J W Farrow
C W Smith
S L Smith
L T Walker
M H Hubbell
J Hovett
W N Lamb
W K Faves
C Kider
N J Haves
J W [illegible]uder
M Tritton
I S Bryant
D Jones
S P Wellcome
J B Iddin
W Vain
C W Gifford
S A Havden
F S Patterson
D H Day
D C Williams
W Fraser
S B Mabey
S Z Gibson
E Willett
S J Marsh
G Howard
S Hamilton
J S Wimbish
G W Turner

L A Halbert
L Preston
J M S[illegible]ffer
R E Pierce
L Fitzimmons
O H Lorenabel
A Wood
H S Snyder
A R Gibbon
G W Swineford
F Lombard
W Wright
H W Ruble
L R Kenney
M J Stearns
C Holderness
S L Martin
S H Shields
R G Keester
P Livingston
B McKenney
S G Wabay
H G Mecalloch
E E Verrill
C C Marston
W R Chandler
J B I[illegible]ffe
C P Sweet
D O Amos
J C Smith
A Armour
G W Turner
W Cinder
M McCulloch
J D Carey

S S Babcock
E Bailey
G W Turner
C Eckhart
P A Munroe
M Chandler
J S Lawyer
R Bishop
J T Ongley
C C Marston
J Hudson
J A Newton
S W Wood
E G Salisbury
J N Williams
J Ball
R I Russell
M Foster
G F Knapp
T Louch
A D Hearn
M Allen
J F Adair
E W Huson
T A [illegible]ilde
J S Lawyer
G Watson
V Hunt
G Thomson
W McCulloch
P Hitchcock
P [illegible]on
A P Hicket
J E Miller
L F Cole

Books and Tracts Sent by Mail.

B W Ruble
E N Barrett 2
B I Goodwin
I S Bryant
M Lorenabel
D Jones
K Sliff
D H W[illegible]field
P M Beal
[illegible] Clemons
A Smith
[illegible] Morrison
[illegible] Fenton
[illegible] B Field
W S Randle
O D Gibson
R W Wi[illegible]and 4
B Pope

B D Sloan
W L Himes
J Faron
J S Lawyer
W S Doremas
J L Wines
J P E Blemon
L R Bowen
W Johnston
E Ruffer
L T Walker
C P Warston
L Dunn
G Wessells
S W Wood
S S Jones
J N S Billingsley
J B Jeffrey

J [illegible] Smith
S Wheelton
R Rach
J Johnson
A Smith
M S Stevens
E K G[illegible]ff
E C [illegible]ndrus 2
A Kelley
G W Green
D F Sweetland
N Gregon
D O Black
C B Church
E H Barrett
J Thompson
W S Hubbell
W L Himes

The $4000 Fund.

To Free the Society from Debt.

CASH.

Previously Reported	$671 80

PLEDGES PAID.

Previously Reported	$407 00
W. K. Bates	$ 5 00
J. A. Newton	1 00
E. G. Salisbury	2 00
A. Hayden	1 00
C. W. Smith	10 00
J. Morrison	5 00
M. F. Lombard	10 00
L. R. Kenny	1 00

WESTERN TRACT FUND.

Previously Reported	$89 75
J. Ball	$ 50
T. Louch	50
G. W. Swineford	1 00
H. W. Ruble	50
L. R. Kenny	1 00
J. C. Smith	5 00

Notices.

DISCUSSION.—There will be a public discussion at Ancona, Livingston Co., beginning the second Friday in Dec. 1873, at 2 p. m., holding four days of two sessions each, on the following proposition: "Resolved, That the wicked dead will be raised to life from the state of death in the last day." C. C. Marston, of Elida, Ill., affirms; John Billings, of New Rutland, Ill., denies.

C. C. MARSTON.

VISIT TO IOWA.—To the brethren in Iowa who requested me to visit them and hold meetings, I would say that my arrangements are to spend the month of February and perhaps longer in your State. Those desiring me to stop with them will please write to me at Elida, Winnebago Co., Ill. C. C. MARSTON.

CONFERENCE MEETINGS.

The next quarterly meeting of the Northern District of Michigan will be held in the Decker S. H. at Millbrook, commencing Friday, Dec 26, and continue over Sunday.

E. B. SCOTT, Sec'y.

The second quarterly meeting of the Southern conference district of Michigan will be held at the Bell S. H., in Woodbridge, Hillsdale Co., Mich., commencing on Thursday eve., Dec. 11, 1873. A general attendance is requested. Come to work. Brethren coming by Railroad will stop at Reading, on the Ft. Wayne, Jackson & Saginaw R. R. C. FOX Sec'y.

There will be a meeting of the delegates of the Christian and Advent Christian Conferences of the State of Iowa for the purpose of organizing a general Union State Conference, and for the transaction of such business as may come before it, to be holden at Belle Plain, Benton Co. Iowa, commencing Jan 8, 1874, and hold over the following Lord's Day. It is the earnest desire of many that this meeting be represented by every conference in the State. Let there be a general rally, and come with hearts full of love and unity, and then we shall be prepared to labor for the good of the cause, and shall not be ashamed of our work when it is done. C. C. RAMSAY,

Per order of Committee.

The ninth quarterly conference will be held in the A. C. chapel in DeKalb, commencing Thursday evening, Jan 1, 1874, and continue over Sabbath. Ministers and brethren throughout the district are requested to meet with us, and begin the new year with a reunion of the soldiers of the cross. Come with hearts all aglow with the love of God. Come, for the years are rolling us rapidly on to the judgment of the great day.

H. G McCULLOCH, Sec'y.

The second quarterly meeting in the northern district of the Wisconsin Advent Christian Conference will be held at Gilmanton, Buffalo Co., commencing Jan. 2 (Friday), 1874, evening and over Lord's day. G. W. TURNER.

The third quarterly meeting in the northern district of the Wisconsin Advent Christian Conference will be held at Menomonee, Dunn Co., commencing Friday eve. Jan. 16, 1874, and continue over Lord's day.

Dear brethren and sisters in the vicinity of these meetings, let us make a little sacrifice to attend these feasts, that we may be strengthened to war a good warfare till Jesus comes. Eld S J. Adams will be with us to assist in preaching the word. G. W. TURNER.

The second quarterly meeting of the Northwest Kansas Advent Christian Quarterly Conference will be held with the church at West Creek in the school house of District 37, Republic Co., commencing Jan. 2, and continuing over the Sunday following. All the brethren of like precious faith are cordially invited to attend, and will find homes with the friends at West Creek.

E. N. BLISS, President.

J. S. THORP, Sec'y.

There will be teams at the depot, Friday and Saturday, to take those coming on the 2 o'clock train south, and 2 30 train north. WM. BRANCH.

Appointments.

ILLINOIS.

On Wednesday night, Dec. 10, 1873, we will commence a protracted meeting at Equality, Gallatin Co., and continue over Sabbath and on as Br. Ashley may arrange. F. A. CHILDS,
J. S. LAWYER.

Genoa, every other Sabbath. E. H. BURINGTON.

New Rutland, second and third Sabbaths in December. C. C. MARSTON.

MICHIGAN.

Delling S. S., Almer, 10½ a. m. every two weeks.

Graham S. H., Fairgrove, 10½ a. m., Centre S. H., 5 p. m., Hinson S. H. 8 p. m. every two weeks. E. H. DURAND.

Porter Centre, Mich., 10½ a. m., and 3 p. m., every four weeks. JAS. FERRISS, Pastor.

Ashland, Lambson S. H., (Sunday, 10:30 a. m.,) once in two weeks.

Armstrong S. H., (Sunday, 2:30 p. m.,) once in two weeks. E. B. SCOTT.

INDIANA.

Volga Church, Sunday, 10 1-2 a. m., alternately by T. V. Porter and the pastor.

LEMUEL RECORD.

Lavalle, Baraboo, Webster's Prairie, Fisher Valley, every four weeks. Fairfield, once in two weeks. E. P. GRAVES.

WISCONSIN.

Wrightsville, Eau Claire Co. Dec. 7, 1873.
Meadows, LaCrosse Co. Dec. 14, 1873
Burnam Valley, as Br. Bowis may arrange, Dec. 21, 1873. G. W. TURNER.

Cain S. H., Decatur Co., at 11 a. m., Duble S. H., 3 p. m., first Sunday in each month.

J. F. ADAIR, Pastor.

Thompson's Hall, Delmar, Clinton Co., every two weeks. C. W. PITCHER.

Manchester, first and third Sabbaths of each month, at 11 a. m. and 2:30 p. m.

J. RIDLEY, Pastor.

MINNESOTA.

Monticello, Wright Co., Minn., every Sunday at 10½ a. m. Bally S. H., at Bally Station, near Elk River, at 3 p. m., every two weeks. Otsego Village S. H., Sunday at 3½ p. m., Lilly Pond, Sunday eve., at 7 p. m., and once in two weeks. Big Lake Station, Sunday eve., at 7 o'clock. Covenant meeting last Saturday, before the first Sunday at 2 p. m., in each month, at the Monticello Chapel. S. C. WELLCOME.

Cottage Grove, Atkinson Corners, Sunday, Nov. 30. MRS. H. M. DUBEY.

NEW YORK.

Saratoga Springs; meetings every Sunday in the Lower Town Hall, corner of Broadway and Lake Avenue, at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday School and Bible class directly after morning service. Prayer meeting every Thursday eve., at the residence of the pastors, 213 Broadway, nearly opposite Town Hall. Saratoga Springs, N. Y., prayer meeting every Thursday evening, at the residence of the pastors, Van Dam street, first house east of Broadway. WM. A. and M. L. DURAND, Pastors.

OHIO.

Christian Advent Church, Archibald, Fulton Co. every Sunday at 10 a. m., and 7 p. m. Prayer meeting every Wednesday, at 7 p. m., Reynold's S. H. P. VOS, Elder.

Commercial.

MONETARY.

OFFICE OF THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES,
SATURDAY, November 29, 1873.

The volume of business transacted was no larger the past week than the one preceding; but we note a decided improvement in the general feeling and affairs generally are more encouraging than at any time for the past two months. Confidence is now well restored in the general market, and we expect an increase in the loanable resources of the banks as soon as country wants are all supplied. Money is still close. Yet the banks are accommodating all in their power. No long loans are granted, but for temporary favors the majority of the banks are willing to grant as far as their limited resources will allow. Eastern exchange in better supply. Counter rates nominal. Government bonds somewhat irregular today: the market rather favoring buyers, as gold averaged a shade lower. City, county and miscellaneous securities quiet.

The effect of the hard times on this country is becoming quite noticeable in the decline of the trade in fine dress goods. Week before last the value of dress goods imported was $1,009,225, while for the corresponding week of last year we imported similar goods amounting to $1,564,316. During the week named there was withdrawn for market $661,542 worth of these goods, while for the same time last year the goods withdrawn amounted to $2,018,801.

The reduction of the rate of interest by the Bank of England to 8 per cent. instead of 9, is a very significant indication of a better feeling prevailing in financial affairs on the other side of the Atlantic. The danger of a panic in London, was the culminating effect of the panics in Europe and in this country during the last six months.

Although Chicago has just entered upon the regular packing season, the movement of hogs is immense. This cannot fail to make money plenty in the country, and the circulation of currency will soon be in full force again.

The receipts in Chicago from September to November 26, were 1,061,583, against 643,608 last year. About nine-tenths of these have been packed. It is estimated that the payment for hogs during the present season, will reach $36,000,000.

The following are the quotations of Government securities and stocks:

	Buying.	Selling.
U. S. 6's of '81	114¾	115¾
" 5-20s of '62	109	109¾
" 5-20s of '64	108¾	109¾
" 5-20s of '65	110¾	111¾
" 5-20s of '65 Jan. and July	113¾	114¾
" 5-20s of '67 " "	114¾	115¾
" 5-20s of '68 " "	114	114¾
" 10-40s	107¾	108
" 5s, new issue	108¾	109¾
Chicago City 7s		95 & int.
Cook County 7s		95 & int.
Sterling Exchange (large drafts)		107¾@108¾
Gold and Gold Coupons	108¾	109¾
Gold drafts on New York		109¾

Gold closed in New York at 109¼@109¼.

MARKETS.

FLOUR—Less activity than usual was exhibited in this market last week. The supply of choice brands was limited, and prices continued to rule firm, as follows:

Choice winter white extras	$ 8 00	@ 9 25
Fair to good do	6 75	@ 7 50
Low to medium do	5 50	@ 6 50
Red winter extras	5 75	@ 7 00
Fancy western spring extras	5 75	@ 6 00
Choice do	5 50	@ 5 75
Good do	5 00	@ 5 25
Medium to fair do	4 50	@ 4 75
Low and medium do	4 25	@ 4 50
Fancy and well-known Minn		7 00
Good to choice do	5 75	@ 6 50
Good to fancy Minn. (patent)	8 00	@12 00
Choice spring superfines	3 50	@ 4 00
Fair to good do	3 00	@ 3 25
Low and common do	2 50	@ 3 00
Rye flour	4 25	@ 4 50
Buckwheat flour	8 50	@ 9 00

WHEAT—The trading in this grain has been moderate. On 'Change, cash, No. 2 sold at 1 07¾@1.08, closing at 1.07¾. No. 1, 1.08@1.10½. No. 3, 1.04@1.04½. Rejected, 98c.

CORN—Prices ruled weak and lower. Regular No. 2 44½@45c; strictly fresh No. 2, 45@45½c; rejected, 44c.

OATS—A reasonably large business transacted. Cash No. 2, 33½@44c; rejected, 32½c.

RYE—Was in active demand. No 2, 71c.

BARLEY—Prices ruled firm and a shade higher. No. 2, quotable, 1.36; 1.38 for fresh; No. 3, 97@1.03; rejected, 82@85c.

BUTTER—Offerings are still in excess of the demand. Choice yellow, 26@32c. Medium to good, 19@24c; inferior, 13@17c.

CHEESE—The shipping was only moderate, yet there was a good local inquiry, and prices were steady. We quote: Ohio factory, 12@13c; Western factory, 12@13c; Western cream cheese, 13@14c; Inferior, 8@11c.

BEANS—The supply was moderately large, the receipts of late having been only fair. Prices again ruled firm, as follows: Good navies at $2 50 @2 65; good medium at 2.25@2 30, and common at 1.50@2.20.

BROOM CORN—A rather quiet week was passed in this market. The supply was large, and prices again ruled weak, as follows: No. 1 hurl at 8@8½c, No. 1 stalk braid, 6½@7½c; No. 2 do 5½@6½c; No 3 do 4½@5c; inside green 5@6c; do pale and red tip, 4@5½c.

POTATOES—The receipts and stocks in store were ample, and prices ruled steady, the local and shipping demands being good. Sales were made of 65 bbls. eastern peachblows at $1.75; 300 sacks at 1.05; 230 bbls badly frozen, at 2.00; 90 bbls. slightly, at 2.25; 150 bu from store at 1.15; 60 sacks do at 1.12; 300 bu. do Peerless at 1.10.

POULTRY—This market has been overstocked with dressed poultry. The demand was only fair, and sales were made of 2 000lbs. fancy dressed turkeys at 10c; 3 000lbs good to choice at 8@9c; 1,000lbs fair at 6@7c; 20 doz. choice large chickens at 3 00; 40 doz. good to choice at 2 00@2.50; 23 doz. poor at 1.00@1 50; 18 doz good to choice dressed ducks at 3.00@3.50; 21 doz. geese at 7.00@9.00.

SWEET POTATOES—Sales of Southern Illinois range at 3 25@3.50 ₰ bbl.

CIDER—Choice new was offered quite freely, and sold to a fair extent at 4 50@5 00 ₰ bbl.

GAME—Nearly all kinds of game arrived with more than ordinary freedom, and ducks, prairie chickens, venison, quail, etc., were in fair demand at easier prices than were current on the previous day. Sales were made of 15 doz. prairie chickens at 3 25@3.50; 21 doz. do at 3 25; 15 doz quail at 1 50; 6 doz. do at 1 25; 20 doz mallard ducks at 2.75@3; 12 doz. rabbits at 1.50; 6 carcasses venison at 7@8c. 10 saddles at 12½c.

VEGETABLES—Onions were still quotable at 3.00@3.50 ₰ bbl; carrots at 1 25@1.50 ₰ bbl. turnips at 50@55. ₰ bu and celery at 45@55c ₰ doz.

HONEY—Choice in the comb sells to a fair extent at 24@25c ₰ lb.

EGGS—The receipts were smaller and under the influence of a good demand for home consumption and shipment, prices ruled a shade firmer than last week, sale of strictly fresh offerings ranging at 23@24c ₰ doz. Pickled eggs were plenty, and sold slowly at 16@17c.

Advertisements.

$25 A DAY!

on an average, is made with this

WELL AUGER

in good territory. It bores any diameter and depth and ordinary wells at the rate of 150 feet per day. The greatest tool in the world for

PROSPECTING FOR COAL.

The augers are made of cast cast steel and warranted to bore in a ft lime stone, soft sand stone, slate, coal and hard pan, and by the use of the door and valve, a perfect cylinder auger is formed, thus making it the only successful well auger in QUICKSAND.

Farm, Township and County rights for sale on reasonable terms.

$100 REWARD

will be paid to any one that will inform us of a business that requires as little capital and pays as well as the well boring business. We invite the doubtful to come to St. Louis and see the auger work, and if it does not work as represented, we will pay their Railroad fare both ways. Send ten cents for Illustrated Catalogue, which explains everything. Address WELL AUGER CO.,
Box 2804, St. Louis, Mo.

VICK'S
FLORAL GUIDE
1874.

☞ 200 PAGES, 500 ENGRAVINGS AND COLORED PLATES.

Published QUARTERLY at TWENTY-FIVE CENTS a year. First No. for 1874 just issued. A German edition at same price. Address JAMES VICK, Rochester, N. Y.

Money Made By Canvassing for the most brilliant and attractive Monthly in the World!

THE CHICAGO ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL

—embellished with beautiful engravings, and elegantly printed on fine tinted paper. A magnificent HOLIDAY PRESENT for any family. Price, $2.50 per annum. Sample copies 25 cents. Recommends itself to every one—making Canvassing easy. Send for prospectus containing our list of splendid premiums.

The ILLUSTRATED JOURNAL and YOUNG FOLKS' RURAL, with TWO superb CHROMOS, entitled "Morning on the Mississippi," and "Sunset on the Sierras," will be sent to any address for 1874, for $3. Sample copies of both papers, with Chromos, for Canvassing, sent for 50 cents. Give Postoffice, County and State in full, and address

THOMAS G. NEWMAN, Manager,
Room 27, Tribune Building, Chicago.

NEW YEAR, 1874.

We have had prepared an illuminated VISITING CARD, of elegant and chaste design, specially for New Year's, which will be supplied, with your name printed in Gold, put up in a Handsome Card Case. Price

$1.50 for one, $2.25 for two, $3 for three packs

Sent to any address on receipt of the price. All orders must be accompanied with the cash.

Address,
THE NORWOOD PRESS,
27 McCormick Block, Chicago.

SUBSCRIBE FOR THE NEW PAPER

THE NORWOOD PRESS,

A Weekly Journal of Literature, News and Gossip.

TERMS: $1.00 A YEAR.

Address, The Norwood Press, 27 McCormick Block,
CHICAGO, ILL.

"DOMESTIC" PAPER FASHIONS.

Agents Wanted.

SEND FOR CATALOGUE.

DOMESTIC SEWING MACHINE CO., N. Y.

489-131

The Bible Banner.

THIS PAPER IS EDITED BY
ELDS. JOHN COUCH, WILLIAM SHELDON,
A. A. PHELPS.

Published monthly, at $1 a year, with a choice book, or fine lithograph engraving, given to each subscriber. Furnished to subscribers of THE TIMES three months free, or both one year for $2.75 with a book or engraving free. All orders for the Banner and TIMES should be addressed to W. L. HIMES, 31 West Lake St., Chicago, Ill. All orders for sample copies (sent free) or for the Bible Banner ALONE, should be addressed to H. A. KING, 14 Murray St., New York.

AGENTS. Terms Extra. "CYCLOPEDIA of Things Worth Knowing," or, 25,000 WANTS SUPPLIED. CHROMO RECEIPT BOOK FREE. The greatest of the age. Continental Pub. Co., St. Louis, Mo.

HADES

OR

The Intermediate State of Man,

BY HENRY CONSTABLE, A. M.

Author of The Duration and Nature of Future Punishment. This work consists of twenty-four chapters, 167 pages, at $1.00 per copy, and can be had by addressing A. W. TUCKER, 27 MacCormick Block, Chicago, Ill.

A NEW MAP OF PALESTINE.

About FEBRUARY next the NEW MAP OF PALESTINE will be ready for delivery to subscribers.

IT IS 36x54 INCHES.

Finely Engraved, Mounted on Cloth Backs, Rollers, colored and varnished, and will be delivered to subscribers expressage free at

$5.00 A COPY, ON DELIVERY.

A large amount of information concerning the Holy Land, Geographical, Historical, Prophetical, Geological, Botanical, &c. is here thrown together in a manner easily acceptable and beautiful to the eye at a low price.

Those who desire copies should order early, as a limited number can only be struck off at first.

NO MONEY REQUIRED TILL THE MAP IS DELIVERED.

Orders may be sent to A. W. TUCKER, ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES Office, or to

J. F. WILCOX,
FORT ATKINSON, WIS.

DO TRY IT 3 Months for 10 Cents; or with $3 Chromo, for 50 cents; or 6 Months with "Flowers of Paradise," a first-class $3.00 Chromo, 15½x21 inches, in eleven colors, for $1.10. THE NATIONAL AGRICULTURIST is a sixteen page paper of 64 columns, handsomely illustrated in all its departments. One of the best AGRICULTURAL and FAMILY papers published. Only $1.10 per year, or $1.25 with best Bee Book, or $1.50 with a beautiful CHROMO. THE BEE KEEPERS' MAGAZINE, a 32 page monthly, same terms or both for $1.75. Send for Samples, Rates, and LIBERAL TERMS to AGENTS, FREE. Write now to

H. A. KING & CO. 14 Murray St., New York.

To every New subscriber paying for THE TIMES one year in advance, also to every Old subscriber paying ALL ARREARS and one year in advance, we will send a copy of one of the following valuable works:

DEBATE ON
"THE STATE OF THE DEAD,"
Field vs. Connolly, 300 pp.
BIBLE DOCTRINE of the SOUL,
By Prof. Ives, 110 pp.
NATURE AND DURATION OF
"FUTURE PUNISHMENT,"
By H. Constable.

We have a large number of these good works which we want placed in the hands of the reading public, thereby doing good to them, and largely increasing our list of subscribers. We desire that every reader of the TIMES to at once enter earnestly into this good work.

Anyone sending Four New Subscribers With eight dollars, will receive their choice of the above works in addition to the one to each subscriber.

Begin the work at once. Sample copies of the paper sent on application. Address,

A. W. TUCKER.

Chicago & North-Western Railway.

THE ROUTE DIRECT

From CHICAGO to OMAHA,
From CHICAGO to MILWAUKEE,
From CHICAGO to SHEBOYGAN,
From CHICAGO to ST. PAUL.
From CHICAGO to MADISON,
From CHICAGO to GREEN BAY,
From CHICAGO to MARQUETTE,
From CHICAGO to SIOUX CITY,
From CHICAGO to YANKTON, DAK.
From CHICAGO to GENEVA LAKE,
From CHICAGO to FREEPORT,
From CHICAGO to DUBUQUE,

IS VIA THE

Chicago and North-Western RAILWAY.

In Going North, North-West or West
You cannot go amiss if you buy your Tickets Via this Route.

See that Your Tickets Read via
Chicago & N-W. Railway.

This is the Pioneer Route to and from
CALIFORNIA and the PACIFIC SLOPE.

Full information in regard to this Route will be cheerfully furnished by all Ticket Agents in the EAST, WEST, NORTH or SOUTH.

Running Through Five States,

This Great Railway Line, made up of nearly Two Thousand Miles of the best Railroad there is in the North-West offers inducements to the traveling public second to none in the country, and superior to any offered by its competitors.

Steel Rail, Shortest and Quickest Route, Westinghouse Safety Air Brakes, Miller's Safety Platform, Pullman Palace Cars.

Speed, Comfort and Safety, are combined, and render this the Great Route for the People.

IT REACHES
North, North-West and West,
And Traverses the Garden Spot of the World,
ILLINOIS, MICHIGAN, IOWA, WISCONSIN, AND MINNESOTA,
ARE ALL TRIBUTARY TO THIS LINE.

Chicago Ticket Offices:
Corner LaSalle and Randolph Street.
Corner Canal and Madison Streets.
Kinzie Street Depot, cor West Kinzie and Canal Streets.
Wells Street Depot, cor. Wells and North Water Streets.

W. H. STENNETT, MARVIN HUGHITT,
Gen'l Passenger Agent. Gen'l Superintendent.